BALANCE OF TRADE

Sir,—That's a poser of "J's" about the $100,000 worth of export returned as $150,000 in imports. "Where is the money to come from to pay for that $50,000 worth?"

If Mr. Hughes, who is an exporter, purchased $100,000 worth of potatoes, exported them to Cuba and for his pay took back $150,000 worth of sugar and molasses, where does he expect these potato-growers, who sold him the spuds, to get the money to buy from him, that extra $50,000 he made on the spuds? He exported $100,000 worth; imported $150,000 worth.

NATURAL MANURES FOR POTATOES—KELP

Sir,—Our natural manures, yard manures and kelp, which has given such gratifying results in the past, are very similar in chemical composition. A ton of manure may be said to be a 6-15-5, and a ton of Kelp a 4-075-85 combination of mixture. Classed as chemical fertilizers are, according to Prof. Shute Chemist at Ottawa, note the much lesser amount of the centre figures .15 and .075 which represent the phos. acid. Both Kelp and manure are either probably superior to chemical fertilizers. At our Charlottetown Station experiments with manure and fertilizers for several years show manure superior. Kelp at the farm hasn't been tried, it not being available but Kelp has been tried by our shore farmers for the past hundred years, and has proved superior even to manure, particularly "Spring Kelp." And yet Kelp carries only a small proportion of phos. acid .075% or 1.5 lbs. to a ton. Might we just from this show a conclusion that we have been using an unnecessarily large percentage of phos. acid in our fertilizer mixture; most fertilizers contain 8% of phos. acid. Kelp, which appears to be "the manner born" for potatoes. But Kelp contains 5% of potash or 10 lbs. in a ton six and a half times as much as it does potash. While our artificial manure usually contains as much or more phos. acid as potash, evidently our potato fertilizers contain an unnecessary over-plus of phos. acid and not enough potash. And phos. acid is dearer, 7c a lb. against potash, 5c. In our mixtures we appear to be using too much more costly phos. acid, and not enough of the two other ingredients, potash and nitrogen.

One of the finest crops of cobbler's grown this past season, had no chemicals, but was manured with spring kelp. The Inspector was greatly impressed with the crop. No chemicals, but Kelp only. Spring Kelp is considered twice as good as fall Kelp. May be the time of application may make some difference, applied to the crop fresh from the sea. At digging time it was good to see the rows turned out with a plow. The diggers would fill a basket in five or six feet of rows of the handsomest and soundest tubers.

Guard Against "Flu" With Musterole

Influenza, Grippe and Pneumonia usually start with a cold. The moment you get those warning aches rub on good old Musterole. Musterole relieves the congestion and stimulates circulation. It has all the good qualities of the old-fashioned mustard plaster without the blistering. First you feel a warm tingle as the healing ointment penetrates the pores, then a soothing, cooling sensation and quick relief. Have Musterole handy for emergency use. It may prevent serious illness.

which you allude, were based upon the workings of an active fancy, such as all anglers are supposed to possess. I submit the following as a simple statement of facts.

I spent nearly six weeks at Nail Pond, just outside of Tignish, in July and August. When I arrived I made enquiries of the merchants and others as to a non resident angling license, and where it could be obtained. No one knew, and all seemed amazed that such a license was required. At the time I did not know that there was a local representative of the Tourists Association there, or I should have asked him. I then wrote to Charlottetown to the Fisheries Department, and had a courteous reply from Mr. Gallant who issued me a license, for which I sent in the fee. While I was in Tignish I went to fish in the brook that runs into Nail Pond and found a young man (now a resident of the United States but formerly of Tignish) fishing there. He had a string of fish, all very small, and he kindly showed me the way to Nail Pond. I took my boat in a boat to the place where the trout were rising. I saw a trawl set there, and he told me that he caught eels with it. I asked him what he baited with and he told me that it was with small trout. The trawl was about 40, perhaps 50 feet in length, tied to two stakes, and I later lifted it and saw the hooks fastened to it. Of course I did not think that all eels taken in P. E. I. water were caught in that way, but I did think it a striking illustration of disregard for law. To still further prove my general statement that the law is disregarded in Prince Edward Island, so far as game fish are concerned, I will state that I was invited to go to the hotel to see a lot of big trout which had been snared by one of the residents in a nearby stream, and I saw and talked with many people who had seen these fish and their method of capture was a matter of common knowledge—it was the day that the Hon. K. B. Bennett visited Tignish. When I alluded to these matters I did so in order to impress upon the members of the Toronto Anglers Association here in Toronto the fact that those of us who believe in conservation, and in obeying the law intended to promote the conservation of Game Fish, have a lot to do in the education of public sentiment. Prince Edward Island is probably worse off in this respect than other Provinces. After leaving there I found law breaking going on in New Brunswick, where salmon were taken in nets, illegally, and without a non resident's license, and need of which even some guides did not seem to realize. After fishing for salmon three days, finding no one to issue a license, I sent my fee to Fredericton, and so proved my own sincerity in advocating, as I do, the strict observance of our angling regulations, you that I too appreciate the humor of the situation, and I also appreciate your nomination of myself for the Pickwick Club. It may be, however, that I may be trusted to go away from home without a guardian, and that gullibility may not be as pronounced in me as you may imagine it to be. But, at any rate, it is pleasant to know that one's remarks are appreciated, and that those remarks were intended only to draw attention to a general disregard of angling laws. I wish I could spare you optimism as to the "sportsmen," who visit your province paying their non-resident license fee. A "true sportsman" will keep the law of course, both as to a license, observing the close season, returning undersized fish, and limiting his catch to the number that may be legally caught in a day, but there are many pseudo sportsmen who lack the true spirit, as there are many who live near streams and lakes who pay no attention to the law whatever. It is only when public sentiment is aroused and organized, that the authorities can enforce the law, and not until people generally realize how valuable game fish are, both to the people of the localities where they are found and as an attraction to tourists will the present quite general disregard of angling laws be succeeded by loyal and willing observance.

I could tell you of some of your best streams that are netted constantly; in fact I did not find one upon which there was not to be seen evidences of such practices. The largest trout I caught during my stay came out of a lovely pond on the bank of which could be seen the remains of a net that had evidently been used frequently. The agitation in favor of conservation needs to be kept up in every Province. We will do it here and you, Sir, will educate public opinion in the Garden of the Gulf. I only venture to speak thus frankly with a desire to awaken the slumbering public conscience.

I am, Sir, etc.,

G. A. WARBURTON, President, Toronto Anglers Association, Toronto, Nov. 16, 1928.

MT. STEWART WOMEN'S INSTITUTE—The annual meeting of this institute took place at the home of Mrs. R. C. Clark on Tuesday, Nov. 13th, 22 members and four visitors were present. The meeting opened with the singing of "O Canada." Roll call was answered through the names of allied leaders in the Great War. The reports of the sick and school committees were given. It was decided that a flag chart be purchased for the primary room of school, also committees were appointed to make arrangements for a supper to be held in the Hall on Wednesday, Nov. 28th. The program for the evening consisted of community of Local Honor Roll by Jeanette MacDonnell, reading "In Planter's Fields" by Mrs. M. K. Charman and a patriotic paper, Miss Bessie McLeod. The meeting was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem, after which ice cream and cake were served by the hostess.

CLOWN REFUSES TO LAUGH

Instead of a testimonial, Whimsical Walker, the clown, got only birthday wishes. He refused to sing and laugh it off, and as a result, Harry Davis, 69, a London restaurant keeper, has been indicted for converting to his own use $85 which had been subscribed to a testimonial for the clown Walker, with grey hair and twinkling eye, told in a London court of the plan outlined by Davis, who had said he would raise $10,000, but sent only a "many happy returns" letter to Walker.

WELCOMES MINISTERS WIFE

Home friends will be interested in the following clipping from the Cornwall Standard of a former Island lady.

The annual thank-offering meeting of the W. M. S. in connection with Inmanusil Presbyterian Church, Aultsville, was held Sunday evening, Oct. 7th. The church was well filled and all enjoyed a very inspiring address by Mrs. (Rev.) MacPherson, of Woodlands. Mrs. MacPherson has come to us recently and the members of Glenagry Presbyterian are to be congratulated in the addition of so capable a member to their ranks.

Mrs. J. M. Louks on behalf of the W. M. S. thanked Mrs. MacPherson for her instructive missionary address and all those contributed so generously to the missionary cause. She urged all the ladies of the church to become members of the Society.

The collection amounted to $56-39.

Can Flowers Feel Pain?

LONDON, November 17.—"Is it cruel to cut flowers?"

This controversial topic is engaging the attention of the mayors of the adjoining south coast towns of Bournemouth and Christchurch. At a recent flower show at Christchurch, the mayor of the town, Councillor Martin, stated that he thought it was a cruel thing to cut flowers and to put them into vases.

This remark was unfortunately attributed to the Mayor of Bournemouth, Alderman H. J. Thwaites, who is president of the Bournemouth Horticultural Society and holds different views.

In a letter to a newspaper, he writes: "It is a difficult, if not impossible, to draw a hard and fast line between the vegetable and animal kingdoms, but I have always believed that the essential difference between a plant and an animal is that the latter is endowed with sensation and consciousness, whereas the former is not."

"I granted this I submit it follows that a plant is not susceptible of being cruelly treated—and I have no objection to enjoying the sight of a cut flower but I have to the sight of a sheep browsing upon the mountain side though both the one and the other may involve the destruction of life."

Science, however, appears to be a little in favour of the view of the Mayor of Christchurch. Sir Jagdish Bose, the Indian scientist, who has made elaborate experiments in regard to the sensitiveness of plants, asserts that:

Plants have death struggles in the same way as animals; that stimulants, anaesthetics and poisons effect plants as animals; and that palm trees have been known to bend down in response to the ringing of temple bells.

Co-Respondent 74 Years Old

SYDNEY, New South Wales, Nov. 17.—There was an interesting scene in the Sydney Divorce Court the other day when a 74-year-old respondent aged 74, perhaps the oldest man in Australia to find himself in such a position, was defended by Australia's youngest practising barrister, aged 22 years.

of the province of Nova Scotia except Cape Breton the tuberculosis infection in cattle has been reduced from 2.28 at the first general test to 0.17, a showing equal to the best previous area in Canada.

The area comprised 32,605 herds with 191,076 cattle, and of these 4,367 cattle reacted at the first general test on 2,968 premises or 2.28.

Infected premises were visited a second time and 22,763 cattle tested while some received two retests at intervals of not less than 60 days.

In the herds from which reactors were removed at the first general test, 339 additional reactors were found or 1.4 per cent of the cattle.

The infected herds are retested and each time a reactor is found the premises are cleaned and disinfected, and retests made at suitable periods until the herd passes a clean test. When the second general tests of all herds in the restricted area is made, these that have given clean tests are again tested.

The Department of Agriculture announces that with the strict enforcement of the restricted area regulations and the co-operation of cattle owners, no difficulty should be experienced in maintaining this area as free as practicable from infection.
