Giant Clock Worked By Men

—LONDON, Mar. 26.—The famous clock of St. Paul's Cathedral was worked by hand the other day, hour after hour, by men who sat high up amid the intricate mechanism. In front of them was a watch, accurately adjusted, and they took it in turns to operate the lever which moved the giant hand of the clock minute by minute.

So well did they stick to their task that no one, except those in the secret, guessed that anything was the matter. When the clock stopped early in the morning, the cathedral officials realized that tens of thousands of City workers would look in vain to the dial in order to check their watches. Experts were hurriedly sent for, they discovered that a worm pin was the cause of the defect, and that it would be the work of many hours to replace it.

Repairs went on all day, and all the time, the emergency staff saw to it that the great clock showed accurate time. Lord Grimthorpe, the designer of Big Ben, was also responsible for the clock in St. Paul's Cathedral. This was erected in 1870 and followed another famous clock which, since 1708, had been London's standard timepiece. It is an old commentary on things in England that the clocks of St. Paul's and Big Ben were designed by Lord Grimthorpe, who was a lawyer—and that St. Paul's the glory of English cathedrals, was planned by Wren—who had no training as an architect.

Many a man's head is full of emptiness.

Revised Prayer Book Appears

NO FURTHER ALTERATIONS CAN BE PERMITTED IN PUBLICATION

LONDON, Mar. 26.—With the final revisions of the House of Bishops, the new Book of Common Prayer of the Church of England, as published today, is now on a "take it or leave it" basis. No further alterations can be permitted and the Church and the nation must stand or fall by both the Book and the Parliamentary measure as they now appear. The proposed rules concerning reservation of the Sacrament are also published, and furnish perhaps the most controversial addition. The consecration bread and wine shall be served in an aumbry set in the north wall of the sanctuary or chapel, or shall be reserved in some other place approved by the Bishop, it is set forth. The aumbry shall consist of a safe firmly fixed into the wall and provided with an access or lock and key which shall be accessible only to those who have the right to remove the consecrated bread and wine.

Locked Receptacle

The receptacle wherein the bread and wine are reserved shall be kept locked and the door shall only be opened when it is necessary to remove or replace the consecrated elements for the purpose of communion or renewal.

"The consecrated bread and wine shall be renewed at least once weekly."

"The manner in which the reserved sacrament is to be conveyed to the sick is to be subject to the direction of the Bishop, it is provided.

The new preface to the Prayer Book, which is most interesting, declares no change in doctrine is intended. It says, in part:

Change Seems Grievous

"There will always be some to whom a change in that which has been hallowed by long use, seems grievous and fraught with danger. They would stand upon the old paths and follow in their worship of God the pattern which their fathers set."

But, the preface continues, they cannot be blind to what has been happening during 250 years. "The old barriers are broken down as by sea, land and air," says the preface. "Men are brought ever closer together. The England of the 16th and 17th centuries has become the mother of a great commonwealth of people still linked together in common loyalty. With the rise in numbers has come also a shifting of power from the few to the many."

"If the minds of any be troubled because we have allowed another order of Holy Communion as well as the old, and have made further provision for Communion of the sick, let them not think that we mean thereby any change of doctrine."

Love is a conspiracy of two against the world—marriage is the world's reply.

Chang Expresses Sorrow For Events At Nanking

(Canadian Press) LONDON, Mar. 26.—Chang Tso Lin, the Manchurian war lord, expressing sorrow for the events at Nanking in the past few days, believes that the powers should direct their action against the Bolsheviks rather than against the Chinese, says a Peking despatch to the Westminster Gazette.

Chang Tso Lin, who is commander in chief of the northern forces, declared that if the powers would guarantee the Manchurian frontier against Soviet Russia, he could liberate 150,000 reliable troops to help the Shangtungese who have just lost Shanghai and Nanking. Chang, the despatch says, wants the powers to help him with money and munitions. The Manchurian war lord also indicated that he believed the Nanking attacks were the sequel to a lion with the Cantoneses at Hankow.

Girl Who Knew Too Much

(By British United Press) BERLIN, Mar. 26.—Dr. Wyrki, a high official, and Fraulein Sally Nowak, a typist, both employed by the local authorities in Breslau, worked together and fell in love.

Later Fraulein Nowak was found in a forest near Breslau with a bullet through her head. Suspicion fell on her lover and a warrant was issued for his arrest. When the police went to his house Dr. Wyrki refused to let them enter, and through a glass door they could see that he had armed himself with a pistol.

They fetched a police dog, broke down the door, and set the dog on him. At the moment the dog sprang the man attempted to shoot himself but was only wounded slightly. When he was finally overcome he confessed that he had murdered his mistress.

She had, he stated, threatened that if he did not get a divorce from his wife and marry her she would make their intrigue known to the public. She knew all his secrets and that he had taken money which was in his charge and was unable to replace it. The wretched man had shot her in despair.

When cooking sauer kraut place it in a large beanpot with three or four pork chops on top and cover with water (cold) and bake in the oven three or four hours.

Hair brushes may be cleaned by dipping in a strong solution of alum and water. This protects the bristles and prevents their turning yellow.

The Magistrate: "But what evidence have you that these men are insane?"

P. C. A. 1: "Well, Your Worship, the Scotsman was standing in the middle of the street chucking away bank notes and the other was picking them up and giving them back to him."

The Irish Agent Staged at Montague Splendid Success

On Wednesday evening March 27th the Georgetown dramatic club presented their St. Patrick's play to a large and appreciative audience.

The above mentioned club deserves a large amount of credit for the great success, which their painstaking efforts at theatrical perfection obtained for them. Before saying anything about the cast, special mention should be made about the stage scenery, the grave yard scene during the second act and the mountain scene of the third act, were certainly victories of imagination and labour. As in most of the Irish plays, the plot of "The Irish Agent" centered around the collection of rents, by a hard-hearted, selfish and cruel landlord, whose unscrupulous demands must be satisfied at all costs. The tenant's affianced daughter becomes the object of his with intrigue, with promise of happiness, with cold-blooded threats, he cannot obtain her consent.

His villainous character is discovered before the end and he is brought to justice. Around many dramatic situations, the author has woven a story abounding in clever comedy and genuine pathos. Sorrowing we follow Con O'Neill and his fair daughter through the dark clouds of adversity victimized on all sides by the cruel and insidious words and actions of Shaun Brady, the agent, and his accomplice Darby Riorqui. Father Lora, the parish priest, gains our hearts as breathless we listen to his words of consolation, telling the afflicted family that those dark clouds must show their silver lining. The courage, wit, and unselfishness of Ligha Murphy and Barney Burke as they trail the villain to earth inspire us to the wholesome respect for those who love justice and hate iniquity. In the young Englishman, we admire that firmness of purpose, so typical of the race when Justice must prevail. To profit by Kate Hennessey's role, we must be capable of feeling alternate sentiments of sympathy and wrath, as we accompany her in her culinary occupations and in her wanderings through cemetery, over mountains, and through the dale mostly in Murphy's company. The following did "Professional Justice" to the parts assigned to them:—

- Con O'Neill, and Irish farmer—Horman Levander
- Shaun Brady, the agent—P. A. Scully
- Darby Riorqui, his accomplice—Temple Glord
- Ligha Murphy, Con's best friend—Joseph McPhee
- Barney Burke, a strolling fiddler—James Boudreault
- Frank Sheldon, a young Englishman—John Donovan
- Father Tom, the parish priest—George McDonald
- Mary O'Neill, Con's daughter—Miss R. H. Harrington
- Norah O'Neill, Con's daughter—Mary Condon

IN MEMORIAM
 MR. JOSEPH SMITH
 It is with deep regret we record the death of Mr. Joseph Smith, which took place at his home at Lake Verde on Saturday, February 26th, after a two weeks illness of pneumonia. The deceased who was 89 years of age, was a man of many fine qualities, an honest, upright, and trustworthy, neighbor always ready and willing to lend a helping hand in time of need, his genial disposition and jovial conversation made him a welcome visitor by young and old to all homes. His death will leave a vacancy in the community, which will be hard to fill. During his illness he was frequently visited by his pastor, who administered to him the last rites of the Catholic Church. He leaves to mourn, besides a wide circle of friends, one daughter, Mrs. Frederick Duffy, Lake Verde. His wife having predeceased him six years ago. His funeral, a large cortege of people, was held on Monday, February 28th to St. Joachim's Church, Vernon River, where a Requiem High Mass was celebrated by the pastor, Rev. P. D. McGuigan who also officiated at the grave. The pall bearers were: John Kelly, James Curley, John T. Grimes, James McAdam, P. M. Callaghan and James Trainor.—R. I. P.
