Voices Protest
On Behalf Of Lobster Fishers

OTTAWA, Ont., March 4.—Efforts launched in Washington by Maine legislators, to restrict the importation of live lobsters and prohibit the entry of lobster meat, are aimed directly at the Maritime Provinces, in the opinion of W. G. Ernst, Conservative member of Parliament for Lunenburg-Queens. "The bulk of Canadian lobster importations to the United States is made up from the catch on the Nova Scotia Atlantic coast."

A despatch from Washington yesterday stated that Senators White and Hale, and Representative Nelson, from Maine, along with a delegation representative of the Maine lobster fishermen, had appeared before a Congressional Committee and demanded: that shipment of lobsters smaller in size than those legally caught in Maine be prohibited.

That lobsters of less than ten and a half inches in length should not be allowed entry to the United States.

That importation of lobster meat, canned, fresh, frozen cooked or raw, should be prohibited.

While the bulk of Canadian lobsters shipped to the United States are over the nine-inch limit, there would be a large quantity rejected if the limit was raised to ten and a half inches, Mr. Ernst said. Some under the nine-inch limit are shipped and held in "pounds" in the United States until they have grown to the legal size.

Lobster fishing is one of the most lucrative activities of the Maritime Province shore dwellers. While the risk of life is less than in deep sea fishing, the loss of gear is sometimes heavy when winter storms sweep down unexpectedly. As a rule, however, the lobsterman does well and his only market is the United States. Collection boats make regular trips along the coast and carry the catch to the United States.

"We have no reason to question the right of the United States to do as they wish," said H. H. Stevens, Minister of Trade and Commerce, when asked to comment on the despatch from Washington.

Beyond that remark Mr. Stevens did not desire to comment on the report.

Export of Canadian live lobsters to the United States has constantly grown in the last five years, increasing from 49,530 hundred weight in 1927 to 97,394 hundredweight valued at $2,206,189 in the fiscal year ended March 31, 1931. During that year United States was the only customer for this commodity.

Export of canned lobster meat to the United States has fallen off slightly in the past five years and in the last fiscal year amounted to 13,153 hundred weight, valued at $737,468—about one quarter of the total exports.

N. B. Premier States Position Re Vocational Grants

FREDERICTON, N. B., March 3.—A flat assertion that the Provincial Government would not change its stand with regard to grants for vocational education was made today by Premier C. D. Richards during the debate on the address.

"We have ample justification for saying that we cannot, at this time, assume the obligation which ordinarily would be borne by the Federal Government," he declared.

Premier Richards dealt in detail with the history of vocational education in New Brunswick. The original act passed by the province to provide assistance for vocational education, he said, contained a provision that the total expenditure was not to exceed $50,000 per annum.

This rider was also embodied in an amended act, passed in 1923.

Dominion assistance for vocational education was available before the first school was opened in New Brunswick, and he had no doubt, Premier Richards added, that when after year in the amendments, and in the revision and we say, having well understood and recognized that part of the assistance would come from Ottawa.

Hon. Mr. Richards told of the federal subsidy having been stopped until "such time as conditions improved," and subsequent delegations which were before the Provincial Government asking that the full grant be continued despite the fact that federal assistance had been withdrawn.

"To all of them," he said, "we gave the same answer, and I think we made our position quite definite."

"I want to emphasize again," he declared at another point "that, so far as this Government is concerned, in no way is it in default in respect to any obligation. Special agreement was made with the City of Saint John with regard to equipment in that particular school and that agreement we will carry out to the letter. There may be $1,000 or $2,000 due yet, but whatever is due we will carry out our agreement."

"We have already paid 50 per cent. of the cost of equipment and whatever is due will be paid when it comes due, but aside from that there is no agreement with respect to salaries. If all contained in the legislation.

There is no violation of legal or moral obligation on our part. We have said, speaking in a more general and practical way, if this burden must be borne by someone, then from a purely practical point of view it might very well be borne during the interim by the various local authorities and those schools which are interested in the subject."

Premier Richards said vocational education had reached a stage where it was not possible for thinking men and women to say it was not of value, but that there was, however, the question of whether New Brunswick should continue to subsidize one particular branch of education to a larger extent than other lines of education.

RATED VALUELESS BY CUSTOMERS MEN, PICTURES TERMED "MARVELOUS"

NEW YORK, N. Y., Mar. 4.—The L'Eclair Galleries entertained at tea the other day and then made Emilian Pope Etting, a young man of 26 who professes no school but his own, a new factor in the galleries of modern art. Etting just recently returned from Paris. His first critics were customs officers.

"How much are these pictures worth?" they asked.

"Make your own estimate," suggested Etting.

The customs officers turned the pictures sideways, upside down and oblique-wise, expressed the emotion of puzzlement as only customs officers can and threw up their hands in admission of defeat.

"No duty!" they announced.

In contrast to the official attitude, there were at the tea persons who profess to understand what everything means and they said: "Marvelous!"

But that only distressed Etting. "I mean," he said, "I'd much rather argue with people than convert them. I don't like to have people understanding."

Of course, if people go so far as the customs officers and reason their lack of understanding with lack of purchases, Mr. Etting can always go back to designing very orthodox book covers and still be perfectly happy. He said so.

Anyway, even though he likes to paint pictures, he doesn't go in for them on his own walls.

Diner: "Two poached eggs medium soft, buttered toast not too hard, coffee not too much cream in it, please."

Waiter: "Yes, sir. Would you like any special design on the dishes?"
