The redingote has already enjoyed much popularity.

Paris doesn't mean to let this becoming style drop by the wayside. For the warmer days she compromises by letting a little colour scheme into the dress to stimulate a redingote.

It's just the sort of dress smart women feel so happy in for town, travel or spectator sports.

INDIGESTION, YELLOW SKIN

Worker in Binder Twine Factory Gets Relief through Dr. Williams' Pink Pills (Tonic)

"About five years ago," writes Mrs. Joseph Penrose, 164 Sydenham Street, Brantford, Ontario, "I was troubled with indigestion, and very yellowish skin. I was working at the binder twine factory at the time, making canvas sacks on a machine, but had to be on my feet most of the time. Well, I would take dizzy your indoor or greenhouse plants nerves were very bad. . . . I sent to the drug store and got one box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. . . . Before they were of the bottom I had received so much relief I face of the soil the plant need re- potting. The iron and other elements in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills (tonic) build up the blood condition by increasing the amount of haemoglobin (life-giving element). Don't put off or prolong your recovery by needless delay. Be sure to say 'Dr. Williams' so that the druggist will know exactly what you want. 106

"I can't tell the Difference"

The only difference between Ben's and good home baked beans is this: Ben's cost far less, fuel considered, and they end all Saturday slavery. Otherwise, in appearance, in taste, in goodness, they're equal to or better than the best home baked beans. One tin will tell the tale. Nothing to add, neither sauce nor meat; just heat and eat.

One Reason for the Divorce Evil Consider Incurable Optimism Responsible

The Ideal Husband or Wife is Always the One We Didn't Marry - If We Could Only Realize That Our Next Partner Would Average up About Like Our Last, Divorce Would be a Thing of the Past

The much-married Peggy Joyce was recently asked by an interviewer which of her numerous husbands was her favorite one. To which she responded: "My next. Always my next one."

In this cryptic utterance of a woman who believes that if at first you don't succeed in getting the sort of husband you want, try, try again, we have not only an expression of incomparable optimism, but the real explanation of the why of divorce.

For the only ideal husbands and wives are those we did not marry, and whom we delude ourselves into thinking we may yet win if we take another chance in the matrimonial lottery.

Dr. Johnson defined a second marriage as the final triumph of hope over experience, and it is still cynically and amusingly true that no matter how disappointed men and women have been in their previous husbands and wives, they always believe that their next ones are going to be all that their imaginations crave and their hearts desire.

John looks at Mary, grown middle-aged and stout and stodgy and whose conversational repertoire he knows by heart, and thinks that if he had another wife she would be perpetually young and beautiful and miraculously clothed in chiffons that never cost a cent, and that she would keep him all pepped up and feeling like a young and ardent lover, and that she would never run up any bills or be sick or have her relatives visit her or nag him about money, and that she would realize that a man can't always be tied to his own fireside, and that he needed diversion outside of the home.

And Mary, beholding her John, sees a tubby little man who is growing bald, and who is grumpy and grouchy and dangerous to speak to when the stock market sags, and who takes her for granted and never pays her a compliment or gives her a kiss that isn't a peck of duty with no more warmth to it than a cold flapjack.

And she thinks that if she had another husband he would look like a motion-picture sheik, and that he would keep her thrilled with his love-making, and that he would lavish money upon her and entreat her to buy herself strings of pearls and Paris clothes, and that nothing would ever peeve him, and that he would never look at another woman, and that he would always want to do just exactly what she wanted to.

Of course, no human being possesses the aggregation of charms and virtues of the man or woman we didn't marry, but alas, a great many credulous men and women believe in this paragon of perfection as children do in Santa Claus. Worse still, they go in search of their ideal and are always thinking they have discovered him or her in some mysterious stranger.

This discontent with their mates, for whatever John and Mary's faults they likewise have their good points, could be borne with philosophy except that the discontented husbands and wives are victims of the delusion that if they swap partners they are certain to profit by the trade and get something better than they have. That, as Miss Joyce says, their next husbands and wives are bound to be their favorite ones. That is why the burnt matrimonial child not only doesn't dread the fire, but rushes right back into it.

One would think that those who have found marriage intolerable, who have known this torture that only husbands and wives can inflict upon each other, would not more venture into marriage a second time than a soul that has won its way out of purgatory would voluntarily descend again into the pit, but such is not the case. Divorced people nearly always marry again. Often within an hour of the time they have regained their freedom, they have forfeited their liberty again to some unknown man or woman, strong in the belief that he or she is going to be the wife or husband of their dreams.

Occasionally this hope is realized. Oftener it is not, and the second or third or fourth marriage is just as much a disappointment as the first. It is only exchanging one set of faults and peculiarities for another, and

Paris Styles

By MARY KNIGHT United Press Staff Correspondent

PARIS, June 12.—(U. P.)—In this day of doing what one pleases even collars have gone independent of Schiaparelli, and one of her most attractive ones of this type has a patent leather belt as an accomplice.

It is worn with a black coat—we have to say "worn with" because it is not actually a part of the suit, for it is put on entirely separately. It is made of a wide oval of white marocain that slips over the head and falls to the waist. The two-inch belt slips through the oval at the waistline and holds it deftly in place. A braided band of black and white marocain goes around a black felt hat that accompanies it. Black gloves and shoes make the white of the independent collar stand out more defiantly to state its claim to praise. It may be said also that Schiaparelli does such things with fur, and does them nobly.

Green and white is a combination popular on the Parisian boulevards ever since Easter. Madeline Vionnet's conception of it takes the form of a rather dark green coat worn with a white crepe dress. The coat has no collar and is not lined. It has cape sleeves that fall to the elbows in front. The dress is made on the bias and has biased tucks an inch apart running in both directions from the shoulders to the hips. It has a draped collar and a narrow green belt with a fastening in green and white bone. A hat of white crocheted lace by Agnes exposes the entire left side of the head to well behind the ear and comes low over the right side of the forehead. White gloves and white or green shoes do the trick of finishing things.

flat metal discs, and the table, which should delight people with like a bridge-table, is only 5ft. small flats, is table hockey. It is long. The game is a very rapid played with small curved sticks and and very difficult.

one husband or wife is as hard to live with as another.

John may not have had a thrilling line of conversation, but he was good-natured and cheerful and amiable, while James is a wit but given to sulking and to making wisecracks at his wife's expense. Thomas may have been a d.b at love-making, but he was a wizard at money getting, while Ralph holds his wife's hands and tells her how beautiful she is, but lets her work to support him.

Sally was no treat to the eyes, but she was a grand cook, while Sadie looks like a fashion plate and sets her husband down to a dinner that would kill an ostrich. Lucille was no vamp, but she was thrifty and economical and a good working partner, while Estelle keeps her husband on his tiptoes, and head and ears in debt by her extravagance.

And so it goes, and the consensus of the experience of the divorced is that there isn't much choice among husbands and wives as far as performances go, and that your next husband and wife will average up about like your former one did. So you had as well stay married and save expense of a divorce.

For in marriage, as in all else, man never is, but always to be blessed, as the poet puts it.

Etiquette

By Robert Lee

Q. When introducing one's self, should one say "Miss Brown" or "Mary Brown"?

A. "Mary Brown."

Q. Is it possible to place guests too far apart while dining?

A. Yes, for one cannot be chatty when his partner is too far away.

Q. Is it ever permissible to take a guest that is visiting one to a week-end party without first asking the hostess' permission?

A. Never; permission must be asked.

Piebald Stocking

The newest stockings for fashionable women are half pink and half dark grey and are terribly expensive. The fronts are flesh pink and the back dark grey. At a distance the effect is most eccentric as the wearer looks as if her legs are bare in front and painted at the back.

Far worse are the "back to front" stockings which are so fashionable in Paris and Vienna and have now arrived in London. The fronts are quite plain, and the backs are painted or embroidered with wasps, butterflies or small snakes.

DEVELOPS NEW RACKET

PHOENIX, Ariz., June 12.—(U.P.)—A new racket developed here after county authorities warned business men that operators of slot machines paying coins would be prosecuted. Two men followed the announcement by posing as officers. They collected the machines, removed the coins and then disappeared.

END "FREE" BASEBALL

GLOBE, Ariz., June 12.—(U.P.)—A hill to the rear of the baseball park where the Globe team of the Arizona-Texas league plays home games was attracting almost as many spectators as the grandstand so the city council, co-operating with property owners, issued an order against such trespassing.

HELPS SICK WOMEN TO GET WELL

Why not INVESTIGATE?

Many young women suffer frequently from severe attacks of bilious Dyspepsia. The face takes on a sickly pallor, and a bitter taste is noticeable in the mouth. At times the bowels are very constipated.

The simplest remedy is Dr. Hamilton's Pills, which act upon the stomach, bowels and liver. They cleanse and tone the system, establish regularity, and restore sufferers to sound, robust health. They put new life into disordered stomachs aid digestion, purify the blood, stop headaches, make you feel lively and full of "pep." All dealers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills in 25c boxes.

A most popular member of the appetizer group—a savory to serve, English fashion at the end of a meal—or a so-called open-face sandwich—the canape fills an increasingly important role. It is a small piece—round, square, finger or fancy shape—of bread that has been fried or toasted (or sometimes a thin plain cracker or piece of pastry is substituted); this base is spread with any savory mixture and garnished attractively.

WINNEMUCCA, Nev., June 12.—(U.P.)—A shaft will be sunk to a 500-foot level in the Rio claims in the Ten Mile district, according to a report. A. G. Frasier, of Berkeley, the new owner of the mine, believes that gold formations may be found at that depth. Geologists concur with this belief.

For The Cook

ROMAN MEAL GEMS

1 cup flour.
1 1/4 cups Roman Meal.
1 teaspoon soda.
1 teaspoon salt.
2 tablespoons brown sugar.
1 tablespoon melted shortening.
2 eggs.
1 cup sour milk.

Method—Sift flour and Roman Meal, add salt, soda and brown sugar and mix well. Make a hole in the middle of the flour and pour in the well beaten eggs, which have been added to the sour milk and melted shortening. Pour into gem tins well greased and floured, bake in a moderate oven about twenty minutes. This quantity will make one dozen gems. Split and butter while hot; serve very hot. Nice for luncheon or afternoon tea. Sweet milk and baking powder may be used instead of sour milk and soda, two tablespoons baking powder.
