THE annals of trade afford no more striking example of quality and publicity coming out of the top than that exhibited by the Pure Gold Jelly. Everyone of the twenty-three imitators rely on using the "cold steal" along. These tactics may fool the public once or twice but in the end quality triumphs. Low prices, low quality and low methods generally go together. The public now require quality first, they are not too well off for cheap goods. They are not hard times and the people are right in insisting what they ask for.

A man up in Bathurst, N. B., is doubly afflicted. He has an impediment in his speech and a balky horse. As a consequence of these tribulations, he sometimes becomes angry and uses, or attempts to use language more emphatic than elegant. He also draws a crowd about him. The other day when he tried to start his horse the animal simply backed the wagon up against the fence and refused to move further. The driver first plied the whip, then tried leading and persuasive tactics, for awhile, then pulled the horse's ears and finally tried choking, but all without effect. All the while he was using "language," but in broken and explosive form. There was in his linguistic efforts little of that easy flow and perspicuity that has been commended by the grammarians. As usual a crowd had gathered and found satisfaction in sometimes offering gratuitous advice and at other times in praising the horse. "He's a fine puller, he is," said one. "He's a drawer from way back," said another. "Y-y-y-es, I s-s-ee he can draw a lot—fools around," said the stuttering man.

THERMOMETER READINGS.—The following is a comparative statement:

Table with 2 columns: Date, Temperature. August 12th, 1901: 73, 72, 69, 68, 75, 80.5, 74, 74.

1.20 inch of rain fell between Saturday afternoon and Sunday morning, being almost as much as for whole month of July 1901—(viz 1.25 inch).

EASTERN NOTES.—Haying is over, and the bare fields and cooler evenings warn us that summer is passing. As previously supposed crop is hardly up to the average. Fishing is still most discouraging, as nothing in the shape of bait is to be had. A few mackerel have been hooked on the north side, but neither the quantity nor the price is likely to make the fishermen rich.—We have supplied our share of the contingent who have gone to conquer the wheat fields of the Northwest, and though no such manifestations of patriotism, or patriotic enthusiasm signalled their departure as were witnessed at the departure of a more warlike contingent for the fields of South Africa, yet as much do we wish them God's speed and a safe return, and believe that as they roll westward for days through British territory, as they meet and mingle and work with men of kindred speech and similar lineage their views will be widened their patriotism strengthened, and their national feelings intensified. The men from here going were Stewart Anderson, Eyerett Fraser, Joseph Bailey, Peter Mellick, George Gillis, Talbot Stewart, Willie McDonald, Willie Robertson, Ira Kennedy, Seth McLean, Frank Stewart and Gordon Stewart, the latter accompanied by his bride of a few days, formerly Miss Esther Townsend. They are all in the prime and vigor of early manhood not afraid of work and their impressions of the country, whether they will call it the "wild and woolly West" or the "Golden West" will be formed by their experience of life on the plains. Only one man went from here last year on the harvest excursion, John Zenas McDonald of South Lake, and this year he is serving with Baden Powell's constabulary in South Africa.—Mrs. Samuel McDonald, of Dundas, and Mrs. Knight of Souris spent Sunday here with friends.
