

How Many Pairs of Shoes Have You?

Needless to say you have more than one pair. Why do you go to the expense of several pairs when you could get along with one.

On the other hand you probably have only one pair of glasses. Why? If you wear them you must endure discomfort and poor vision until they can be repaired.

Every person who needs one pair of glasses also needs two pairs. It is a matter of habit that you face yourself to be satisfied with one. We keep a record of your prescription and can duplicate your first pair at any time.

After Ten Years

Chapter 89

Patty once remarked to Mrs. Munn. "Doesn't it seem cynical to say that a family is sometimes happier separated than together?" Mrs. Munn laughed and answered, "Why should it? That all depends, if the family is too much alike, it is such to be unhappy if it lives together. If it's very different the same thing happens. Is your family happier apart?"

Patty glanced down at the letter from her mother, which had come that morning. "I'm afraid so," she answered sadly. "That is, mother likes it better where she is. I haven't heard from Millie yet, but I think she is probably miserable." As far as her mother was concerned, Patty was right in the corner the drew from the letters was practically happy. That was as near a perfect state as a woman of her temperament could come.

She would have been happier had Millie and Patty been there, or course. But with her, as with a great many old people, it was the place that mattered, more than the people. It is a trait shared by cats. Her eyes had seen certain sights for years, her old ears were used to certain voices, certain sounds, and noises, daily she had talked with certain people, probably saying the same things over and over again.

It did not much matter whether she liked any of these people or not, most of them she didn't, but she was used to them. She welcomed them all when she saw them again, and they welcomed her. Besides, for weeks she was a heroine in a mild way, because she had spent the Winter in a distant place and a big city. Her sister's children would call her "the grocer's here, he wants to say how do," the smallest girl, a child of twelve, would report.

And Mrs. Parke, in a wool shawl "to keep off Spring chilliness, would hurry to the door to shake hands and talk with the man that had taken her orders for years. "You'll be getting back into your old house soon, perhaps," more than one person asked her. "I hear Humphrey is making money again," the bank cashier remarked as he passed her on his way home.

"Millie writes she might have her old home sometimes," Coral said, coming in one afternoon to "all. All these things tended to bring Mrs. Parke back to her old life. Personal happiness might be attained if she could move into her old house, with all the carpets, curtains, and furniture just as they had been for many years, then she could forget she had ever gone away.

And yet "Wasn't the city awful noisy," Maudie asked, on one of her frequent calls. "Oh, not so very," Mrs. Parke answered. "Of course parts were but then, we chose a quiet neighborhood." "Well, of course, I suppose there are quiet spots in New York," Maudie was willing to give the distant city credit for one or two good points. "But weren't you awfully cramped in a tiny flat, after you were used to such a large house?" Coral wondered.

Would Mrs. Parke admit it? "Oh no, somehow it seems natural to live in a small place. In the city," she said. "Besides, it was so convenient. The work was nothing." "Oh well, of course, since you hadn't a servant, that was a good thing."

For some time there has been a demand for Elementary Secretaries to give special help to mothers with children. This has been met by the appointment of Miss Alice M. Harrison who is doing most efficient work.

The officers of the General Board of the Council for the year are: Chairman, L. W. Simms, St. John, N. B.; Vice-Chairman, Gen. D. Wallace, Halifax, N. S.; Secretary, Rev. P. M. Milligan, Halifax, N. S.; Treasurer, Robert Richardson, St. John, N. B.

If Skin Breaks Out, Is Fiery, Itchy Or Rough, Use Sulphur

Just the moment you apply Mentho-Sulphur to an itching, burn or broken out skin, the itching stops and healing begins, says a cold cream specialist. This sulphur preparation, made into a pleasant cold cream, gives such a quick relief, even to fiery eczema, that the mental you wish it to liberate has ever been found to take its place.

Because of its germ destroying properties it quickly subdues the itching, cools, the irritation and heals the eczema right up, leaving a clear, smooth skin in place of ugly eruptions, rash, pimples or roughness.

You do not have to wait for improvement. It quickly shows. You can get a little jar of Mentho-Sulphur at any drug store. "I'm afraid so," she answered sadly. "That is, mother likes it better where she is. I haven't heard from Millie yet, but I think she is probably miserable."

"No, it wasn't home. I like my old friends best. Of course we saw lots of people, there was Patty's friend, Mrs. Munn, who visited me last Summer, she was just down the street." This, too, was a pleasant impression to hold out for Mrs. Munn with her French maid and her lovely frocks had made an enormous sensation. "And Paul was always around, and Patty was out to dinners and theatres with him most of the time and Millie found lots of friends."

So she admitted to nothing except that it was pleasant, this strange little lady who had revealed her hard lot as a city resident only a week or so before. She was really fairly happy now, as Patty guessed.

At a recent meeting of the Executive of the Maritime Religious Education Council which is the Maritime Sunday School Association reorganized, an ambitious program was planned for the coming year. Under the auspices of the Council and in accordance with the plan of denominational co-operation the Denominational Secretaries, Frank M. Milligan, Presbyterian, H. S. B. Sirohard, Methodist and Walter C. Mochum, Baptist, will unite their efforts with the Secretaries of the Council, J. M. Gregg, Boys' Work, Miss Mary R. Allison, Girls' Work and Miss Alice H. Harrison, Children's Division, to hold some 225 district conventions during the year, covering the entire Maritime territory.

During the past year the Council has taken over the Y. M. C. A. the responsibility for the promotion of organized Boys' Work and the Canadian Standard Efficiency Training Program in the Churches and Sunday Schools and now provides the Boys' Work Secretaries with the promotion of the Canadian Girls in Training Program has been taken over from the Y. W. C. A. and Miss Mary R. Allison, the Girls' Work Secretary added to the staff.

Throughout the empire today people are wondering what man of man is Viscount Lascelles who at noon became the husband of the empire's daughter, The Star heard this morning an intimate little story of Lascelles as a student of Oxford, which gives insight into his character as that of a man considerate and generous towards his fellows. The story was told by Mr. W. E. Hughes now of Toronto, but formerly an employe in one of the Oxford colleges during the Viscount's student days.

During one of the Oxford vacations a number of students, including Lascelles, were invited to join a party to do some shooting on the Duke of Argyll's Scottish estate. It was a large party of ladies and gentlemen which gathered at King's Cross station, London. There were boxes of guns and rugs, and hampers galore and great ado in getting properly settled for the night on the train. But in all

The death of Rich was revealed by accident. Mrs. Annie Berger, who was passing the store noticed the store bent on robbery. Rich was killed by a blow from a stove shaker, which was afterwards found hidden in a coal stove nearby.

Rich was hit over the left ear with the stove shaker and his skull crushed, death being almost instantaneous. The body was taken to the undertaking rooms of Cassidy & Kane where an autopsy was performed by Dr. E. T. Neal.

Rich was found lying behind the counter in the back of the shop. Inspection showed that the murdered man had put up a hard fight before his assailant landed the fatal blow. His shirt had been wrenched open, his necktie disarranged, and part of a heavy beard was found near the body. His pockets were empty and the body lay in a large pool of fast congealing blood. Blood also was found on some nearby objects.

An examination showed that $2.95 in money had been taken by the murderer as well as two watches one worn by the victim, and another, a wrist watch which he had purchased that day as a chlorinating drinking water for the gift for his daughter and which he was going to take to a jeweler to have valued.

With these meagre facts in their possession the police, County Attorney Blanchard and others began to realize that they had struck into the mysterious as a salient developed, although two suspicious characters were taken to police headquarters and given a grilling examination. They were able to make satisfactory explanation of their whereabouts at the time of the murder and have been eliminated for the present from consideration.

What the police would like to know is who the stranger is who visited the little store at about 8 o'clock, the time when Rich is believed to have been murdered. Jacob Rich leaves a wife, Sarah, and a son and daughter. He was about fifty-eight years of age and so far as known did not have an enemy in the world. Robbery as a motive with death as the result of interference is the motive of which the police are working out an answer to one of the puzzling murder cases. Penobscot county has known for a decade.

Bangor Clothing Merchant Slain In His Store

BANGOR, Me., March 3.—Jacob Rich, who keeps a clothing store at 28 French street, was found dead during the night, having entered the store bent on robbery. Rich was killed by a blow from a stove shaker, which was afterwards found hidden in a coal stove nearby.

The Story of Robin Hood

ONCE upon a time, there lived a great and good knight whose pleasure it was to gather little children around him to listen to the wonderful tales of Robin Hood in Nottingham Forest. As he rode hither and thither in shining armour, upon a beautiful white steed, he felt very saddened to see how many frail and undeveloped children there were in his country.

So it came to his mind one day, that to be a doer of brave deeds such as the famous Robin Hood, one should be very strong and robust. It was then that the Knight hit upon a plan whereby he should find the secret which would cause all little folk to grow up stalwart and strong like Robin Hood.

So, gathering together many little children, he brought them to a wonderful castle. There each child enjoyed the best that fair land could offer. Now, while every child fared sumptuously, there was one thing they were fed very sparingly—and that was BREAD. Meats, vegetables and fruits they had in plenty—but only an ounce or two of bread daily.

But for one little boy—a frail, wee fellow—the good Knight waived this rule. In fact, this little lad diet was almost entirely BREAD with rich, sweet butter. Then the Knight left the castle and went to a far country. One year passed by—and the Knight returned. Gathering all the children into one large banquet hall, the Knight had each thoroughly examined by the King's own physician. And what do you think? That frail little boy who had eaten nothing but good BREAD and butter—had grown into the strongest child of all. A powerful boy! He was pronounced one hundred per cent physically fit. Oh, how the great Knight rejoiced. At last he had found out the secret. To attain a strong, sturdy body and steady nerves, one had only to eat plenty of good wholesome BREAD.

It was then the Knight took himself off to the great Western Prairies and there he built a wonderful Mill, which was to make the richest and best flour in the land. Poor wheat he sown—only the cream of the finest Western Canadian Hard Spring Wheat would the Knight allow to be used for his rich nourishing flour. The flour was made under the most scientific and hygienic conditions. This fine flour of such marvellous quality, the Knight named "ROBIN HOOD."
