The ice boats left Cape Tormentine yesterday morning at seven fifty and arrived in Cape Traverse at eleven o'clock. The boats left Cape Traverse at eight five for Cape Tormentine.

It is claimed that Hugh Monaghan, City, has the honor of sending the first commercial message from Charlottetown to London over the cable laid between the Old and New Countries in 1868. The message asked to have his vessel insured.

The following Methodist Congregations have sent contributions to the Wesley Mission Room receipts. Bellefleur $20, Charlottetown Grace church $22, Grace church S. S. $20, Grace church Epworth League $20, Carwall $20.05, O'Leary $30, Chs. Atkinson First Methodist $167.25, B. Deane $30, Cape Wolfe $10.

Mr. Justice Fitzgerald, Dr. S. R. Jenkins, Jas. Haver and J. D. Seaman waited on the Governing Council yesterday afternoon and presented their petition asking that active steps be taken to forward the Anti-Tuberculosis movement. The delegation was very hospitably entertained and were promised hearty co-operation in this good work.

News reached this city yesterday of the sudden death of Alice, beloved wife of Frank W. Hood, Bradford, Mass. Mrs. Hood and her husband had gone to visit their youngest daughter in New Hampshire. While there she became ill, and was at once removed to a Hospital where an operation was performed on Thursday, but of no avail. The cause of death was Pulmonary Embolism. There is also another daughter left to mourn. Mrs. Ralph Fairbanks, whose whose husband was found dead in July last. Mr. Hood is the only son of the late Samuel Hood, formerly of Crapaud. The latter was a brother of R. H. Hood, Cornwall, and J. M. Hood, Tryon.

A grand social and entertainment was held in Glen William Hall, Star of the Boyne Lodge room, on Friday the 29th Jan. The hall was filled by the good people of the vicinity and a surrounding district. A very clever program was carried out, including an opening chorus composed by some of the talented young ladies and sung to the air of John Brown's body, also music, songs, comic dances, recitations and comic dialogues, which kept the audience in humor until the sale of baskets and candy commenced. There was very good order kept, despite the over-crowded state of the building. Especially by those from other parts. There were several cases of rowdiness around the building and the parties are well-known and their names are held. The sum of $45.00 was realized, which is in aid of renovating the hall. The committee are grateful to all who took part, also to the ladies who so generously brought a basket and helped so much to make the social a success. Com.

The firemen were again called out last evening about 7 o'clock for a fire in Zion Church, Richmond St. City.

The fire caught in the floor of the church from the register where it comes up from the furnace in the basement, on Sunday School room.

A new furnace was installed in the Church last week and the heat produced was so great that the floor surrounding the register caught fire.

About the first noticing the fire were the singer and operator of New Wonderland, who were passing and who shovelled snow on the flames to keep them from spreading until the alarm could be given and the firemen arrive. Great credit is due them for their thoughtfulness.

When the firemen arrived the fire was well under way but was hard to get at, as it was between the ceiling of the basement and the floor of the main Church. To make things worse a dense smoke filled the Church and basement, but the firemen entered both in a short time had extinguished all blaze.

The smoke soon cleared out of the basement but it was fully half an hour before it was fit to enter the Church. The fire had spread between the beams and necessitated tearing up a great deal of the floor of the Church and ceiling of the basement.

Some of the stained glass windows were broken to let the smoke out.

No visible damage was done to the pipe organ, although it will be slightly affected by the smoke.

The damages are estimated at between five hundred and one thousand dollars all covered by insurance.

LATER. The janitor was at the Church at the time the fire began and was shovelling the snow from in front of the church when he smelt the smoke and rushed in. The fire was just starting and he tried to put it out with his hands and got them pretty badly burned. He then took off his overcoat and endeavored to smother the flames but when he stopped it at once, place it burst out another. He says one or two buckets of water would have then put it all out but he could not get it.

When the firemen arrived and the hose had been coupled onto the hydrant in front of the Bank of Nova Scotia and the water turned on, the hydrant flew out of the ground and the water poured forth like a geyser for over three hours. Hundreds of thousands of gallons of water were lost and poured down Richmond Street to Prince and down Prince the harbor, flooding the several cross streets as it passed making traveling almost impossible. It was a regular flood, and the volume of the cement sidewalk near the hydrant was raised and twisted by the force of the water and the cellar of the Bank of Nova Scotia was soon filled, necessitating the firemen to get the fire engine and pump it out.

It was a wild yet majestic scene, the whirr of the fire engine, the hoses streets and the volumes of water forced high in the air.

About 10 o'clock several of the main water gates of the City were shut and the force of water from the broken hydrant lessened and by 10.30 the flow had almost ceased. It then resembled a large spring of water bubbling from the earth. At this stage the broken hydrant could be fairly well seen and it is not known exactly how the accident occurred. Some think the frost had cracked it while others think the water was turned on too sudden and flew up into the hydrant with enough force to blow it up. This is hardly probable unless it was cracked or some other defect. As far as could be seen the hydrant was broken off at the thread where it screws into the pipe below and it may be that it became unsecured.

Hundreds of people lined the street in front of the Church and hydrant and watched a sight rarely seen and not soon to be forgotten.

The Guardian should have stated in yesterday's issue that pork was selling at 7 1/2 to 8 1/2 cents per pound in Summerside.

The spacious home of Henry Horne Winslow, was open to a large number of friends from surrounding districts and the city on Monday evening last. The party was very enjoyable and the city extended to them. Various games and amusements were indulged in during the fleeting hours of pleasure. An excellent supper was served by the hostess.

The prohibition case of Gough vs. Goulet adjourned on Monday last, was up again in the Police Court yesterday. During the hearing considerable discussion took place between Mr. Wright, counsel for the prosecution and Mr. Saunders for the defense as to the admission of certain evidence. The Magistrate however, ruled in favor of the prosecution and convicted the defendant of the offence charged.

Timothy Carroll, blacksmith, of this City, has gone to Amherst in response to a telegram from his son-in-law, Leo Gillespie of Parrsboro, stating that the former's son, Frank Carroll had been seriously injured in a railway accident at Amherst. No particulars were given. Frank was about 25 years of age, and for the past two years was employed with a barber in Amherst. While in Charlottetown he was employed with Reardon Bros. The following dispatch was received yesterday morning from Amherst, Frank Carroll, the young man who was injured by falling off the intercolonial express No. 9 early Tuesday morning, died at the Highlandview Hospital at six o'clock this morning. His death was due no doubt to loss of blood and exposure. The unfortunate man was not found until some twenty or thirty minutes after the train had left. The operation of amputating his leg was very successful, and the other injuries were not considered serious enough to cause death. The remains will be taken to Charlottetown for burial, where his father and mother reside.

FRIDAY The temperature registered thirty degrees above zero last evening, at nine o'clock. At nine a.m. yesterday it was thirty eight above. The warmest Wednesday night was forty four above. On Wednesday as nine a.m., it registered two above, while the highest registered that day was twenty two above. On Tuesday night it was one degree below.

F. E. B. We heard a man say the other morning that the abbreviation for February - Feq. - means freeze every body, and that man looked frozen in his ulster. It was apparent that he needed the kind of warmth that comes from the warmth that reaches round to foot, all over the body. It would have told him from personal experience that Hood's Sarsaparilla is the warmest warmth that comes from the blood and spears the cold from artery and vein, and that his men and women, boys and girls, to enjoy cold weather and ward off attacks of disease. It gives the kind of warmth, stimulates the strengths at the source, and all its benefits are derived from a suggestion in this

At the City Police Court yesterday morning the case of Robert Jenkins against Harold Gillis for a second offence against the Prohibition Act was dismissed. The case of Patrick Feehan against Daniel O'Brien for wanting and wilful neglect in the driving of a horse and sleigh on Queen Street on February 5th, whereby the said Patrick Feehan was knocked down on the crossing between Cameron's corner and the New Brunswick corner and considerably hurt, was at the request of the defendant adjourned till this morning at ten o'clock.

An interesting event took place at St. Augustines' Convent, Rustico, on Tuesday last when Capt. Jeremiah Doucet, Rusticoville and Miss Genevieve Doucet, daughter of Daniel Doucet, were united in marriage. The bride looked charming dressed in a brown suit with hat to match and was attended by Miss Juliette Doucet sister of the groom. Henry Dolron brother of the bride ably supported the groom. Mendonson's Wedding March was capably rendered by Miss Agnes Peters, Rustico. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Maurice McDonald of Charlottetown. Congratulations.

The sad news of the death of John Connolly, grocer, who passed away at his home on Sydney Street Wednesday evening and briefly referred to in the Guardian yesterday, has caused a deep sense of sorrow to all who knew him. Just a week from yesterday Mr. Connolly was smitten with pleuro-pneumonia and despite his vigorous constitution the foe proved too strong for him. Deceased leaves a wife and five young children to mourn. His wife was Miss Mary Reardon of this City. There are also two brothers, Rev. Felix Connolly of Brae, who was at his bedside at his death, and Frank on the homestead at Lake Verde. There are three sisters, Mrs. Patrick McQuaid of this City, and Mrs. Trainor, of St. Terence's and another at home. Deceased was about 33 years of age and a prominent member of the Knights of Columbus and C.M.B.A., holding the position of treasurer of the first mentioned society.

The total amount of money received from sale of cheese, etc. was $1,036.14. A. E. Murphy who has been manufacturing cheese for the company for the past three seasons, was giving general satisfaction, was re-engaged for the coming season.

The following kind expressions have been forwarded to sister Alesia Murry on the death of her sister Edith, by Rev. P. J. Ackham, Agnes Sharp and R. L. E. Hill. As it hath pleased Divine Providence to call to himself your sister, we are on behalf of Refuge Division, No. 201, assured of deep sympathy, and sympathize in your sad affliction. We cannot fully comprehend the intensity of your grief, but we would endeavour to comfort, console and cheer your saddened heart by the words of our Lord, "Peace I give unto you; let not your heart be troubled neither let it be afraid." May you realize that it is your only refuge in time of trouble, and if you cast all your burdens on him he shall sustain them, and when your earthly pilgrimage is ended may you receive an abundant entrance into that heavenly mansion, where his own soft hand shall wipe away all tears and grief and death is the self, shall die. This we present in the name, and on behalf of the members of Refuge Division Submitted in Love and Fidelity.

The marriage of John A. McDonald, of Moyie, B. C., and Florence Mary McDougall of Cranbrook, Ont., was solemnized at Grandbrook, B. C., on Tuesday, January 19th, at 8.30 a.m. The parish priest officiated, assisted by Rev. Father Beck. The ceremony took place in the private chapel of St. Eugene Hospital. The groom was supported by his cousin, J. C. McKenzie of Cranbrook, and Miss Maggie Kennedy attended as bridesmaid. The bride wore a beautiful gown of white silk eoline, trimmed with Irish point lace with net to match, and carried a large bouquet of white gladiolus. The bridesmaid wore pale blue voile. Mr. and Mrs. McDonald gave a dinner party to a few friends in the evening at the Cranbrook Hotel. After the 25th of January Mr. and Mrs. McDonald were at home in Moyie, B. C., their future home. The groom's present to the bride was a set of furs, Isabella and a gold watch. They were the recipients of many beautiful presents and have a host of friends who join in wishing them a long and happy wedded life. Mr. McDonald is a son of Ronald McDonald, Cherry Valley, and has been in B. C. for a number of years.

TUESDAY COOLNESS AND HEROISM IN TIME OF PERIL. The recent steamship collision which resulted in the sinking of the Republic developed some cases of true heroism. One of those was the wireless operator John B. Binns who in the darkness and panic continued at his post sending out into the air the call for help till it came. Another was the Toronto girl who coolly took off her life belt and gave it to an aged Italian stowaway passenger who could not find one for himself and was nearly crazed with fright. She then went down in the dark as alone to her stowaway and got another belt for herself.

Binns' operating room was smashed in the collision, but he found his instrument would still work. This was his message, repeated till answered: "C. Q. D. The Republic rammed. Sinking. The letters at the beginning of the message are what is called the general ambulance call of the sea, meaning, "In serious trouble, need immediate help." Editorial

MONDAY CONCERNING LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEES.

There has been a good deal of discussion during the few days that the Legislature has been in session over the manner in which the standing committees are chosen and the membership of which some of them are composed. The opposition complain that although they number thirteen out of the twenty-nine members available for committee work, they are allotted but two members each upon committees of seven, and that even these two are not the men of their choice, but men who are chosen for them by their political opponents who are in the majority, and therefore have the power to dispose of the matter as they will. The complaint is reinforced by reference to the practice of other Parliaments in free countries where representation on committees is largely by choice of each party and in proportion to party strength.

On the part of the Government and the majority of the defence of precedent is set up, and it is shown that under both parties in the past something like a similar practice prevailed. It is also claimed that although the Opposition do not choose the men who are to represent them on the committees, still good men are chosen and that ought to satisfy the House and the country. To the argument that the British Parliament, the Canadian Parliament and other legislative bodies have long since adopted another and fairer mode of constituting committees, the reply is that it would be cumbersome and even absurd to adopt in our little and comparatively unimportant Legislative the machinery of the larger national Parliaments.

All of our readers may not be familiar with the practice of the Canadian Parliament in this matter and we may state it briefly. At the opening of the session a committee carefully selected from both sides of the House and of which the Premier and the Leader of the Opposition are usually members, is named to choose the members of the select standing committees of the House. Sir Wilfrid Laurier is this year the chairman of this committee. The selection of members of standing committees is carefully made by this body, each party consulting the wishes of the other, so that every member of the House is made a member of some committee, and on the Public Accounts Committee, for instance, the Opposition are represented by their foremost financial critics. This is the practice at Ottawa under Liberal rule, as it was before they came into power.

It seems most equitable, more conducive to fair play and good feeling and also to efficiency, than the practice to which both parties have here unfortunately been committed in the Legislature. The objection as to superfluous and cumbersome machinery seems to be imaginary rather than real. To have the selection of all the leading committees made by a committee appointed for the purpose and whose report is always satisfactory may seem to many persons the simpler way. It is certainly the shorter way, as the system adopted here leads to prolonged and acrimonious debate. And it would perhaps be better not to supply the Opposition with a grievance. The Government may properly name the chairman and the majority of the members, but is in danger of losing moral strength by pushing its advantage beyond this, especially in a House where the two parties are approximately equal numbers. The plea of precedent ought not to weigh against the principle of equal representation in proportion to numbers. The bad precedents set by both parties in the past should be set aside as speedily as possible. If one party is to act unfairly because the other party had done so before, the worst evils that beset our representative system would go on forever.

The Guardian would be glad to see the Legislature adopt the excellent plan which has long been in vogue at Ottawa in regard to appointing committees and which works to the entire satisfaction of both parties.

THURSDAY A RULE THAT DOESN'T WORK BOTH WAYS.

Is there not too much tendency to frame excuses for Canada, in the matter of not fulfilling her share of the terms of an account with Prince Edward Island? Canada may plead that the task of maintaining constant steam communication with the mainland to and from the Island is more difficult than was expected or realized in 1873. Let us admit this. Let us add that it may seem a harsh thing to proceed to judgment on the account of a party who is willing but unable to pay, or to carry out his contract.

But where there is a contract embodying mutual obligations, and the party of the first part insists on the other party fulfilling every such obligation to the letter however hard it may be to do so, is it then open to the party so insisting, to claim immunity from its own obligations? And is not this precisely what has happened in the Island's relations with the Dominion?

Canada has from the first insisted that the obligations undertaken by the Island under the compact of 1873 shall be observed to the letter. We did not expect to pay federal taxes at the rate of ten or twelve dollars per head, or more than half that amount, but we must pay, all the same. We did not expect to be forced to contribute to the hundreds of millions expended for canals and railways on the mainland, but we are not let off on that account. We did not expect to help subsidize steel works at Sydney and the Soo to the tune of millions yearly, but we are required to do so by the terms of union and the laws made under authority of those terms and we submit.

We never anticipated when we agreed to representation by population that in the first thirty years of membership would be decreased one third while thirty or forty new members would be brought in from the west. We have no alternative. Canada has proceeded promptly to judgment and execution in this matter and at the first opportunity our representation was taken away, with a view to follow after the next year. Thus in all the obligations undertaken by the Island toward Canada, and they were very costly and onerous, Canada has insisted ever and always on fulfillment to the letter, and has enforced it with the utmost rigor.

Surely the rule ought to work both ways, but it does not. The stronger power evades its own obligation while enforcing upon the weaker a complete fulfillment of counter obligations. Even Hon. Mr. Fielding, in many respects one of the fairest of these hold-ings high office at Ottawa, has told us face to face here in Charlottetown that while he hoped the Tunnel may yet be built, it will never be built "on account of any old agreement entered into long ago." In the last analysis, what is this but repudiation? What is the long delay in providing adequate winter transport, but repudiation?

A rather pitiful condition of things is that some of our own citizens are so blinded by party as to be ready to frame excuses for the Government of Canada in this matter. After thirty-odd years they plead for further delay, talk of lack of information, and the cost to Canada of con-

When you have any deep-seated pain in the joints, the back, the wrists, or elsewhere, place a liberal supply of Zam-Buk on the fingers, or on the palm of the hand, and rub it in. The penetrating power of this "embrocation-balm" kills pain and removes stiffness. Sound rubbings of the affected parts with this wonderful balm will drive out all pain, reduce swelling, strengthen the skin and tissues (enabling them to resist cold and damp better during the winter months), and restore perfect elasticity and looseness.

MONTREAL LADY'S EXPERIENCE. WHAT ICE HOUSES AND STEAM DID FOR HIM.

Mrs. Frances Wray of 25 Guy Avenue, Montreal, says: "I have found Zam-Buk to be a very best cure of rheumatism, and also for stiffness, sore muscles, stiffened joints and acute pain from rheumatism after another in pain. I also took medicine internally, but it was my state when Zam-Buk was recommended to me. I laid in a supply and to my great joy it began to cure me. I rubbed it well in every night, and when a few days in I began to feel better. I rubbed from the pain and stiffness of rheumatism. I have had no more trouble from the disease."

Zam-Buk is a positive and certain cure for cuts, burns, bruises, sprains, piles, itching sores, ulcers, scalds, blood-poisoning, eczema, sores, chapped hands, cold skin diseases and injuries. Rubbed well into the parts affected, it cures neuralgia, sinking, the letters at the beginning of the message are what is called the general ambulance call of the sea, meaning, "In serious trouble, need immediate help."
