Yankees And Tigers Split Doubleheader; Browns Trim Boston Red Sox

NEW YORK, July 23—New York Yankees and Detroit Tigers played each other all over the Yankee Stadium today in a doubleheader opening their momentous four-game series for the American League lead, and when the battling was all over nothing had been gained and nothing lost but prestige.

The Yankees won the first match 7-5, and the Tigers the second, 5-1, before a crowd of 62,516. The Yankees were in first place by 12 percentage points, half a game, when the struggling started, and they were in exactly the same place when the sun went down on a steaming hot day.

Three of the great aces both teams counted on so heavily—Johnny Allen and Lefty Vernon Gomez, of the Yankees, and Lynn Row (Schoolboy) Rowe of the Tigers—failed to finish what they started, although Allen got credit for winning the first game. The pitching hero was Vic Sorrell, chunky, veteran right hander who was almost waived away from Detroit this spring.

Sorrell held the Yanks to eight hits in the second game, and was aided by the daring base running of Ben Chapman, who got himself thrown out twice at crucial moments when a touch of conservatism would have meant important runs later.

Mickey Cochrane and Hank Greenberg hit homers the latter his 27th, in the first inning of the first game, but couldn't touch Allen again until the seventh, when four straight hits counted two more.

Rowe was wild and the Yanks hit him opportunely. Lou Gehrig hit a homer with one on in the first, and he left the game after passing the first man to face him in the seventh. Added by a 14-hit attack on four Boston pitchers, Ivy Paul Andrews, St. Louis Brown's right hander, and turned on his old mates today and registered a 7-0 victory for the visitors over the Red Sox at Boston.

Through held to three hits by Vernon Kennedy, a rookie Mackman of 1934, the Athletics defeated Chicago White Sox, 2-0, at Philadelphia and evened the series at a game apiece. The A's mixed a single by Jimmie Fox, a walk to Pinky Higgins and Richards' double for the winning runs in the fifth inning.

Rain halted Cleveland and Washington in the third inning.

SUMMERSIDE AND ABBIES TONIGHT

The Abegweit baseball team play hosts to the Summerside All-Stars in the second game of a home and home exhibition series and the encounter is attracting more than ordinary interest.

Returned the winners in the Dominion Day Summerside game the western crew are eager to make it a clean sweep and are bringing down their strongest possible lineup. Baseball has been making great strides of late in the western capital. This was brought to light last year when the Abegweits had all they could do to eliminate their ancient rivals in the playdowns for the intermediate title and this year they appear stronger than ever.

The locals have by no means forgotten this year's defeat, however. Tonight they will be out to make it an even break. Throw in well-known Charlottetown-Summerside rivalry with two evenly matched squads and we can't predict anything but a bit of a battle all the way which is just what tonight's encounter should be.

The game will start at 8 o'clock sharp on the Abegweit diamond.

BASEBALL'S BIG SIX RESULTS

(A. P. By Guardian's Special Wire) Founding out six hits, including two homers, in seven times at bat, Joe Medwick, St. Louis Cardinals, hard-hitting outfielder, closed in on Arky Vaughan, of the Pirates, for the major league batting leadership. The six blows boosted Medwick's average 10 points to .387, only seven points back of the Pittsburgh shortstop who was kept idle by rain. Although getting only one hit Jimmie Fox ousted his teammate, Bob Johnson, as the third member of baseball's big six in the American League.

Heavy Oxygen Water Isolated

After two years of research a young Manchester (England) physicist, J. B. M. Hervet, lecturer on physical chemistry at Manchester University, and Dr. M. Polanyi, also of that university, have succeeded in isolating heavy oxygen water, that is, water composed of hydrogen and the heavy isotope of oxygen, reports the London correspondent of The Journal of the American Association.

This is believed to be the first time heavy oxygen water has been obtained in Great Britain, but two years ago it was obtained by Professor Hertz in Berlin. Heavy oxygen water must be distinguished from heavy hydrogen water (common from heavy hydrogen and oxygen), which was discovered a few years ago in the United States. The chief advantage of heavy oxygen is that it will facilitate research in advanced organic chemical reactions.

ANIMALS RULE

Two of the queerest island kingdoms in the world are a direct result of man's inhuman treatment of animals. One is Raine Island, a lonely and isolated speck about a square mile in area, which lies just outside the northern end of the Great Barrier Reef of Australia. The island is unique, for it is ruled by goats. These are not ordinary goats, but are very extraordinary animals indeed.

About 100 years ago a lighthouse was erected on the uninhabited island, and at the same time a number of domesticated goats were placed there. These were to provide fresh meat for any shipwrecked sailors who landed on the island, but fortunately, they were never used for this purpose. Seventy years ago the lighthouse was abandoned; the keepers were recalled, but the poor goats were cruelly left behind to their fate.

As there was no apparent means of support for them, it was thought that they would die out. But this inhuman treatment has had a remarkable result.

The goats did not die out, as was expected. Instead they have multiplied greatly in numbers; there are now hundreds of them, and although formerly harmless they are now dangerous animals and rule the island.

They live chiefly on the leaves of trees, for, ludicrous though it may seem, they have all developed tree-climbing tendencies! It is by no means unusual to see the animals perched on branches twenty feet and more above the ground, contentedly munching the foliage! Another remarkable feature about the animals is that, owing to the scarcity of fresh water on the island, they have learned to drink seawater and thrive on it. They also eat oysters and other shellfish from the rocks along the beaches. They break the shells with their strong teeth and then suck out the contents.

So far no man has ventured to challenge the goats' possession of the island. The animals have absolutely no fear of human beings; in fact, they regard man as their enemy, and under the direction of their leader, a huge, old-man "billy," they fiercely attack and drive from the island any visitors.

A few years ago a fisherman, who was unaware of the ferocity of the goats, landed on the island. Almost immediately a mob of goats charged him and before he could escape he was severely injured by the animals, being permanently crippled.

The inhuman treatment of animals has had somewhat similar results on Juan de Nova Island, which is situated in the Indian Ocean, and is ruled by dogs! The island has an area of about two square miles, and its only inhabitants are countless thousands of dogs—dogs of all breeds, shapes, sizes, and colors. The animals are all descendants of dogs of many breeds that were purposely left ashore to that were vessels in the old sailing ship days used to call at the island for fresh water.

But the animals did not die; they have multiplied and the island is now literally alive with dogs. What the creatures live on is a mystery. Very few birds visit the island because of the presence of the dogs, and no other animals are known to live there. It is believed, however, that the dogs catch fish, crabs, turtles, etc., and that they have been compelled also to adopt a vegetarian diet for an existence.

The animals have become very ferocious towards men. The approach of a vessel brings scores of them down to the water's edge, where they stand howling and snarling defiance at would-be visitors. But nobody has yet had sufficient pluck to land on the island for fear of being torn to pieces. This would probably happen. On the wreck of a small unknown boat which crashed to her doom on the island many years ago, and it is believed that the survivors of this wreck fell victims to the queer inhabitants.—From Our Dumb Animals Magazine.

Goats Follow Gold

Goat raising in Canada continues to expand in all the provinces. In Northern Ontario, particularly in the mining areas, where it is coming more into prominence as a source of milk supply for the miners families. Likewise in the Maritime Provinces, sufficiently of grass-grown rocky shores find the goat an economic asset. Indeed Canada with a sufficiently of grass-grown rocky country producing an abundance of browsing fodder is admirably suited for goats, and it is to be expected that, as the mining and lumbering industries reach farther into the northland, the milk goat will follow settlement. Opportunity in this relationship to their own marketing problems. Their work, the Board considers, should result in a most valuable contribution to the live stock industry of the western provinces, for it offers western producers an opportunity, heretofore impossible, to improve their own positions.

The three Provisional Local Boards will now immediately proceed to an examination of the factors involved in the operation of the proposed schemes as these relate to both producers and other live stock interests. To expedite matters, it is the intention of the Chairman of the Dominion Marketing Board to meet the Provisional Local Boards in Western Canada at an early date.

Stock Marketing Schemes

The Dominion Marketing Board, after thorough investigation, has approved the principles of the live stock marketing plans advanced by groups of producers in Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba, and in making this announcement paid a high compliment to the western live stock men who have been engaged for several months in a study of the Natural Products Marketing Act in its relationship to their own marketing problems.
