A Sweetheart at Thirty

THE STORY OF A WOMAN'S TRANSFORMATION

By Marion Rubincam

PREPARATION

Chapter 49

As the July days came on our activity increased.

I feel as though I had lost an hour some time a few weeks ago and that I haven't been able to make it up since, I said to Violet one morning when we were doing the room work together.

I know it, Vi answered, shaking out a clean sheet and throwing it over the bed. I promised my psychology professor faithfully that I would put in seven hours a week of study. So far I've averaged four and I haven't looked at any other of my books.

"You know, the thing I miss most is the newspapers," I answered.

They were my favorite recreation in the city, and they were a form of recreation I could have continued here at home. But somehow I never wrote to have them sent me, and if I had done so, I doubt whether I would have had a moment to look over them.

The wonderful panorama of life its tragedies, sorrows, expectations, its dissapointments and achievements, had been spread before me once every day by the news columns. Except for the small agricultural paper which I never read, I had not even seen a printed sheet since we came back.

It's a sorrowing sort of life isn't it?" Vi said, stripping an old case from a pillow and making ready to put on a clean one. She held the pillow up in her teeth too, as Esther did when we changed the beds in this very room some little time ago and discussed Mark. But there was such a difference! This golden haired girl was so slim and so graceful, every action was pleasant to see, as she shook out the pillows bent over the bed and smoothed the cover with her slender hands.

"Yes, it is narowing," I answered. "I suppose its narowing though because we let it be so. There's Mrs. Potts; she doesn't live a narrow existence and she lives on a bigger farm than ours.

It's only over the summer, Vi said, with a little sigh, beginning to dust the room. I'm simply existing until we can get back to our little flat again and college— and Bud. You know, Aunt Enid I'm awfully afraid to have him there alone in the city. Bud is the dearest boy in the world—but he does need me to look after him. At least, he needs some woman with lots of common sense.

You mean that George is a little weak, a little inclined to yield to temptation, I answered.

"Yes," Vi said absent-mindedly, beginning to dust all over again. Sometime I think I'm meant to live in the city because it does me so much good, but that Bud should live in the country out of the way of temptation.

Perhaps, after all, it would be a good thing for Bud to come back and take over his father's farm, as Mrs. Pearsoll wants, I suggested.

Perhaps, Violet said, pausing to look out of the window-and seeing not a thing but her own inward image of the boy she loved. I think if he did, I—I would be happy—even though I hate hard work and not much fun-and living a narrow life. At least we would be we would have——' her voice trailed off into nothingness. She had a habit of thinking out loud when she was with me, and then gradually kept talking lower and lower until I could not hear her voice.

I was silent out of sympathy. Violet was glimpsing a problem many a woman has to face—

Which is better to keep the man you love where he is safe though all other circumstances of life are out of key—or to choose the pleasant surroundings and trust that everything will come out all right? sometimes I think suburban dwellers are only those who are afraid to trust each other to the temptations of the city and who make a compromise with Fate.

But my reflection were not entirely serious. I wondered how Vi would meet and work out her problems. She could not drag Bud away from the city, though she herself would be willing enough to do without its stimulation for his sake. I thought whimsically, that she would probably join the ranks of the suburban dwellers too. Then Bud, could have almost enough of the town's excitement—but with the knowledge that the 12.01 was the last train home.

Our silence was broken by a sharp exclamation from the hall. Violet jumped she was so startled and I stooped hastily to gather up the soiled sheets for the laundry.

"Heavens, haven't you finished the bedrooms yet!' Esther's voice was fretful. I may as well do all the work myself. I should think Enid would have sense enough to get through her work, even if Vi has got to go about day dreaming. But since you've been to the city you've come back with more romantic notions than a 17 year old girl yourself, Enid! A body'd think you'd fallen in love too, the way you act.

We're nearly through, I apologized.

Nearly through—three more rooms, and with Laura getting married next week, and all the work for the ceremony, and the dressmaker not sent home her wedding dress yet! Vi you've got to drive over and get that today. And when she's married, there's a pair of hands less too, and the only person around the house I can depend on gone!

It won't be so much work when the wedding's over, Vi said consolingly.

Not that it makes any difference to you how much work there is, Esther grumbled. Vi and I, resentful of the scolding, went hastily about our work.

If Back Hurts Take Salts For Kidneys

Eat less meat if Kidneys feel like lead or Bladder bothers

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also helps neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus helping to relieve bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which everybody should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in trying to correct kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

Quotes Speeches On Canada's Duty To Assist Empire

OTTAWA,—In a statement Right Hon. Arthur Meighen, leader of the Opposition in the Federal House, declared that the Parliament of Canada not only ratified the Treaty of Sevres, but gave it "definite approval." He quotes in full the statute introduced at the last session of Parliament by the Prime Minister, and entitled "An Act for carrying into effect the treatise of peace between His Majesty and Hungary and Turkey," which was passed by both Houses. He also quotes from Hansard to show that Hon. R. Dandurand, leader of the Government in the Senate, answering Senator Belcourt, stated that "the Bill before the House ratified the treaty."

"From the above recital of the statute, it would easily be seen how absurd it is to refer to a treaty actually executed by the plenipotentiaries of Turkey and of all Allied Powers as merely 'proposals," he says.

"We shared with Britain in enduring the sacrifice we shared with her in bringing about the armistice, by which ths weapon, "enemy control of the Dardanelles," was wrested from the Turks; we shared with her in insisting upon the neutralization of the Straits and in formulating in express terms this, the most precious of all the guarantees, that such sacrifice shall not be endured again. The signature of our representative stands next to the signature of the British representative in the instrument that expresses the common judgment of all; our Parliament has by legislation placed the seal of its approval on that instrument; how then can we abandon Great Britain as she seeks to hold fast to the most vital of the guarantees for peace which our common sacrifice made possible, which the armistice executed and for which the treaty provided?"

PREMIER'S CRITICISM

Mr. Meighen's statement was issued in reply to one given out by the Prime Minister last Saturday, in which it was stated that "there is, in reality, no Treaty of Sevres," and that the treaty in question had never been accepted by Turkey or ratified by Great Britain or Canada. The Act of last session, the Prime Minister said, "was merely an enabling Act, dependent for its effect on the so-called treaty becoming such in reality through its acceptance by Turkey and its ratification by Great Britain and Canada."

Mr. Meighen says: "In a statement to the press, issued officially by the Government, exception is taken to an assertion made by me in an address in Toronto on Friday last. The purpose of this address was to emphasize the duty of Canada to stand by Britain in her defence of essental achievements of the late war, as set out in the Treaty of Sevres. The purpose of the Government statement in reply is to give the impression that there is no such duty or obligation and to excuse the Government's evasion and desertion.

"The statement of mine to which exception is taken by the Prime Minister is quoted in the Government's reply as follows:

"'Mr. Meighen declared that Canada was a party to the Treaty of Sevres. Not only were we a party to it, but, on the action of the present Premier, we ratified by legislation the action of our representatives in signing the treaty."

PREMIER'S EXPLANATION

"To this assertion the Prime Minister makes the following answer:

"In the first place, there is, in reality, no Treaty of Sevres. On August 10, 1920, the Allies formulated certain proposals to Turkey. These were embodied in the form of a treaty which was subsequently signed by representatives of the Allied countries, but which never became operative, and by which no one, therefore, was bound. A second and third set of proposals have since been framed, and there is now a fourth under consideration.

"Reference is then made in the reply to a Bill passed at the instance of the present Government at the last session. This Bill is described by the Government as merely an enabling measure to permit the Governor-in-Council 'in certain eventualites' to deal with the former enemy property and debts in Turkey and Hungary. The reply goes on to say that "no order-in-council has been passed under the Act referred to so that it (the treaty) has never been ratified by Canada. Moreover, proceeds the reply, 'it has never been ratified by Great Britain." The public will be able to understand the legislation of last session better by reading the legislation itself. The following is the entire statute:

PACT OF TREATY

Whereas at Trianon, on the 4th day of June, 1920, a treaty of peace (including a protcol and declaration annexed thereto) between the Allied and associated powers and Hungary, a copy of which has been laid before each house of Parliament, was signed on behalf of His Majesty acting for Canada by the plenipotentiary therein named, and whereas at Sevres on the 10th day of August, 1920, a treaty of peace between the Allied and associated powers and Turkey, a copy of which has been laid before each House of Parliament, was signed on behalf of His Majesty acting for Canada by the plenipotentiary therein named and it is expedient that the Governor-in-Council should have power to do all such things as may be proper and expedient for giving effect to the said treaties; therefore His Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate and House of Commons of Canada enacts as follows:—

1—The Governor-in-Council may make such appointments, establish such offices, make such orders-in-council, and do such things as appear to him to be necessary for carrying out the said treaty and for giving effect to any of the provisions of the said treaties.

2—Any order-n-council made under this act may provide for the imposition by summary process or otherwise of penalties in respect of breaches of the provisions thereof, and shall be laid before parliament as soon as may be after it is made, and shall have effect as if enacted in this act, but may be varied or revoked by a subsequent order-in-council.

3—Any expense incurred in carrying out the said treaties shall be defrayed out of monies provided by parliament.

MEIGHEN'S CONVERT

"Are we now to be told," continue Mr. Meighen, "that the passing of this statute is not a ratification, indeed, a definte approval of the treaty by parliament. It is even more. It is the means adopted by parliament in the advice of the Government to take practical advantage of the treaty. When this statement was going through parliament, the Leader of the Government in the Senate declared it to be a ratification of the treaty. I quote as follows from the Senate debates pages 7570.

"Mr. Belcourt—"It is extraordinary that we should pass an act to provide means for carrying out a treaty which we have not ratified."

"Mr. Dandurand—"We are now ratifying it."

"That Canada was a party to the treaty with Turkey referred to in this statute introduced into parliament by the present Prime Minister is shown by the signature of Canada's representative, Sir George H. Perley, which appears at the end of the treaty a copy of which is before me. Canada was a party just in the same way that Britain was a party, and in the same way that Turkey was a party, all of whom executed the treaty through their plenipotentiaries. It is therefore established that both my statements are absolutely true, viz:—that Canada was a party to the treaty of Sevres and that the Canadian parliament on motion of the present Premier ratified this treaty by legislation.

GOVERNMENT SHUFFLING

"It is true that formal documentary ratification for purposes of deposit at Paris with the original treaty did not come from Turkey because of the overthrow of the Turkish government whose representatives signed the treaty, and that consequently similar formal ratifications were not sent by the Allied powers. But can the Government escape by covering up its conduct under a screen of this kind? The achievements of the war in the eastern theatre and the guarantees for future peace are embodied in the terms of the treaty of Sevres. The very essence of this treaty and the most essential guarantee of future peace is the neutralization of the Sraits of the Dardanelles. This was the weapon that Turkey treacheroushly handed Germany, by the use of which the war was prolonged two years and millions of lives were sacrificed.

Great Britain strengthened by the support of her other Dominions may succeed in preserving a treasure of common value to us all. She may not wholly succeed, but what right have we to embarrass her efforts by our defection? Are we in an enviable position as by hesitation, by evasion, and with a multitude of conflicting excuses we weaken her hands and expose to the world an Empire no longer united?"

And one clear call for me
And may there be no moaning of the bar
