In E. A. Foster's windows on Grafton Street are displays which are attracting the attention of local dealers of Walton. He has two windows filled with fisherman's supplies of every kind, rods, reels, creels, flies, fly books, etc., and his showing, so neatly arranged, is the more drawing by reason of the quality of the goods, many of which are of a variety seldom seen here and all of the very best made obtainable. Mr. Foster is showing a novelty, which will prove a boon to shavers. This is in the form of a circular mirror, glass on both sides, one side being a powerful magnifier and the other an ordinary mirror. Its greatest value, however, lies in its practicability. It can be suspended to a pane of glass by a vacuum grip and can be adjusted to any angle desired. In this way one can get all the benefit of a light from both sides of the glass and the movable and adjustable glass is a convenience which will be greatly appreciated.
