THE BUSY BEE

The bee lives in swarms of from 10,000 to 50,000 in one house. In the wild state, the house or hive is located in a hollow tree, generally. These swarms contain three classes of bees—the perfect females or queen bees, the males or drones, and the imperfectly developed females or working bees. In each hive or swarm there is only one perfect female or queen, whose sole mission is to propagate the species. The queen is much larger than the other bees. When she dies, a young working bee, three days old, is selected as the new queen. Her cell is enlarged by breaking down the partitions, her food is changed to "royal jelly or paste" and she grows into a queen bee. The queen lays 2,000 eggs per day. The drones do not work and, after performing their duty, are killed by the working bees. The female bees do the work of gathering the honey. They collect the nectar from the flowers, they build the wax cells, and feed the young bees. When a colony becomes overstocked, a new colony is sent out to establish a new hive under the direction of a queen bee.—Book of Wonders.

Lighten the Care Of Your Stair

"Of all furniture or woodwork I find the staircase requires the most attention. It seems every hand in the house passes up or down the bannisters several times a day. Is it any wonder the railing so quickly becomes dulled with finger marks?"

gives the staircase a quick, hard, lasting polish—so dry that a few minutes after I use it, a white gloved hand may safely rest upon it."

UNCHANGABLE NIGHT

Night is the astronomer's accepted time. He goes to his delightful labors when the busy world goes to its rest. A dark pall spreads over the resorts of active life; terrestrial objects, hill and valley, and rock and stream, and the abodes of men disappear; but the curtain is drawn up which concealed the heavenly hosts.

There they shine and there they move as they moved and shone to the eyes of Newton and Galileo, of Kepler and Copernicus, of Ptolemy and Hipparchus, yes, as they moved and shone when the morning stars sang together and all the sons of God shouted for joy.

All has changed on earth; but the glorious heavens remain unchanged. The plow passes over the site of mighty cities; the homes of powerful nations are desolate; the languages they spoke are forgotten, but the stars that shone for them are shining for us; the same eclipses run their steady circle; the same equinoxes call out the flowers of spring; and send the husbandman to the harvest; the sun passes at either tropic as he did when his course began, and sun and moon, and planet and satellite, and star and constellation and galaxy, still bear witness to the power, the wisdom, and the love which placed them in the heavens and uphold them there.—Everett.
