1. In the midst of change, we must have the unchanging. Astronomy may change, but we have the changeless stars. Chemistry may change, but the fundamental elements remain.

2. The Human Heart craves for the permanent, Augustine said we were made for God, and we are restless till we rest with God.

3. The unchanging Christ continues with us through all our changes, "Lo I am with you always," in adversity in defeat, in failure as well as when we succeed.

4. One must try sincerely to bring one's life to its true fulfillment by using our lives in the way God intended.

What might have proved a serious accident occurred on Sunday near Lake Verde when a Ford Coupe passed another Ford Coupe going at a terrific rate of speed. Not many seconds after the car that had been passed came around a curve and seen the former car lying on its side in the drain. The occupants being three young gentlemen, were gathering themselves up when the other car came by, none the worse of the accident, except that their feelings were a little upset, but the driver being a good old sport, actually smiled when the car he had passed a second or two before kept going at its same rate between thirty and thirty-five miles.

Mr. R. Rose, Mr. Stewart, paid a visit here Monday.

Mr. W. A. Dennis, city, made a business trip here this week.

The new Saint Mary's Church is now nearing completion and we understand the date Sept. 7th has been set for the opening. The people of this congregation as well as those of the whole diocese rejoice to see again their beloved church risen phoenix-like from that mass of charred ruins which so shocked and grieved everyone on that winters morning in early 1929.

From the outside the new edifice presents an appearance not unlike that of the older building save that the towering steeple, pointing fringed toward the skies, is missing. The interior is very pleasing, finished in pure white plaster with woodwork in Douglas fir, three very beautiful altars in marble and gold erected by a Montreal firm, a beautiful marble rail given by Saint Marys Club, Boston, and all so perfectly blended that one has a sense of reverential awe in this wonderful structure shortly to be dedicated. The pews are of oak; and while temporary windows are in, it is intended to have all beautiful Memorial windows of stained glass.

Mr. A. L. Owen left on Wednesday morning for Roxbury, Mass., to attend the funeral of his late sister, Mrs. J. G. Montgomery.

BANK OF ENGLAND NOTES

It is beneath the dignity of the Bank of England to take, or even to appear to take, advantage of accidents to their notes, and, if there is any possibility of establishing the identity of one of them, it is sure to be duly honored. Even where a note is entirely destroyed, proper evidence of the fact of destruction will be accepted and payment made. A lost note will in some cases be paid; and which the liberal attitude of the directors in a case of this kind involved them in a loss of £30,000.

A certain bank director declared that he had lost a note for that amount, and, upon his giving an indemnity for the sum in the event of the note ever turning up, the money was to be paid to him. Many years after his death an unknown person presented the note. The paper was undeniably good, and the Bank had no alternative but to cash it, as it was payable to the bearer on demand, and, as the heirs of the bank director who had lost it repudiated all liability, the money could not be recovered.

TRIUMPH OVER BLINDNESS.

Miss Hazel Winter, a blind student of Chorley Wood College, who recently achieved the remarkable success of winning a £60 open scholarship for his history at Oxford, is only seventeen years of age, and at her examination had to compete with the best women university candidates in the country.

Miss Winter was born blind, and throughout her school days has been entirely dependent on books in Braille type. Some of the text-books required by her for the recent examination were specially copied out in manuscript by volunteer Braille writers attached to the National Institute for the blind.

Blind almost from birth, Mr. A. V. Coldwell, a Barnsley solicitor, has also triumphed over his disability. Conducting his first case recently in the local police court, the magistrates congratulated him on his presentation of it. Mr. Coldwell does most of his own typing, draws up his own documents, and in court refers to his law books by means of Braille type.

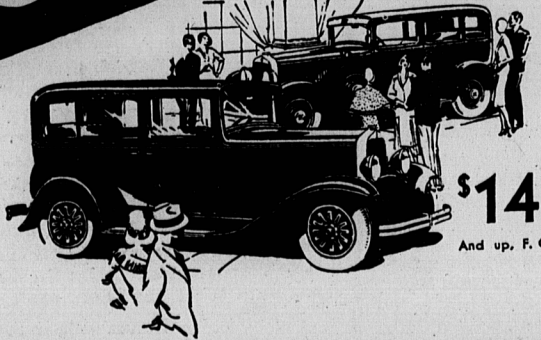

VENDING BY AUTOMATIC MACHINES IN GREAT BRITAIN

The automatic vending machine industry of Great Britain is very large, over 300,000 additional machines having been erected during the last two years, writes Douglas S. Cole, Canadian Trade Commissioner in Bristol, in the forthcoming issue of the Commercial Intelligence Journal. Practically all automatic vending machines are owned by operating companies. They are manufactured by separate concerns chiefly in England though a few German and some Swedish machines are in use. The retention of the war-time Defence of the Realm Act (D. O. R. A.), which strictly limited the hours of sale in stores has encouraged the vending of nearly every type of consumable goods through automatic machines placed on shop fronts, particularly in side streets. The halfpenny is the unit; for the more successful of the chewing gum machines. Chocolate matches, razor blades and gramophone needles are made up for at a penny; cheap cigarettes at 10 pence. Specially chocolates and all the popular brands of cigarettes use the silver sixpenny piece as their unit; for the more successful of the one penny centrop each from 50 to 600 machines, replenishing stock once a fortnight at a cost of 10 pence each per week.
