"WE'RE GOING TO HAVE OUR PICTURE IN THE PAPER!"

Bob steadied himself. "Our picture? Whatever?"
"The Bank manager asked me if he could use it in a Bank advertisement because we're so important and after he explained it, I said it sounded wonderful," replied Betty.
"Since when does our couple of hundred in the Bank make The Bank of Nova Scotia think we're so important?"
"The man said it's because of the schools and highways and social services and bridges and fish and things like that."
"Fish?"
"Fishermen, silly! We helped them by having money in the Bank which the Bank could lend to them to buy boats and nets and things. We also helped farmers, lumbermen, miners, and people in hundreds of different businesses, and we helped build all those things like I just said."
"Will!" exclaimed Bob, relaxing a bit. "Now it's beginning to come clear. You mean the Bank wants to say that we're just an average couple representing all Bank of Nova Scotia customers?"

The BANK of NOVA SCOTIA

A SIGN OF GOOD FRIENDSHIP
That's right dear... that's just what the man said. Wait a second, I'll show you the paper he gave me.
Betty burrowed in her purse for a moment and came up triumphantly with a sheet of paper. It was a condensed Bank statement.
Bob's eyes widened. "Don't tell me you have suddenly become conscious of where money comes from and where it goes," he said with mock gravity.
Betty ignored the remark. "Now look here, Bob. Deposits... that's our money, and the money of thousands of others just like us, totalling over $749 million."
"Uh-huh."
"All right. Now look up at the top here. They keep about $146 million in cash to look after the daily-needs of people who want to draw out money, and there's enough extra in government bonds, and stocks and what the manager says they call short term loans, to take care of emergencies if a lot of people wanted all their money at once."
"Yes, I can see that."
"But government securities and other bonds are just other names for loans, to help governments to build new roads, schools, and so on, or to help businesses make more goods and
