THE RACE
 Chapter 19

"We'll run away," Winthrop said. And of course it never occurred to me that we could do anything else. Winthrop had said it! That seemed enough.

"She'll be here tomorrow, first thing," I said, looking anxiously at the slip of yellow paper that had upset us so.

"Then we'll run away tonight!" I must have showed my astonishment, for Win laughed and suddenly put his arms around me.

"We'll run away tonight," he repeated.

And that is practically what we did.

After all, there is little use going over the details of that mad elopement. A girl looks forward to a marriage as being highly a romantic affair, and an elopement as being the most romantic form of marriage. Win and I practically eloped—though with his mother's knowledge and help.

We did not actually leave that night, but we did leave very early the next morning. First of all, Win drove around to his mother's house and brought her to me, and we three discussed the telegrams and the probable actions of Aunt Harriet.

"She does things in a great hurry when she has her mind made up," I mourned, still staring at those two long telegrams.

"Well, we'll just do things in a greater hurry," Mrs. Taylor announced, and her tones had held more decision than even my aunt's.

We began planning and trying to guess my aunt's probable actions. Evidently she had my letter telling me of my engagement that morning near, for first telegram bore an hour early in the morning. Following that she had waited awhile for an answer—an impossibly short one while we learned afterwards, and had then gone in to Boston.

From there she had caught a train to New York—she telegraphed and might even have taken one earlier, then in the homes of some of these grand children there can be found four great grand children.

Mr. Brown was one of the members of a family of nine brothers and one sister. The brothers who survive him are: William, of Marquette, James and Robert of Stanley, George of Vancouver, B.C.; and Adam and George of New Glasgow, Ore.

Not often have men been taken away who will be missed more than Mr. Brown will be, not only in his own home, where his very presence always brought inspiration and cheer, but also in the world, through the clear morning air and the world was alive and singing as he drove through it.

"Happy?" I remember Win asked over my shoulder, too excited to speak.

We turned west towards Buffalo and arrived there in the afternoon, while rain continued to pour. We were married that day and stayed in the city for two days. That had been arranged by Mrs. Taylor.

Looking back over the months and years of happiness and unhappiness that I have since been through, I remember two things that stand out clearly from my romantic elopement.

One was that Win was disappointed because I had not brought along one of my very stunning evening dresses so we could dress for dinner in the hotel.

"I'm always stared at when I wear those elaborate things," I told him.

"That's it! I want people to stare at you! I want the world to see what a beautiful wife I have. Think what they'll envy me!"

I smiled a little. I was pleased that he was proud of me. But I hated being stared at. In spite of the years when I had been dragged around to hotels and much more and the numbers of social affairs Aunt Harriet had taken me to—in spite of all that, I never ceased to shrink from the frank stare of strange men and the furtive glances of inquisitive women.

"I don't want to know there is any world," I answered, "I only want to know that there's you."

The other thing was almost disagreeable.

Our elopement of course must have been talked by lunch-time. Parker knew when I started that morning. Mrs. Taylor told people, and Winthrop's office had to have an explanation as to why he did not appear. Some little reporter in the village must have wired it to one of the city papers. The name Mr. and Mrs. Winthrop Taylor was on the hotel register, and the papers had no trouble then in connecting the two stories.

After all, I was Constance Bennett, niece to one of the most prominent women in New York!

A lot of publicity followed the afternoon we started our drive back. I tried to escape from it, but Winthrop insisted on talking and held the car while someone took snapshots of me.

I was almost annoyed at Winthrop. As we drove from the city and headed home I was very quiet. Why should I feel annoyed at Winthrop? We were only married two days!

IN MEMORIAM
 MR. SIMON BROWN

In the quiet of the early evening of the beautiful summer day, Wednesday, June 6, Mr. Simon Brown, a very highly respected resident of Charlottetown, passed peacefully the most romantic form of marriage. Win and I practically eloped—though with his mother's knowledge and help.

The deceased had been in his usual good condition of health until some six days before the coming of the end. When he first came down with the illness was not what the cause of the illness was, but later it was learned that pneumonia had laid its cruel hand upon him. When this became known all that medical skill and kind friends could do was done, but it was all to no avail.

The disease had made such headway that its ravages could not be withstood, and on the above mentioned date the spirit took its homeward flight.

Besides a sorrowing widow, Mr. Brown leaves to mourn the loss of a kind and loving father, four sons and four daughters. The sons are James J. Windhorst, Sask., William G. Golden Plains, Sask.; Melville, Gravelburg, Sask.; and Gordon, Hunter River, Sask.; the daughters are Mrs. Eliza Jewell, Concord, N.H.; Mrs. Joseph Cutliffe, Cape Traverse; Mrs. Lorne Higgins, South Melville, and Mrs. Edmond Seaman, Hunter River. One son, George, of Windhorst, Sask., predeceased his father by some three years.

Among the members of Mr. Brown's family there can be found twenty-eight grand children and then in the homes of some of these grand children there can be found four great grand children.

Mr. Brown was one of the members of a family of nine brothers and one sister. The brothers who survive him are: William, of Marquette, James and Robert of Stanley, George of Vancouver, B.C.; and Adam and George of New Glasgow, Ore.

Not often have men been taken away who will be missed more than Mr. Brown will be, not only in his own home, where his very presence always brought inspiration and cheer, but also in the world, through the clear morning air and the world was alive and singing as he drove through it.

Monday—The Aunt

MR. STEWART McSWAIN.

On Tuesday, the 5th day of June, Mr. Stewart McSwain, the youngest son of Mrs. Roderick McSwain of Hopedale, passed quietly away in a hospital at Quincy, Mass., at the early age of seventeen years and five months.

Some three months ago the deceased left his old home to seek his fortune in the United States. All went well until some two weeks before the time of his death when he was taken quite suddenly ill. The best medical aid that could be had was secured. The doctors were all puzzled for some time to know what the cause of the illness was. The conclusion eventually reached was that he was suffering from cerebral meningitis. Despite all that could be done to counteract the power of the disease, on the evening of the above mentioned date his spirit returned to the God Who gave it.

Besides a sorrowing widowed mother, Stewart leaves to mourn the loss of a kind and loving brother, two brothers and three sisters. The brothers are, William, of St. John, N.B., and Murdoch at home; and the sisters are, Miss Dorothy, of New York, and Miss Margaret and Bessie, of Quincy, Mass. Stewart was a very bright, much missed, not only in his own home where he was ever kind and helpful to his mother, but also among the young people of the whole community, where, because of his quiet, unassuming and gentlemanly manner, he was a general favorite. Just why one so young and so promising should thus be so suddenly cut down seems hard for us to understand. In the midst of such sorrows we must bow in humble submission to the Divine decree, saying: "Not my will, O Lord, but Thine be done."

"Not now, but in the coming years, it may be in the better land, we shall read the meaning of those tears.

And there, up there, we'll understand.

The funeral which was quite a large one, was held on the afternoon of Saturday, June 9th. The service was conducted by Rev. R. H. Stavert, who gave a comforting address, based on Ps. 4.6.10.

The floral tributes were many and beautiful. They consisted of the following:

The mother, Mrs. Roderick McSwain, pillow; The sisters, Misses Dorothy, Margaret, and Bessie McSwain, wreath; Group of young men friends, namely, John McLeod, Sinclair McLeod, Argus McPherson, Leavitt McLeod, Charles Nicholson, Gordon McPherson, Henry McPherson, Malcolm McPherson and Michael Sullivan, wreath; Another group of young men friends, namely, James Nicholson, Murdoch McLeod, John A. McDonald, and Chester McKenzie, wreath; Mr. and Mrs. Donald L. McLeod, Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm McPherson, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Buchanan, wreath; Mr. and Mrs. James H. Dell, wreath; Mr. and Mrs. L. J. McLeod and family, spray; Messrs. Daniel McDonald, Mary McDonald, and Miss Katherine McKenzie, spray; Miss Katharine Gillis, spray; Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Pinkham, spray, sweet peas. All were taken to the cemetery and the grave was left covered with these beautiful flowers.

The pall-bearers were, Messrs. Donald, Herbert McKenzie, George Buchanan, Robert Smith and Hon. Ewell Spence. Interment was in the Hartsville cemetery.

MRS. CHESTER McEWEEN.

On June 9th there passed away at her home in Congress, Sask., Mrs. Chester McEween, formerly of North River. She was a daughter of Mr. John McKinnon, of the above place, and was born at Des Sable just thirty years ago where, as a girl, she was a general favorite with all who knew her. It was while there that the story of the cross touched her heart and, although quite young, associated herself with Hampton Presbyterian congregation, comprising a faithful and loyal worker till the end. Some years ago her health began to fail, so she went West hoping the change would help her, and was well on the way to complete recovery when she caught the "flu" about a year ago. Since then, despite all that kind ministry could do, she peacefully passed on into the fuller life. Her elder sister, Mrs. Wm. Vickerson, who is also Mrs. West, was with her throughout the last week, and tells of the great kindness shown them by friends and neighbors. The school, of which she was secretary, closed for two days in token of their high regard for her; and the children came paying their last tribute of respect with an abundance of flowers. The funeral service was held in the Congress Presbyterian church and from there the remains taken and buried in the Assiniboine cemetery. All who knew her mourn her loss, and yet we take comfort in the sure and certain hope that she will meet us, cheer and greet us.

Her we've loved, who's gone before, We shall find her at the portal, First our beautiful immortal, When we reach that radiant shore.

Dr. McNevin and laid to rest at New Dominion. The pall-bearers were: Messrs William Mutch, S. T. Currie, Allison McMillan, A. McEachern, J. Doiron, Nelson Currie.

$150,000,000 Loss
In Ireland

(By Dominion News Service.)

LONDON, July 6.—Total legitimate claims for damage to life and property in the South of Ireland as the result of the disturbances of the last few years, are now estimated at over $150,000,000.

A large proportion of these claims are made by Southern Unionists, and although the Compensation Commission, presided over by Sir A. Wood Renton (formerly Lord Shaw) has dealt with over 11,000 claims, no money has been paid in settlement.

This is a serious situation, both for Irish Nationalists and Unionists who suffered owing to the disturbances, and yesterday Lord Lansdowne, Lord Carson, Sir J. G. Butcher, M.P., and others, waited as a deputation to press the Duke of Devonshire to press the matter. Mr. Ormsby-Gore was also present.

The deputation complained that the Compensation Act just passed by the Free State Parliament, although it took power to issue bonds with which to make compensation, did not state the amount of the bonds, nor the time over which they were to be issued.

There appeared also to be no immediate prospect of the money being forthcoming. Yet some of the claims for injury were already two or three years old, and great poverty and hardship had ensued.

For the Government the Duke of Devonshire pointed out that it was difficult, if not impossible, for the Imperial Government to take over such obligations of the Free State Government.

Assurances were given that the matter was receiving the closest attention, and that there would be further communications with the Free State Government, in the hope of expediting payments. But the deputation were disappointed with the Government's reply.

MRS. PAUL R. COSTAIN

Rarely has death in the community caused such widespread sorrow as in the passing of Sarah E., beloved wife of Paul R. Costain, after a short illness of only ten days, of pleurisy, at the age of 65 years. Mrs. Costain was a woman of quiet unassuming disposition, beloved throughout the community. Her life was one of self-sacrifice to her loved ones. Her absent ones had called her home ere they reached her bedside. Besides her grief-stricken husband she leaves to mourn their irreparable loss three daughters and six sons, namely: Mrs. Harley Costain of Brockton; Mrs. Roy Leard, Mount Stewart; Miss Ethel, Mount Stewart; Mrs. Boston, Tennyson, Chester, John and Joseph at home; Henry of British Columbia; Brenton of Boston; also two brothers and four sisters, Mrs. Wm. Burns and Mrs. T. Reid of Minnisash; Mrs. Stewart of Mass.; Mrs. Metherall of Wollaston, Mass.; and Mrs. William Green of Mimigash.

During her illness she was visited by her pastor, Rev. W. S. Godfrey, who also conducted the services, at the house and grave. The funeral was held at her home on Monday, May 21, just five months from the date on which her son Ira was laid to rest. The large concourse that followed the remains to the grave testified to the esteem in which she was held. The pall-bearers were Messrs James A. and John B. Rix, Elijah Costain, Walter Sentner, William D. Nash and Richard Murphy. The sympathy of the community goes out to the grief-stricken family in their double loss.

We miss her, yes we miss her, But God counts the tears we shed And whispers, hush she is sleeping Our loved one is not dead.

Don't Spoil Your Child's Hair by Washing It

If you want to keep children's hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Do not use prepared shampoo or anything else that contains too much free alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Mulfised coconut oil shampoo (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can not possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub the Mulfised in. Two or three teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulfised coconut oil shampoo at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and a few ounces will last for months. Be sure your druggist gives you "Mulfised." Beware of imitations. Look for the name Watkins on the package.

KINGSTON, N. C., July 7.—With no state commission or statutes to interfere, and without managers to haggle over terms "promoters" here are arranging for a series of summer bouts between reptiles caught in this section.

"Arasas"—made from screen wire—are being set up on the sandy banks of Neuse River, near here. "Snake beaters" are combing the swampy places for husky snakes. Cut rates of a quarter a foot have been promised by "promoters." Fans have promised their support. At Newbern recently the feature of attraction of a fair was a battle between a huge rattler and a king snake. Scores attended a recent bout here between a water rattler and a rat. Both lost. The rattler inflicted a fatal bite upon the snake and then died.
