How Happy Jim Captured Outlaw

GLACE BAY, N. S., May 4.- (C.P.)-Happy Jim Miller's death in Calgary recalls to many Glace Bay old-timers his story of how he captured single-handed a notorious western outlaw wanted for the murder of a Wyoming, U. S. A., sheriff. Happy Jim lived in Glace Bay 30 years ago, before he moved to the Canadian West. He was a great raconteur and liked nothing better than spinning yarns among a group of old cronies. His story of capturing the sheriff's murderer was a favorite.

The sheriff, according to Jim's story, was killed by a member of the outlaw gang of which Jim had formerly been a member; so Jim set out in pursuit of his former pal.

He headed straight for a hiding place where he knew he would find the outlaw. Arriving at the point of concealment, Jim was greeted with a gruff "Hands up!" as the murderer sprang from shelter. Looking down the muzzle of a .45, Happy Jim did some fast thinking:

BRITISH EXPORTS SEEN INCREASING

MONTREAL, May 4-(C.P.)-"Canada has proved for British anthracite a tower of strength and a real friend," F. A. Szarvasy, chairman of the Amalgamated Anthracite Collieries, Limited, declared at the annual meeting of the company recently in London, according to reports which have reached here. "During the year under review, the export of Welsh anthracite to the Dominion totalled 900,

Summerside HOLMAN'S Charlottetown

"I just came out to warn you," he said, "There's a dozen poses out and you'll be caught sure if you don't follow me."
They started off at a fast pace, the bandit falling in behind Jim's horse and keeping a weather eye out for any tricks. As they rode along, Jim managed to have his sombrero knocked off a low-hanging tree branch and the outlaw in a moment of unweariness allowed him to drop behind and pick it up.
Seizing his advantage, Jim quickly clubbed his companion over the head. When the killer woke up he was securely tied to his horse and on the way to the railway where Jim flagged a train and bundled the prisoner aboard.
He had expected to get his man into town without any demonstration but news of the exploit had been flashed on ahead by telegraph operators along the line. When the train was few miles out of town, a mob swept up blocked the tracks and carried off the prisoner.
The crowd seized also a large packing box. This was placed under a convenient tree and the killer boosted up on the box, his neck in the noose of a rope that stretched over one of the tree's limbs. Before the signal to hoist was given he asked permission to address the crowd.
Kicking off his long prairie boots, he delivered himself of his feelings towards Happy Jim. Then: "Men, I had as good a mother as any of you. But I want to tell you she's a liar. She always said I'd die with my boots on-and she was wrong."
He was right for his last words had scarcely died away when he was swinging from the limb-bootless.

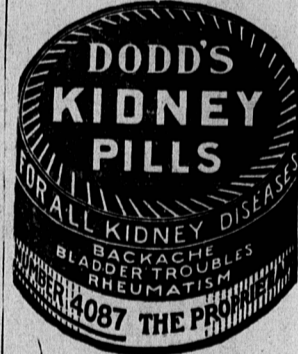

000 tons, representing an increase of 50 percent over the previous year, Mr. Szarvasy said.
"These heavy shipments were only possible as a result of the preference given by the Canadian Government to British anthracite in the way of customs duties, to the Ottawa Agreement, and to the continuance of the embargo on Russian coals, apart from the superior quality of the coal itself. The depreciation of sterling has made it possible to reduce retail prices to Canadian consumers without unduly hurting our own interests, and has been an indirect help in keeping this market," Mr. Szarvasy reported.

RESORT BECAME MINING CENTRE

MONTREAL, May 4-(C.P.)-With the discovery of vast deposits of barytes, or barium sulphate, a mineral used in many manufacturing and industrial processes, the lonely Isle of Arran, located off the West coast of Scotland will be changed from a summer tourist resort to a thriving industrial centre, according to John C. Thompson, a Glasgow traveller who told of the discovery in the course of an interview here.
A company has been incorporated to mine this natural product, and it has erected a plant capable of producing 20,000 tons of barytes a year. The annual foreign import, $1,000,000 worth of barytes, will, it is claimed, be cut in half. The mineral found in Arran is of as good quality as the imported type, Mr. Thompson said.
Used mainly as a base for paint instead of white lead, the mineral is also used as an artificial filler and finisher in numerous textile processes to give weight to the material, as a filler in the leather and rubber trades, and as an insulating composition in the electrical industry.

OLDEST INDUSTRY IN THE WORLD

MANCHESTER, England, May 4-(C.P.)-Leather manufacture is the oldest industry in the world, according to Dr. D. Burton chief chemist of a leather firm in Bolton, Lancashire, in an address at the annual meeting of the Chemical Section of the Manchester Literary and Philosophical Society. His subject was "The Art and Science of Leather Manufacture."
He gave an historical sketch in which he described the industry as the oldest in the world, and mentioned the fine work which still survived from the Egypt of 3600 B.C., and from ancient China. He emphasized the importance of grain-preservation and dealt with the various causes of deterioration, such as the warble fly and anthrax. As a material for the soles of footwear, he said, leather had the peculiar advantage of being impervious to water, but not to air. A leather sole thus "allowed the foot to breathe."
"So you have a new son-whose features has he?"
"Well, he has my eyes and my wife's nose, but his voice-I think he got that from our auto horn."
