Sharp Advance In Commodity Prices

(C. P. by Guardian's Special Wire) TORONTO, April 28—A sharp advance in commodity prices was the most striking development in business in recent months.

Concentrated in basic commodities the advance during the past nine months jumped prices of Canadian farm products 40 per cent and base metals and their products 44 per cent.

Farmers generally have not been able to avail themselves of the current high wheat prices, the review said, because most of them had disposed of their crop before the sharp advance.

The average price of No. 1 northern soft wheat at Winnipeg during March was $1.36 a bushel—the highest monthly quotation since the end of 1929.

Clean Up Campaign To Begin

Cards for a "clean up—paint up" campaign during Coronation week, have been distributed among public schools in Charlottetown by the School Board, it was learned yesterday.

Pupils have been asked to take the cards home and later return them to the school with information as to what work was done about their home grounds in connection with cleaning up and improvements made.

Mayor P. W. Turner will present a cup to the school with the best percentage of returns and he hoped parents would take a lively interest in the campaign.

Floods Leave Thousands Homeless

(A.P. by Guardian's Special Wire) WHEELING, W. Va., April 28—Flood waters of three states—Ohio, Pennsylvania and West Virginia—rolled down the sluggish Ohio River tonight leaving thousands homeless in their wake.

The river released its grip on the Wheeling Industrial district of approximately 20,000 population as the third day of the flood threat ran its course.

Danger of catastrophic flood damage diminished throughout the north-east United States flood area as the Ohio led the retreat of rain-swollen waterways back to their normal channels.

Municipal cleanup squads and dislodged residents followed with mops and brooms the slow recession of the waters.

Three thousand persons were homeless in Wheeling tonight as the Ohio inched back into its banks.

Many hours still remained before the muddy waters would seep to a safe margin below the flood's crest of 45.9 feet reached early today.

Wheeling undertook its mop-up campaign calmly, thankful that the damage can be reckoned in thousands instead of millions of dollars as was the case in the record flood of 1936 which reached a crest of 55.5 feet.

Normal conditions returned to the historical "flood city" of Johnstown, Pa., which bore the brunt of the first attack of the tributaries to the north Monday.

The Red Cross at Pittsburgh was caring for more than 1,000 refugees who were driven yesterday from their homes in lowlying suburbs and river front districts when the Allegheny and West Virginia Rivers climbed 10 feet past the 25-foot flood stage at their junction with the Ohio River.

High water temporarily closed several industrial plants along the rivers, leaving approximately 15,000 workers idle. But the peak of the flood passed yesterday, leaving only minor property damage in its wake.

THE CHARM OF CHINTZ

English Chintz has never failed to excite admiration wherever it has been shown or used for decorative purposes.

Nowadays, however, it is no longer confined to window curtains and slip covers; it can be made to serve a hundred different purposes.

The perfect room for chintz is a woman's bedroom; any room, however dreary in itself, can be made fresh and pretty by the judicious use of some lovely print.

A blind of the same chintz would look particularly charming from outside at night, when the light from within the room shows up the pattern of the print in a fascinating way.

To accentuate this effect and also to show the pattern to its best advantage from inside the room, it is a good idea to put a piece of strip lighting behind the chintz frame.

One of the most important features of a woman's bedroom is the dressing table. Unless the room has definite architectural merits of its own, it depends a great deal on frills and fineness.

A plain table can easily be covered with a chintz skirt and draperies and perhaps a frill of white muslin. The chintz on the top of the table should have a piece of plate glass over it.

Chintz can also be used with entire success in a living room, either in town or in the country.

For this it should be chosen in very vivid colors. Can't you imagine a charming room of this kind having white walls, a blue ceiling, chairs and sofa covers of scarlet and white, and a riotous flower pattern curtaining the French window?

Another way in which chintz can be used with success is for the lining of shelves of some, perhaps, rather heavy and gloomy cabinet. A tapestry print in subdued tones would show the china wood to advantage than the dark wood background.

Insurgents Press Towards Bilbao

hardment," said: "The civil war in Spain at times takes on the aspects of frightful barbarism. Such is the case with bombardments of cities which are so often useless or which correspond to no strategic need, and which are they strike at open cities far behind the front."

"Thus one cannot but energetically condemn the air operations which were conducted yesterday against the city of Guernica. A Bilbao communiqué said this bombardment was effected by 120 insurgent planes flying low.

"It was executed methodically with the evident intent of terrorizing the population and hitting at Basque nationalism by striking at the source of its traditions."

CAPTURE DURANGO VITORIA, Northern Spain, April 28—The insurgent armies driving toward Bilbao announced tonight they had captured Durango, key-stone of the Basque capital's defense system, and smashed the Basque resistance along a 60-mile front.

Officially announcing seizure of Durango the headquarters here of General Francisco Franco's northern armies said defenders of the dwindling Basque state were "completely demoralized" and were fleeing in disorder toward Bilbao.

Durango was taken by an encircling movement by insurgent columns which developed into bitter hand to hand fighting before the defence suddenly crumpled.

Five thousand Basques and government troops with 20 tanks made the last stand in Durango, said the insurgents. Their retreat toward Bilbao, 16 miles northwest by a downhill highway, was described as "a great rout."

Many prisoners were reported taken.

North of Durango the forces of Insurgent General Emilio Mola swept westward on a 15-mile front, capturing several towns extending to the region of Lequittio on the Bay of Biscay coast. At least four tactically important mountains were gained in this phase of the advance.

Insurgent officers estimated the defenders of Bilbao had lost more than 10,000 killed, wounded or captured.

The insurgent right wing was reported pressing on Guernica, eight miles north of Durango. At nightfall the advance had carried them to within a half a mile of Guernica, which the insurgents said had been dynamited and burned by the fleeing garrison.

(The Basques charged Guernica was destroyed and 800 civilians killed there in a terrific insurgent aerial bombardment.)

The last battle for Durango was described as having begun with machine gun and rifle fire, which developed into a close combat with hand grenades and bayonets as the two forces closed.

Rain prevented insurgent air bombers from aiding their infantry but artillery was brought up to blast the desperate Basques out of their fortified buildings.

(Dispatches reaching London from Bilbao reported the Basques had evacuated Durango in good order at six p. m. Wednesday, taking their military stores with them.)

(Other Spanish government reports reaching Hendaye late Wednesday night declared the key city still in the hands of the Basques, who were putting up a desperate resistance.)

You wouldn't, for example, wear rust lipstick and nail lacquer with a purple suit, pink blouse or any rose-toned costume. Rust goes with beige and brown and off shades of orange and yellow.

Green eyeshadow is a nice contrast for the woman who owns a yellow or gold evening gown. Rouge with a kind of rust undertone matching lipstick, bluish-green mascara and a warm, glowing shade of powder are for rust and tangerine as well as gold.

Experiment with color and with cosmetics a little more seriously this year. You don't have to wear navy or black or gray, you know. Why not get a small remnant in a color you never have worn, hold it around your throat while you try various powder, lipstick and such? Many cosmeticians claim that, given the right makeup, any woman can wear any color. It's a pleasant thought.
