MILK WILL MEND BROKEN CHINA

Milk will mend broken china so that you can use it every day and wash it. Tie the broken part with string and put it into cold milk, allow it to come slowly to the boil and let it boil for two hours. Take it out and leave it to cool and set for twenty-four hours. Then untie the string and put the the china into every-day use again. It is an especially satisfactory "mend" because washing the china in hot water tends to harden the joint still more.

Misleading Addresses Hinder C. A. S. F. Mail

Misleading addresses on soldiers' mail, now that the First Division of the Canadian Active Service Force is overseas, are causing such letters delay and are entailing considerable extra work to members of the Canadian Base Post Office in identifying the addressee. Recently postal authorities announced the correct way to address mail to troops overseas, and to troops still in Canada.

In spite of this much mail matter is being posted which gives the name of certain barracks and camps in England, instead of the name of the regiment or unit, which is entirely omitted. Base Post Office authorities emphasize that to send mail to soldiers addressed to barracks or camps in the United Kingdom is most likely to cause delay, and that such practice is a hindrance rather than a help. The soldier may have been moved from that camp to another in the interim. Names of barracks or camps in England should not be given. The name of the regiment or unit should always form part of the address.

It is again emphasized that in the addresses, abbreviations of the names, units or services should be avoided, and the names of such spelled out in full. Abbreviations such as A.-T. A. Ac., or A. D. (Anti-Tank. Anti-Aircraft, or Army Co-operation Squadron) should NOT be used but the full names should be given.

The Base Post Office handles only the mail for troops that have already left this country. At the Base Post Office, Canada, each unit of the Canadian Active Service Force has its own mail bags. These bags are made up at the Base Post Office, and they receive no further handling until received for distribution by the unit to which they are delivered overseas. Therefore, in sending mail to soldiers already overseas see that the address contains only:—

Regimental Number,
Rank and Name,
Full Name of Regiment or Unit.
C. A. S. F.
c-o Base Post Office Canada.

In addressing mail to soldiers serving in Canada give:—

Regimental Number,
Rank and Name,
Full Name of Regiment or Unit.
C. A. S. F.,
Postal Address of Training Camp in Canada.

Do NOT send such a letter care of Base Post Office, Canada.

See that postage is properly prepaid, and that return addresses are given on all mail matter sent to soldiers abroad or in this country.

Will Hold Spotlight In Commons

OTTAWA, Jan. 22—(CP) —J. A. Bradette, Liberal member for Cochrane, and W. G. Weir, Liberal member for Macdonald will hold the spotlight in the House of Commons Friday when they move and second the address in reply to the speech from the throne.

Customarily this formality is delayed until the Monday following opening day and the result is that the speeches get little attention because they are immediately followed, in order, by the leader of the opposition and the Prime Minister.

This year Parliament will open Thursday, according to tradition, and on Friday the mover and seconder of the address will dominate the brief session.

Conservative Leader Manion and Prime Minister Mackenzie King will open the debate Monday, with the former speaking first. They have unlimited time and usually the opening speeches run for two or three hours.

Interesting Exhibit Of Water Colours At Harris Gallery

Since Tuesday there have been hanging in the Harris Gallery some forty pictures, painted by artists of British Columbia. The collection is entirely made up of water-colors. This medium though used thousands of years ago fell into disrepute by European artists and until the beginning of the present century was for years thought of as a gentle, futile pastime in which dainty unintelligent ladies might dabble. No serious artist man or woman would condescend to use it for any thing more than a quick sketch which he might later use as notes for an oil painting.

Of recent years water-colors have again come into their own. Our most serious artists treat water colors with respect and have discovered that they can not be surpassed to express certain themes.

The pictures in the present display show several of the many methods which may be used in water-color painting.

"Rooftops" and "Elevator" are examples of flat washes being laid, one on top of the other and working from light to dark.

Every student of water-colors should conquer this method.

"Under the Bridge," Housetops and "The South Downs" also are painted in somewhat the same manner—Except in some cases the paper was left damper than in others when the color was applied.

"Mending Salmon Nets," Lulu Island, is entirely different. Here a dry method was used; that is, the brush with color and little water was dragged over dry paper to get the desired effect.

"Mountain Mass" is a combination of first the wet method, (keeping the paper wet and allowing the colors to run into each other) and the dry method. It is well painted but the style is not adequate to express those awe-inspiring mountains. In this case had the artist sacrificed more detail he might better have emphasized massiveness.

"The Wrath of God" has brought many comments. Some people think it tremendously ugly. Others say that the shapes and colors are too harmonious to convey the idea of "wrath." The picture certainly is not pretty but it holds one's interest.

"Undergrowth" is an example of flat design and is good decorative work.

"Thimble Berry and Cedar Tree" at first glance make one wonder why the artist ever bothered to do it, and then a pleasing design gradually emerges. The pen and ink lines are there on purpose not because the painter could not control his brush.

It is interesting to compare these pictures with those of previous exhibitions, for subject matter, technique and emotional appeal.

Some have chosen scenes typical of their province but with a few exceptions these are not expressed with any great vigor. The mountains where introduced are lacking in spirit and grandeur. The draughtsmanship is good but for the most part the pictures are too conservative in color.

Those looking for the modern treatment of applying strong color directly find few examples and frequently old fashioned and dated technique ha been adhered to.

War Issue To Fore In South Africa

CAPE TOWN, Jan. 23—(CP) — The South African Parliament was called upon tonight to vote on the war issue all over again when former Premier General J. B. M. Hertzog, proposed that South Africa declare itself in favor of peace with the Nazis and Prime Minister Jan Smuts moved an amendment that the nation carry on to defeat Germany and its "brutal disregard of international law and humanity."

It was the first session of Parliament since last September, when on the same question, General Smuts defeated General Hertzog, ending Hertzog's 15-year term as Premier.

Both leaders spoke in a tense atmosphere before crowded galleries.

General Hertzog's resolution read:—

"This House is of the opinion that the time has come for the state of war against Germany to be ended and peace be restored."

Government supporters were confident that Premier Jan Smuts' Government would be unheld, and that the resolution would be defeated.

General Hertzog, who was defeated by General Smuts on the war issue, said that continuation of the conflict would be "proof of our barbarity and a crime against all civilized people."

Prime Minister Smuts said General Hertzog's speech sounded like a chapter from Adolf Hitler's "Mein Kampf." This sally was greeted with much laughter.

In Memoriam

MR. TOBIAS MURRAY

The residents of Tyrone Lot 65 and surrounding districts were deeply shocked and saddened on the evening of Dec. 15th, 1939, when it was learned that Tobias Murray, one of its oldest and most respected citizens had passed to his eternal reward. Although Mr. Murray was in his 75th year, he was hale and hearty and had attended mass on Sunday, Dec. 10th and had completed his chores around the barn that evening when he complained of not feeling well. He went to bed and next morning seemed almost as well as ever and continued so until Tuesday night, when a sudden change was noticed. The doctor was summoned and on his arrival found that dread disease pneumonia had set in and despite medical aid and tender nursing he gradually sank, and passed peacefully away on the above mentioned date after only five days illness. During his short illness he was visited twice daily by his beloved pastor, Rev. Father Merrill and died fortified by the last Sacraments of his holy religion. The late Mr. Murray was a man of sterling character, honest, sober and industrious, an exemplary Catholic and a general favorite with old and young. He will be much missed in the community where he spent his entire life. He was a good neighbor always willing to lend a helping hand in time of need but it is in the home where his genial presence and happy disposition will be sorely missed. Sincere sympathy is felt for his bereaved widow and family. They will long for the touch of a vanished hand and the sound of a voice that is still. He was twice married, his first wife, Rose A. Murphy, passed away about 30 years ago of this union, he leaves 6 daughters:—Mrs. Vincent Monaghen, Florence and Susie in Western Canada; Mrs. Anthony Gallant in Amherst, N. S.; Mrs. Cam Costello Charlottetown, and Mrs. James McCann, Bunbury, P. E. I. His only son, James and his eldest daughter, Mrs. John Dalton predeceased him. Seventeen years ago he married Sarah A. Malone who survives him also a young daughter, Blanche, a student at P. W. C. last year. He also leaves a step-son, Amos Malone at home. His funeral, held on Sunday afternoon, Dec. 17th from his late residence to St. Anne's Church was largely attended despite the downpour of rain, many coming a long distance to pay their last respects. The service at the church and grave was conducted by Rev. Father Merrill and all that was mortal of a loving husband and a kind father and a good friend was tenderly laid to rest to await a glorious resurrection.

May his soul rest in peace. The pallbearers were Messrs. Patrick Murray; Cyril Curley; Vincent McCloskey; Leo Carragher; Edward Easter; Derrill White.

TO KEEP CHEESE FRESH

Cheese will keep fresh by the following method: Dissolve 1 tablespoonful of common salt in 1 pint of cold water. Take a clean square of white linen, dip it in the salt solution, and wrap the cheese in the damp cloth, taking care that the cheese is covered all over and that the air cannot penetrate. This will keep the cheese fresh for a month at least, even if kept in a warm place. See that the cloth is always damp. When it dries, dip it in the solution again, wring out, and re-wrap the cheese.

CONFERENCE TO ESTABLISH JAP GOV'T OPENS

Proposals Would Give Japan Economic Dominance Over China.

SHANGHAI, Jan. 23—(AP)—As the former Chinese Premier, Wang Ching-Wei, opened an oft-postponed crucial conference at Tsingtao today to promote establishment of a Japanese-approved new Central Government in China, his followers disclosed that a "gentlemen's agreement" already has been signed for a peace with Japan.

This agreement, they said, was signed by Wang and "unofficial" representatives of the Japanese Government with the approval of the Japanese Army. It contains 12 points under which Wang, who broke with the Chiang Kai-Shek Regime a year ago, would, in the name of China, make peace with Japan and grant her most of the objectives for which she invaded China.

It would give Japan economic dominance over China and sweeping military and political rights in several important special areas.

General Chiang Kai-Shek, the Chinese leader, in a statement at Chungking said that the Wang-Japanese agreement was "invalid" but that it deserved the serious consideration of the world because it disclosed "the sinister Japanese ambition" to make China a protectorate and to "double cross" third powers in China.

The terms disclosed by Wang's followers were only slightly less severe than those published Sunday in Hong Kong as coming from two of his former aides who had broken with him over the plan.

Wang's followers here said the principal terms of the tentative peace agreement were:—

1. Recognition of the Japanese conquest of Manchoukuo.
2. Signature of a Japanese-Manchoukuoan-Chinese anti-comintern alliance.
3. Agreement by Japan to withdraw troops within two years from any area of central or south China where "the new Government demonstrates its ability to maintain peace and order."
4. Joint Government of inner Mongolia by the Japanese Army and the Chinese.
5. Establishment of north China as a semi-autonomous area.
6. Maintenance of permanent Japanese garrisons in north China and inner Mongolia as defence against Russian and Chinese Communists.
7. Drawing up of detailed plans for economic development of China's industry and resources through "joint Chinese-Japanese cooperation."
8. Nationalization of railroads and other transportation facilities in Central and South China, with "supervision" of their operation by Japan.
9. "Supervision" by Japan of Chinese customs, which is expected to be the chief source of revenue for the new government.
10. Permanent Japanese occupation of Hainan Island, off the southern tip of China and opposite French Indo-China, for purposes of "national defence" and naval operations.
11. Establishment of the seat of the new Government at Nanking with retention of the Nationalist flag now used by the Chiang Kai-Shek Regime at Chungking.
12. Creation of a central political council as the supreme governing body composed of representatives of the present Nanking and Peiping Regimes, of Wang's followers and to other Chinese elements not now associated with any of these groups.

BOOK SHELVES CAN CONCEAL RADIATORS

Book shelves can be made to conceal unsightly radiators. The shelves should be the same height as the radiator, and when possible should extend across an entire wall.

When the radiator is at one end of the wall, a cupboard may be built at the other end for balance. One row of books above the radiator will conceal it further. Such shelves, however, decrease, the convection of heat. Unless the heat output of the radiators without the shelves is more than sufficient to heat the room adequately, they should not be installed.
