early in the winter, as the lambs are marketed from time to time in groups as they finish. Still another advantage is that with three or four marketings during the winter the risk of having to sell all lambs on a low market is obviated and as a rule a better average price is obtained.

Lamb Feeding Project Success

The Dominion Lamb Feeding Project under which Western range lambs are brought to Eastern Canada for winter feeding has just completed its third and most successful year, with good returns to both ranchers and feeders. The scheme is made possible through the triple co-operation of the Dominion Department of Agriculture which initiated the system, of the sheep ranchers of Western Canada and of the farmers of Eastern Canada, with particular mention of the Southern Saskatchewan Wool Growers' Association and the farmers of Ontario.

Approximately 30,000 range lambs were fed on Ontario farms last winter, the bulk of the lambs being purchased outright by feeders, but all receiving assistance under either the Feeder Purchase Policy or Lamb Feeding Project. The tendency at the moment, states A. A. MacMillan, of the Field Services, Live Stock Branch, Dominion Department of Agriculture, seems to be diversification in live stock feeding. Many farmers, who fed cattle only, are now feeding both steers and lambs, the farmers being of the opinion that, if cattle markets are not so good, the prices of lambs may be better. On the other hand, if lambs prices are average, cattle prices may be good.

Lamb feeding has a number of advantages which appeal to farmers. Firstly, lambs go into the feed-lot late in October or early in November, and are all marketed before the rush of the spring work on the farm starts again. Also, the returns begin to come to hand

Prepare Bordeaux For Potato Blight

Bordeaux mixture will prevent late blight of potatoes if properly prepared and sprayed upon the plants, beginning when they are about eight inches high and continuing thereafter at intervals of ten days to two weeks. Bordeaux mixture is made by combining solutions of bluestone and milk of lime in dilute proportions, according to the following formula—bluestone (copper sulphate) four pounds; quick lime stone lime four pounds; water 40 gallons. If hydrated lime is substituted for quick lime, it should be left to stand several hours in the form of a thin paste before using. It should be high grade and fresh.

A valuable aid to the preparation of Bordeaux, states R. R. Hurst, pathologist in charge of the Dominion laboratory of plant pathology at Charlottetown, P. E. I., is a platform for the support of the casks containing the lime and bluestone solutions respectively.
