Slight Change in King's Condition

Bulletin Issued Last Night From the Palace More Satisfactory Than Had Been Anticipated.

(Canadian Press)

LONDON, Dec. 11.—The Associated Press learned at Buckingham Palace just before midnight that there had been a slight change for the better in the condition of the King.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—The King is struggling magnificently against his illness, it was semi-officially said tonight at Buckingham Palace. This was shown by the fact that his exhaustion has not increased while his pulse remains steady. The night bulletin was said to be even more satisfactory than had been anticipated. The Palace informant said, however, that it was not considered altogether reassuring and that deep anxiety persists and must continue.

The quiet day which His Majesty passed enabled his constitution to continue to fight against the general infection in his system, which had weakened him during the past few days.

Sir E. Farragher Buzzard had called again tonight after the evening bulletin was issued and joined his fellow physicians, Sir Stanley Hewitt and Lord Dawson of Penn in further consultation.

The Duke of York and his Duchess had dined tonight with Queen Mary, before he hastened to Victoria station to meet his elder brother and inform him of the condition of their father as they rode to the palace. Princess Mary, only daughter of the King, attended a charity concert tonight, but left at the end of the first part of the programme in order to greet the Prince of Wales at the palace.

Sir William Joynson-Hicks, home secretary at a public dinner tonight said: "I am sure we shall all rejoice even in the slightest additional hope which tonight's bulletin gives us, and that we all join in the prayer, 'God Save the King.'"

The Prince of Wales landed on English soil at 8.44 o'clock this evening and started immediately for London.

BULLETIN, London, Dec. 11.—The King's physicians issued the following bulletin at 8.30 p. m.: "His Majesty had a quiet day. There is no increase in the exhaustion and the pulse remains steady." (Signed) "Hewitt, Dawson."

PRINCE IN LONDON

LONDON, Dec. 11.—The Prince of Wales arrived in London at 10.17 p. m. London time.

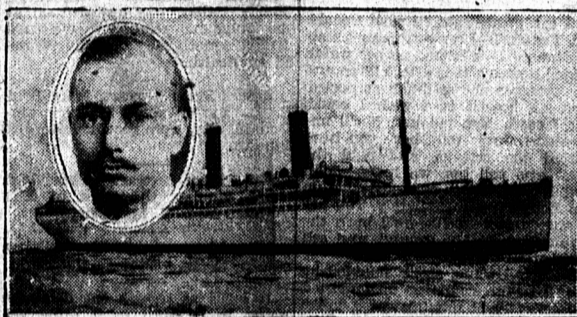

The Duke of York met his royal brother at Victoria station. They immediately entered an automobile and drove away amid loud cheers from the huge throng. The Prince started immediately for Buckingham Palace. Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin had met the Prince at Folkestone and travelled to London with him. The Prince reached Buckingham Palace at 10.25 p. m. (3.25 E. S. T.)

LONDON, Dec. 11.—Deep anxiety over the King's condition prevailed in London today. It was mingled with relief that the Prince of Wales would be at Buckingham Palace by tonight. King George is proud of the quiet, capable young man who will succeed him on the throne, and it is hoped that the Prince's presence will act as a tonic to his father.

Anxiety was caused by the persistence of the King's fever, which indicated that the infection of his

There will be a musical with readings, sale of candy and cake, held in Harrington Hall on Wednesday the 19th at 8 o'clock. If weather not fine will be held Thursday evening. Be on hand for a real enjoyable evening. 9671-12-12-11

LEAGUE APPROVES OF DANDURAND REPORT

(Special to The Guardian)
LUGANO, Switzerland, Dec. 11.—The Council of the League of Nations today gave unanimous approval to a report submitted by Hon. Raoul Dandurand of Canada, expressing regret at the refusal of the United States government to participate in the selection of a central board of control under the Geneva opium control.

The report believes that the convention as early as possible is vital to fulfillment of the responsibilities assumed by the league in connection with the opium traffic. Therefore the council has urged ratification of the convention. The United States communication criticized the Geneva committee.

Foreign Minister Prokopenko of Finland defended investigations of abuses of alcoholism when a report was submitted that the health committee would pursue an inquiry from the health standpoint.

PRINCE ENDSSURVEY WILL LONG JOURNEY BE UNDERTAKEN

Heir to Throne Reaches London After Record Breaking Trip Across Europe From Hunting Grounds in South Africa.

(Canadian Press)
LONDON, Dec. 11.—Arrival of the Prince of Wales in England tonight marked the end of a journey of more than 6,000 miles which was elapsed by a remarkable railroad run from Brindisi, Italy, on the Adriatic to Boulogne on the north coast of France.

Starting with a tiresome crawl across Africa in a train hauled by a small, wood burning locomotive, the trip ended with a 60 mile an hour dash in which "speed and more speed" was the slogan.

Less than two weeks the Prince travelled 6,423 miles, an average of 500 miles a day. He came across two continents and more than 3,000 miles of water, using automobiles, trains and ships.

(Special to The Guardian)
BOULOGNE, France, Dec. 11.—The Prince of Wales, speeding to his father's bedside, arrived here at 6.36 p. m. The Prince arranged to go to Folkestone aboard the British destroyer "Toron." It was stated the Prince was expected to arrive in London between 9.30 and 10 p. m. Capt. Hanson, commander of the destroyer, said that he intended to make Dover in 50 minutes.

The Prince was seen to smile to-day for the first time since he began his arduous trip across Europe to his father's bedside. When his special train arrived at Laon this afternoon a telegram was handed to him by the station master. It was from the royal household, and indicated that those in Buckingham Palace were hopeful that the King would rally after his setback of the last 24 hours.

The Prince smiled happily and despite a drizzling rain, walked along the platform while the engine was primed for its final dash to the seaboard. Until he arrived at Laon, the Prince had been gloomy, shut in his compartment most of the time. Since leaving Brindisi, he had touched almost no food, although the expert chef attached to the train tried to tempt him with quail and other delicacies he appreciated almost in anguish until the telegram reached him.

After reading the telegram, the Prince thanked the official bearer of the news grasping and shaking hands while he repeated in French: "Merci, merci!" The Prince's travelling companions, realizing his desire for seclusion, gathered during the journey in the Italian salon car at the end of the train or grouped themselves quietly in the closed smoking compartment of their own car, allowing the Prince to walk in the corridors undisturbed.

The Prince of Wales showed little concern about his appearance, regarding his customary meticulousness. This morning he appeared in a gray suit, pink sweater and small bow tie. Having smoked instead of dining and because of his disturbed mental state, the Prince slept badly if at all. His companions noted that he was agitated during the night and they encountered him in the corridors in his pyjamas several times, pacing up and down and smoking. The Prince dressed this morning before the train reached Lucerne and took tea. He appeared a little more cheerful although his expression seemed fixed.

(Special to The Guardian)
LONDON, Dec. 11.—The House of Commons last night by a vote of 285 to 95 gave a third reading to the Imperial Telegraphs Bill by which the Pacific, West Indian, and other cables under control of the government would be sold to a new company called the "Communications Company."

Before it was given its second reading by a vote of 238 to 134 by the house, the government had been heatedly attacked by Labor members for what they termed an abuse of trust.

Many More Santa Pals Are Needed

There is a Long List of Poor Children Who Will Be Disappointed on Christmas Morning Unless You Respond.

Instant action is necessary if you wish to have all the homes of the poor visited by Santa on Christmas morning.

You should become a Santa-Pal because it means so little sacrifice on your part and all the difference in the world to the wistful little kiddie who is depending on your action for the kind of a Christmas he will spend. His other wants as expressed in these columns may seem more or less trifling to you, but to those hoping for Santa's visit, it means the difference between a sad, empty Christmas and one that contains as it properly should, something of joy and gladness!
