Interpreting The War

By Kirke L. Simpson
 Associated Press Staff Writer

Parliamentary re-endorsement of Prime Minister Churchill's war leadership was so clearly fore-shadowed that the virtually unanimous vote of confidence extended him is less interesting than certain remarks made during the preceding debate.

From the Prime Minister himself and from his Admiralty Lieutenant, Capt. Austin Hudson, Civil Lord of the Admiralty, came intimations that Britain is making means to make her ship losses at sea. Details were withheld for obvious military reasons; yet in effect notice was given that British shipping loss figures for the last month are apt to prove less heavy than anticipated.

That can be deduced from Mr. Churchill's declaration that a dangerous shipping crisis would not come before 1942, and that United States ship construction would meet it then.

Capt. Hudson indicated that a heavy toll of submarines is being taken, although refusing to reveal numbers or methods.

Just what has happened at sea can be guessed from reports. Immobilization of the Nazi battleships Scharnhorst and Gneisenau in Brest harbor, France, since early in April is an important factor. The heaviest shipping losses this year came in March while they were at sea. They have been bombed by the Royal Air Force nearly a score of times since they put into Brest to refuel or for repairs, and probably are out of action indefinitely now.

Capt. Hudson's veiled reference to the sinking of the U-boats hinted at another item on the British score-sheet. Loss of skilled and experienced submarine commanders is probably a greater blow to the Germans than the loss of the ships and their crews.

Nazi submarines lost in this war may be quickly replaced. Competent U-boat commanders are not scarce in the world, and the nerves of Nazi U-boat crews to be ignored. The break in German morale in the last war started there.

LONDON FAMILY IS ON THE AIR

LONDON, May 7.—(CP)—Every-day life of a London family while enemy bombers rained destruction on the capital forms the theme of a broadcast series in which a Canadian soldier plays a prominent role.

"Front Line Family" is the name of the series, broadcast by the British Broadcasting Corporation to the Dominion and other parts of the Empire six nights weekly.

Private John McLaren of (676 Thurlow St.) Vancouver plays the role of a Canadian airman in the serial and also acts as announcer. He meets the family, described as the "British family Robinson," at a canteen and later is billeted on them.

McLaren has been granted three months' leave of absence for work on the program with the B.B.C.

Women Rally To South Africa's Victory Effort

By GLADYS ARNOLD
 Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA, May 7.—(CP)— How the women of South Africa are rallying to the Empire's needs in wartime and specifically to the many services in the war effort of the South African Union is reflected in a "Salute to Britain" edition of the Cape Times.

Prime Minister Jan Christiaan Smuts issued a call for "100,000 women to work for victory" and recruiting in the voluntary and official auxiliary services is putting thousands of South African women into uniform.

Not only have women's auxiliary services been officially recognized since the outbreak of war, but South Africa has several thousands of women engaged in the Women's Auxiliary Air Force and the Women's Auxiliary Army Services.

A special military command receives their applications directly. In addition the voluntary services are asked to train and then submit applications from their own members. If accepted, feminine trainees receive their notice to appear before a military board of medical examiners. If passed they then must show proof of being trained for one of the army services—transport or clerical.

Wood Shavings TRIMMING HATS

PARIS, May 7.—(AP)— New Paris hat bursting into curls. Felt models are having their brims clipped and curled up like a baby's ringlets. Straw boaters are trailing organdie streamers that fall into curls in the rear and back. Wood shavings fresh from the carpenter's block are curling roily on day and evening toques, disguised as fine feathers by coatings of paint and lacquer.

The deft scissors of girls are turning out these "birsute" hats. A grey felt savior has three felt curls atop, across the brim front and felt "skewers" falling down from the under brim. A navy blue model is fenced around with curls for which the brim edge is slashed at intervals and rolled up.

Long corkscrew curls are fashioned of white organdie strips. Six of these fall from the back of a bakou straw shape in royal blue, "corkscrew" curls and rolled up.

Vivid shades like green, violet and blue, are among the paint colors going on wood shavings, together with dull gold, to fashion toques the size of tea cups.

Fifty Years of Fruit Legislation

Standardization in grading and packing is an essential factor in the marketing of tree fruits, writes R. B. Robinson, Chief, Fruit and Vegetable Inspection, Dominion Department of Agriculture, in the quarterly review of the Canadian Society of Technical Agriculture and in an article on grading, packing, and inspection of tree fruits, gives the story of the evolution of the Fruit, Vegetables and Food Act of Canada, passed in 1934. This Act replaced an act of 1923 which had its inception nearly fifty years ago.

It was in 1882 that the first legislation enacted in Canada governing fresh fruit, when No. 1 and No. 2 grades for apples exported from the Dominion were established. The Fruit Marks Act was next passed in 1901, which dealt with apples only, but included grades of apples sold in Canada as well as for those exported. The scope of this legislation was extended from time to time by subsequent acts. The Fruit Act of 1923 which included other tree fruits as well as apples.

With the addition of honey, the Fruit Act was amended to become the Fruit and Honey Act in 1934. The next year, the Fruit and Honey Act and the Root Vegetables Act were amalgamated and named the Fruit, Vegetables and Honey Act, the grading, packing, and inspection, which is now in force. It deals with marketing, inspection, advertising, shipping, and sale of produce, including tree fruits, but the Regulations governing grades constitute minimum requirements only. Under the British North America Act, the Fruit and Honey Act does not extend to any Province, but the Provinces of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Quebec, Ontario, and British Columbia have enacted similar legislation to deal with inter-provincial trade within their boundaries. In most cases, the Provincial Acts and Regulations are enforced by Dominion inspectors acting simultaneously under both Dominion and Provincial legislation.

REBUILDING JERUSALEM

In the days of Nehemiah, we are told, he set about to rebuild Jerusalem. Some years before, strong enemies had besieged the great city of Jerusalem, laid it waste and took most of the inhabitants into bondage. Palestine was about in the same condition as Poland is to-day. The story of the return of the party of the Jews to restore their beloved city is told in the Book of Nehemiah.

"In the fourth chapter it says: 'And it came to pass when our enemies heard that it was known to us, and God had brought their counsel to nought, that we returned all of us to the wall every one upon his work. And it came to pass from that time forth, that the half

STINGING NETTLES BECOME VALUABLE

Stinging nettles are to be converted from a national liability into a source of war funds. During the coming summer, about 100 tons of the common stinging nettle (Urtica dioica) will be required for the production of the green pigment chlorophyll. This is used both medicinally as a nerve tonic, and for coloring scaps and other products. One of the largest firms of manufacturing chemists in Great Britain has installed new plants and will more than double its output of chlorophyll.

Collection of nettles, which have to be dried before they are sent to the factory, where they are worth thirty to forty pounds sterling per ton, will be carried out by the Women's Institutes of Britain's countryside.

Recruits are then required to take the oath of obedience under the Union's Military Services code which subjects them to exactly the same discipline as soldiers—in fact makes them soldiers.

In asking the women of South Africa to push their voluntary services (S.A.W.V.S.) from 55,000 up to 100,000 members, General Smuts urged training so the army would have a pool from which women and girls might be drawn for the official services. "Make it your objective to have 15,000 cheerful, efficient and highly trained women prepared and ready to go anywhere on 'active service,'" he advised.

Mrs. Smuts, wife of the Prime Minister, is an active member and an enthusiastic campaigner for the feminine services. In a Union-wide rally for recruiting she addressed a mass meeting of South African citizens in Cape Town. "The more girls we get into the commands and air force the more pleased the General will be," she said.

"We have women on duty now in factories and making armaments, in hospitals, but also in our air depots, driving our transports and attached to the coastal command. Indeed I have had many many women saying they are anxious to go into the firing line and fight this war to a finish as well."

South Africa's voluntary services also owe much of their efficiency to the work of the Governor-General, the Governor-General. She is also the honorary commander-in-chief.

Strong Organization

Chief of service and liaison officer with the regular army is Col. E. Wermulder of the permanent forces. The 55,000 women are divided into 12 commands and 14 provincial commands. These commands include Orange Free State, Pretoria, Southern and Northern Natal, Johannesburg, Transvaal and so on.

The whole effort of the auxiliary services is united in the Union and each section is allotted a certain quota of work to do. Services are divided under the following headings: Hospital, including surgical supplies and comforts, transport, civic services, entertainment, active service, and replacement. Each command divides its women to handle these and to work in co-operation with their corresponding groups in the other provinces. Mrs. Smuts said it tended to co-ordinate effort avoid neglect and eliminate overlapping.

In addition to looking after their own forces, the S.A.W.V.S. cares for the needs of the regular army. Forces and Dutch ships who put into South African ports. "No allied ship leaves our ports without every man being catered and furnished with complete supply of woollens and comforts," Mrs. Smuts said. When convoys arrive 400 cars are ready and waiting to take men for drivers for meals in private South African homes.

As men are called up for active service, or women in the auxiliaries the replacement committee go into action providing the latest developed trained girls and women to take their places. "Our objective is that every man and woman will be working full time on our war effort," Lady Duncan said in an address during the recruiting rally.

Explains Control Sheep Worm Diseases

In order to prevent losses among their flocks in Canada it is essential for sheep farmers to control certain parasitic worms in their sheep. There is nodular disease, and stomach worm disease, both developed by the sheep picking up young worms with the grass in contaminated pastures; there is black scour, caused directly by thousands of almost invisible worms in the intestines, and there are other worms, such as lungworms, tape worms, and liver flukes.

Until now that is until the present advent of phenothiazine, a powerful non-poisonous worm-killing drug discovered by Canadian parasites in sheep has taken the form of drenching, or giving capsules during the summer months, states the War Time Production Series Bulletin No. 51. Such treatments have been effective in preventing and curing stomach worm diseases caused by the twisted-worm but they have not acted as truly preventive measures. They had no effect on the nodular disease, which is more dangerous of worm diseases, and the autumn diarrhoea or scouring in all parts of the Dominion.

The bulletin, which deals with the prevention and control of nodular diseases and parasites of the stomach and intestines of sheep by phenothiazine compound tablet, was prepared by Dr. W. E. Swales, Division of Animal Pathology, Science Service, Dominion Department of Agriculture, and is issued by the Agriculture and Extension Division, Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. This drug is non-poisonous and over-dosing is little or no danger of over-dosing. Care of course, is required, but full instructions are given in the bulletin about how to administer the treatment.

TURKEY RISKS

The loss of insured turkeys during the U. S. midwestern blizzard last fall was so great that some companies no longer will insure them.
