VOICES STRONG OBJECTION TO MARITIME UNION

Scheme Branded As "Superficial Panacea" By Hon. Cyrus Macmillan.

MONTREAL, Feb. 28—The idea of grouping individual Canadian provinces, either in the Maritimes or in the West, into fewer, larger provinces, is "a worthless and impracticable movement," Hon. Cyrus MacMillan, one of the members of the Duncan Commission which investigated Maritime problems a few years ago, declared here.

"People very often fasten on a spectacular, superficial panacea of this kind," he asserted, "when they would serve the country far better by getting at the real root of its difficulties. Unfortunately, they get support sometimes from people who ought to know better.

"No tampering with the basis of Confederation in a period of temporary panic can be justified for the sake of a few thousand dollars," he said; and he questioned whether any savings would be effected anyway. "Canada's problems today are problems of billions of dollars, and the remedy does not lie in trying to undo the work of the Fathers of Confederat on."

Speaking for the people of the Maritimes, Dr. MacMillin asserted that they do not want union, and that if they were stampeded into it by propaganda they would soon find they had lost more by it than they had gained.

"There is altogether too much talk," he said, "about tearing down our institutions w thout finding out first whether things are wrong because of institutions or because of policies and men. Canada could make no greater mistake than to disembowel the British North America Act because a few individuals have dec ded to run up a smoke screen in front of our real problems."

The Duncan Commission, Dr. MacMillan pointed out, had given considerable thought to the possibility of a merger between the Maritime Provinces, but had d scovered, after balancing the difficulties in the way against the problematical advantages, that the idea was of no practical value.

"I doubt very much," he said, "if a merger would be worth any more in the West. There would be serious dissentions over the location of the new capitals, both in the Maritimes and in the Prairie Provinces. think the promised savings in civil service costs would prove to be largely illusory. And many new administrative problems would inevitably crop up.

"It would seem to me that all other means of economy should be exhausted before any attempt is made to break up the Canadian constitution. There are many other directions, far less dangerous, in which much greater savings could be effected."

PRINCE CLAIMS HE KILLED RASPUTIN

Unfolds Tragedy During Hearing Of Wife's Suit Against Film Company.

(By H. H. Romer)

(Associated Press Staff Writer)
(A.P. By Guardian's Special Wire)

LONDON, Feb. 28 — The grim story of a tragedy that rocked Russia and startled the world was today told in the tense atmosphere of a crowded London courtroom when Prince Chegodieff Youssoupoff related how he killed the monk Rasputin.

The tall, slim Prince, attired in conventional morning clothes, crisply gave details of the slaying during a hearing of his wife's suit for $2,000,000 damages against the Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer Pictures, Ltd., in which she alleges the film "Rasputin and the Empress" libeled her.

Service To Country

"In doing what I did," said the Prince, "I thought I was acting in the service of my country."

He took the stand after the defense had intimated that he killed the powerful monk—the so-called force behind the Czar—in St. Petersbourg during the Great War.

Prince Youssoupoff, a descendant of the old Russian nobility, maintained he slew Rasputin when the latter admitted he was in the pay of Germany and planned to seize the throne. It was the first time he gave his version of the affair on a witness stand.

"Did you determine that in the interest of your country Rasputin should die?" Sir Patrick Hastings, a leading lawyer asked him.

"Yes," said the witness, "because I thought he was a danger to my country."

Cross Examined

During cross-examination of Princess Irena Youssoupoff, Sir William Jowitt of the defense said:

"I do suggest that Prince Youssoupoff did not kill Rasputin.

"I am suggesting that your husband fired the first shot, which did not kill Rasputin, and that Rasputin got up and as he was making his way out of the place Purishevitch (Vladamir Purishkeitch, Duma leader and foe of the Czar) came up and fired four shots, two of which hit him.

"If he was dead before he was pushed into the ice it was Purishkevitch who finally killed him."

Sir William dwelt at length on historical aspects of the tragedy in an attempt to show that the character in the film did not correspond to Prince Youssoupoff and that therefore the woman character—upon whose delineation the suit is based—could not be taken as representing the Princess.

She claims that the picture linked her identity objectionably with Rasputin.

Fired Four Times

The Prince testified that he and another man together fired at their victim four times and that the monk was beaten to death by Youssoupoff, who used a heavy stick.

Poisoned cakes and wine previously had been given Rasputin but had failed to have the intended fatal effect, the witness said.

The Prince stuck to his story under Sir William's cross examination despite the defense counsel's suggestion that the actual coup de grace was given by a man other than the Prince.

Sir William asked, "would it be wrong to say that after Rasputin was dead you so lost control of yourself and fell into such a paroxysm of rage that you proceeded to beat the body?"

To this the Prince replied, "that happened just at the moment when he died. He died just after I had done that."

Purishkevitch had fired three shots just previously and still Rasputin was not dead, the Prince said.

He was still on the stand when the case was adjourned until Thursday.

Preference On Empire Goods Is Protected

LONDON, Feb. 28—The British Government is satisfied the safeguarding clause in the new Anglo-Russian trade agreement will be effective in protecting Empire preferences from frustration by any state-aided dumping, the House of Commons was told this afternoon by J. H. Thomas, Secretary for Dominions.

The Duchess of Atholl, Conservative, had asked whether the Canadian Government had been invited to give its opinion as to whether the pact would still enable the British Government to implement article 21 of the Ottawa Agreements if necessary. This article provided for action against dumped goods which threatened the preferences.

Mr. Thomas explained the Government of Canada had been kept informed from time to time of the progress of negotiations with special reference to this aspect. He assumed the Canadian Government appreciated the British Government's care in seeing there would be no violation of the Ottawa Agreements.

Getting Most From Soft Coal Fires

For intense heat, spread fresh coal thinly all over fire pot. Select the coal, not too big, not too small. Give it draft You'll get heat.

For strong steady fires, mound fresh coal in middle—cone shaped—coarse coal first, topping off with small. Keep edges thin. Open drafts, including vents in fire door and wait for clear blaze all round before adjusting dampers. With Bradore Treated Coal that fire is good for hours.

Quick or lasting as will, this new fuel meets any demand. Nut size Burns any place, Cobbles in large furnaces. The "treatment" lessens smoke, lays dust and prevents soot. Bradore Treated Coal is both clean and dependable. Trying it? Sure! W. D. Gillis & Co., and A. Pickard & Co., have a stock.

Sylvester's Persistency Is Awarded

(A. P. By Guardian's Special Wire)

COLUMBUS, Miss., Feb. 27. — Sylvester Harris' long distance telephone conversation with President Roosevelt has brought results.

Here is Sylvester's version of the conversation:

"De White House gentleman what answered de phone up there got mad and said, 'quit calling de President,' but I keeps on and finally gets him.

"He says, 'who dis' and I say, 'It's Sylvester.'

"He say, 'Sylvester who?'"

I says 'Sylvester Harris, a nigger down here in Mississippi. A man gettin' ready to take my land and I want to know what to do. De papers say call you and I does and here I is.'

"De President says quiet-like, 'Sylvester, I'll investigate and you'll hear from me.' "

That was Feb. 19. Yesterday, George Hamilton, local representative of the New Orleans Federal Land Bank, received a telegram, followed by a letter, asking that the mortgage on Sylvester's farm be investigated thoroughly and adjusted through extension.

Hamilton says Sylvester has one of the best cotton yields in Lowndes County, having produced 24 bales on 30 acres.

Agricultural Rpt. Tabled In N. B. House

(C. P. By Guardian's Special Wire)

FREDERICTON, N. B., Feb. 28.—"Price levels for most agricultural products reached their lowest point during 1932 and early in 1933," stated J. K. King, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, in the annual report of that Department tabled in the New Brunswick Legislature today. "We are glad to note, however, that during 1933 there was a definite and steady improvement in the prices obtained for all agricultural products with the exception of beef, cattle and apples, with egg prices remaining at about the same figure in 1933 as they were in 1932. Poultry prices, however, were slightly lower in 1,33 as compared with 1932."

MRS. WM. E. GRAHAM

There passed peacefully away on Sunday, February 18th, Sadie, wife of Wm. E. Graham of Kensington, P. E. I. The deceased was in failing health for nearly a year and leaves besides a sorrowing husband and one son George, two brothers and an aged mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Gamester of Bradalbane.

In the passing of Mrs. Graham, her many friends realize that a person of sterling qualities has been removed from this earthly sphere. Her kindness of heart and sincere hospitality will long be remembered. Early in life she dedicated herself to her Saviour, to whom her faithfulness and childlike devotion were somewhat unusual. May the God of all grace comfort those left behind in their severe loss.

The funeral service was held in the Anglican Church, of which she was a member, and was conducted by Rev. Archdeacon White. Pallbearers were: George Bernard, Horace Bryanton, Roy Mills, Charles Sudsbury, William Sudsbury and Bruce Somers. Funeral director, Mr. Reagh Sudsbury.

Mr. Graham and family wish to thank all neighbors and friends for their extreme kindness during the illness of their dear one who has gone to her great reward.

Sauve Pleased With Postal Conference

PARIS, Feb. 28—Hon. Arthur Sauve, Postmaster General of Canada today launched an effort to convince the French tobacco monopoly that Canadian maple syrup is admirably adapted for the treatment of French tobaccos.

In co-operation with the Canadian Minister to Paris, Hon. Philippe Roy, the Postmaster General during his 10 day visit will seek to encourage imports from Canada generally, and press overtures already made by the legation to the French tobacco industry.

Mr. Sauve, who is returning from the Cairo Postal Conference, came here from Nice to attend the memorial service in Notre Dame Cathedral for King Albert of the Belgians.

The Postmaster General said he was pleased with the results of the Cairo Conference which adopted the Canadian suggestion that various countries reduce 20 per cent the handling charges for mail and transit.

LECTURE ON LIFE OF DR. JOHN GEDDIE

A sketch of the life of Dr. John Geddie, the first missionary from a British dominion to bring the gospel to a heathen country was given by Rev. Dr. Legate last evening in his regular mid-week lecture in St. James Hall.

The subject came very near his hearers for three reasons, Dr. Legate said, Dr. Geddie was a minister on the Island for eight years. He was the first Presbyterian missionary to leave one of the British dominions for a heathen country, and there were associated with Dr. Geddie two relatives of the Gordons and Goodwills of St. James Church.

Dr. Geddie was born in Scotland in 1815. In his infancy, the child was dedicated to the ministry. When he was about a year old the family removed to Pictou. The boy was sent to the famous Pictou Academy. When he was about 19 years of age, he had a serious illness, from which it appeared he would not recover. He prayed for his recovery, and that he might become a minister and a missionary. There were no riches in the churches in those days, and it was a strange thing, under the circumstances, for John Geddie to desire to become a missionary.

John Geddie was called to Cavendish, and from that centre he sought out communities hitherto neglected. He never lost sight of his objective, and at length won the older ministers to his way of thinking. As a result it was decided to send a missionary to the Pacific islands. It fell to the lot of John Geddie to be the first missionary from the Presbytery of Nova Scotia to a heathen land. He began his work at the New Hebrides, after a journey of eight months. He and his wife went from Boston to Honolulu, thence to Samoa. He studied the Samoan language and took lessons in boat building and hut building. At Samoa Mr. Geddie gained the friendship of Mr. Powell who got permission to accompany Mr. Geddie to the New Hebrides. They landed on one of the larger volcanic islands. The natives were among the most degraded of the Pacific islands' people fierce and savage. He fearlessly landed among the natives who mistook him for a sandalwood dealer, who were unscrupulous, and were therefore distrusted.

It is notable that Dr. Geddie did his marvellous work in the New Hebrides more by the example of his daily life than by his teaching and preaching.

In only six weeks he was able to talk to the people, and in a few months had formed an alphabet, all the time gaining the confidence of the people.

As his greatest hope was in the children, he formed a school, to which he bribed the children to come. The British and Foreign Bible Society printed for him his translation of the gospel of Mark.

For years the natives viewed the new religion with suspicion. One of the native chiefs opposed him. Repeated overtures were useless, and the chief attempted to kill the missionary. One night before going out to see the Chief, he prayed for guidance. The chief who was lurking in the bush planning to strike down Dr. Geddie suddenly found himself paralyzed. The incident resulted in the chief's conversion and many of the tribe followed their leader's example. From that time onward the work prospered even beyond for what he had prayed. A missionary was sent out from Scotland to assist. A wave of missionary enthusiasm swept the Maritime Provinces, and two new missionaries left the Maritimes. Soon the work spread out among the other islands, and in the Maritimes, people began to talk of the church in the New Hebrides. From Charlottetown George Gordon and his wife were sent out to one of the islands and suffered death for the Gospel. His brother, James, prepared himself for the work and took his place and also lost his life. Rev. John Goodwill went out and for four years did conspicuous work. Very unwillingly Dr. Geddie gave up his work after fifteen years of labour, as he was physically unfitted for the work. It was arranged that Dr. Geddie should go to Australia and supervise the translation of the Bible into the language of the New Hebrides.

During a trip to the New Hebrides he contracted influenza and died near Melbourne, Australia. Dr. Geddie made his greatest impression by his pure and Christ-like life. The way in which one can serve Christ best is by showing him forth in ones life, Dr. Legate stated in conclusion.

The lecture next Wednesday evening will be on Caroline MacDonald, missionary to Japan.

time to consider any such big undertaking as the Peace River outlet. The Minister explained that he had not then intended any short answer to Mr. Kennedy. Things looked better now. The government could hardly be expected to promise the building of the road but with a brighter railway picture it would be given serious and sympathetic study. The original resolution would have placed the House on record as favoring the outlet without any indication as to when it should be built. Dr. Manion asked Mr. Kennedy to accept the amendment. Mr. Kennedy agreed but declared there was no clash between those who favored branch lines in the Peace River District and those who urged a direct outlet.

The branch lines would form part of the outlet and he urged if public works were instituted as unemployment relief, branch lines in the Peace River should be one of the projects carried out.

lessened. One-seventh of all our revenues last year went to pay pensions for men, women and children as a result of the Great War."

On the other hand, he said, the depression was passing and conditions were steadily improving. The courage and enterprise of ten and a half millions of people had made Canada the fifth exporting country in the world.

Pass Japan

"When at times you are depressed it is well to remember that during the period of depression there were months when we fell to the sixth and seventh places, but during the last twelve months we have moved up again until there are only four countries that have greater exports than we have. Although Japan passed up on one occasion, we have now passed Japan. What an achievement with a population so small and inhabiting an area so vast."

Canadian trade within the Empire had greatly expanded, he continued. "We have increased our trade with Australia, New Zealand and the Mother Country, and the fact that there are 20 ships lying at your docks indicates the extent to which there has been a demand for Canadian products.

Leads in Expansion

"But we are not confining our expansion to our own Empire. Our trade has increased with South America, the Orient and France."

Extensive investigation by the League of Nations had revealed that Canada led all countries in trade expansion between November of 1932 and November, 1933.

"As one great American newspaper remarked the other day," added Mr. Bennett, it is a striking example that this should be so, but it is due to the determination, persistence, patience and efforts of the Canadian people. I know of nothing which should appeal to Canadians with a greater sense of pride than that remarkable fact recorded in two inches of space in the newspaper."

". . . Speaking of trade and what has been done, I can only say this: that it is the purpose of this and all governments to expand so far as possible the opportunities for Canadians to trade in other lands, but the opportunities must be based upon a fair realization and appreciation of the fact that for the purpose of buying trade we are not prepared to pay too great a price for insuring our ability to sell our products in the markets of any country.

Dumped Products

"If we are to maintain our standard of living it follows that we cannot be invaded by dumped products from communities with lower standards of living.

"Our integrity is to us a precious possession, and if the purpose of your government has not been as clearly manifest as you would like, I can only say to you that we hold the view that in times of stress and strain it is not wise to speak in terms indicative of boasting. Our results will speak for themselves."

Mr. Bennett recalled the day when fire swept the docks at West Saint John. They were still a "desolate sight," he said.

"We are extending our business in every port of the world, and it is my earnest hope, speaking as a citizen for the moment and not as the head of the government, that we may be able to undertake within the next few months such an expenditure in this port as will enable its unsightly piers to disappear."

Applauded

When enthusiastic applause met this statement the speaker smilingly added:

"I do not suppose anything is more characteristic of the people of Saint John than what I have witnessed for the last ten seconds. They draw hope from nothing. That applause means that they have received my cautious remarks to indicate that they expect something to be done."

Concluding, the Prime Minister said:

"I now declare formally open the facilities of this port, and I go back to my own labors inspired by your noble efforts and with a broadening consciousness of the achievements of today and the sacrifices of the past."

Remarking that only three Canadian ports were now open, Premier Tilley said:

"The integral life of the country depends upon our sister provinces realizing that Canadian traffic must pass through Canadian ports."

"Our future lies with the sea," declared Dr. MacLaren. "Our prosperity depends upon shipping. Saint John's destiny is to be a great Canadian Atlantic seaport."

Mr. Schofield revealed an increase of 44 percent in general cargo exports from Saint John to date this season as compared with last year. Cattle shipments were up 49 percent, exports to South Africa had increased by 52 percent and exports to India were almost 400 percent higher.

REPORT IS DENIED

(C. P. by Guardian's Special Wire)

SACKVILLE, N. B., Feb. 28—A report that Mount Allison University was considering withdrawing from Intercollegiate athletic competition was denied by a University spokesman tonight. The report followed a decision by the Maritime Intercollegiate Union declaring a hockey game between Mount Allison and University of New Brunswick to have been a draw. Hinging on a dispute regarding length of overtime play, the decision meant that U. N. B., were New Brunswick champions.

A notice was posted at Mt. A. calling for a meeting to decide the question of withdrawing from further intercollegiate play, but the notice was not official, the spokesman said tonight, and the meeting was cancelled in view of student opinion against the proposal.

MONTREAL EXCHANGE

MONTREAL, Feb. 28—Traders threw off the mantle of nervousness that has cloaked dealings on the Montreal Stock Exchange for the past several days when the opening bell sounded on the Montreal Stock Exchange today and dealings were carried on in feverish fashion, but the attitude failed to last and activity quieted down again as the session progressed. After boosting prices higher for the first half- hour, traders once again retired from dealings and prices drifted narrowly, gains and losses being about evenly divided at the close.

Promise of a day of heavy turnover was given at the start when it appeared volume for the day would be heavy. When trading died down later, however, turnover showed a sharp contraction and volume for the day was only slightly more than yesterday, about 2,000 shares changing hands. The cautious attitude was instilled in the minds of traders by the movements in Wall Street, where trading interest failed to show any expansion despite the continuation of encouraging reports from trade and industry.

Consolidated Smelters and International Nickel, leaders in yesterday's session, again were in the van of the list today. Nickel was in heavy demand to rise 15 cents at 23.75, which was 10 cents below the day's high and Smelters advanced 2 points. Alcohol "B" was another strong feature, showing a net gain on the day's dealings of a point when it closed at 16. Montreal Tramways firmed 4, Ottawa Power, 2, Ogilvie Common 5, International Power Preferred 1 1-2 and Canadian Bronze 1 while smaller gains were also displayed by Bell Telephone, Canadian Celanese and a number of others.

B. C. Power lost a point at 30 and Canadian Hydro Electric Preferred 1-2 at 65 1-2 while Canadian Pacific was off 3-8 at 15 3-4. Small losses were spread over the remainder of the list.

Sales 20,555, Bonds $9,525.

LONDON, Feb. 28—Lady Mount Temple, wife of a former minister of transport wants the plain gold wedding band abolished. She told the National Jewellers' Association at their annual dinner that it was a "monstrosity," and she appealed for its deposition in favor of the much more beautiful gem-set ring or the plain platinum circlet.
