without going to the expense of republishing. If any gentleman in this House thinks this report is too small, and wishes to enlarge it with the same materials I can give him a wheelbarrow full of the stuff as a supplement.

There is in this old report something that perhaps would interest the gentlemen. There is an essay on Owls. (Laughter.)

It must be a long time since this was printed; it is a long time since we had large tracts of woodland to accommodate owls. (Laughter.)

In one of these editorials in the familiar style we find something that possibly the editor of that papet would not write if he were writing it himself. This has reference to Women's Institutes and the Supervisor. We had a supervisor of Women's Institutes in this province at one time, a very capable supervisor. We paid her well, and she did good work; but election came around, and the reporter of the Patriot office approached her and got an interview and published the interview a few days previous to the election, with the result that as soon as the interview was published she skipped the country. I did not see her any more; I did not know it happened until after I came back from the campaign, and she was gone. I heard nothing from her until I got a letter somewhere about two months after, telling me she was misrepresented. That is what the Patriot did on that occasion, that is what it is doing today at the bidding of any who write against the Department or the Commissioner of Agriculture.

This editorial also refers to associations which were represented as flourishing under the Liberal party and now gone down. I want to tell the honorable gentlemen these associations were not as flourishing or as well supported as at the present time. One of them in particular was granted $100 by the former government, and what did they do with it? They did not do anything, never used a dollar of it. We had an official in the Department of Agriculture paid by this province, every dollar he was considered worth, whose duty it was to do agricultural work and attend to those associations. The $100 referred to be scooped up and put in his pocket as additional salary. What would happen today if such a thing took place in the Department of Agriculture? What would we hear from the Patriot newspaper? Not only that, but we had an official in the Department of Agriculture getting every dollar we thought he was worth, and he went to one of the departments of the Federal Government, and got a salary there. What did the Patriot newspaper say about that? Not a word at that time, as the editor of that paper was in the same position—getting from his company every dollar they thought he was worth and getting an additional salary from the government as temporary excise man!

These are the men, and this is the press that misrepresents every single thing that is done in the Department today.

If there is anything we are undertaking that is likely to prove a success or be appreciated by the people of this province, they are right after it to defeat it if possible.

I might, perhaps, give a little time to the statements of the honorable Leader of the Opposition on these great things he gives credit to the Liberal government for. We are tired listening to the statement that the Farmers' Institutes were started by the former government, and I can tell the gentlemen on the other side of the House that from two different sections in the district I represent, two different applications were sent in to have Institutes started, with a sufficient number of names added in each case, and there was no Institute started. I can say further, when they tell us of the good condition that institutes were in when they went out of power, one of the first things I did on coming into this office was to look into the Farmers' Institutes and the model orchards. Some of the model orchards we were not able to find, the rest of them we ceased to know as model orchards, because they were not a credit to any government as models. When we looked into the Farmers' Institutes, of the number then on the books there were only fifteen complying with the statute and regulations sufficiently to entitle them to the grants they were receiving. Today there are twice that number. This is a sample of the efficiency of the management of these institutions at that time.

Provincial Legislature

Mr. A. C. Saunders expressed his concurrence in the bill and in the necessity for it. It would save a great deal of unnecessary expense in time and money.

The Bill was agreed to without amendment.

Premier Arsenault moved that the War and Health Tax Bill be read a third time and the Act passed. Mr. Geo. E. Hughes moved that the bill be read six months hence.

MR. J. A. DEWAR expressed his intention to vote with the Opposition. He was opposed to the bill on the ground that the war was over and the need had passed for further war expenditure.

PREMIER ARSENAULT said that if the last speaker had been in his place in the House when the necessity for this bill was explained he would no doubt have taken a different view of it. It was unusual, he said, to have a discussion at this stage of the proceedings.

Hon M. McKinnon said he did not see the need of breaking precedents for the sake of prolonging a discussion which only meant factious Opposition.

The Act was pased on Division with a vote of 11 to 7, Mr. J. A. Dewar voting with the Opposition.

On the motion to resume discussion on the question of supply, Hon M. McKinnon resumed his speech, a report of which is given elsewhere.

Mr. A. C. Saunders followed. In opening, Mr. Saunders said there were three matters and only three which were of prime importance to this province. These were Finance, Agriculture and Public Works. He took up these three seriatim. He somewhat startled the House by announcing that he had discovered that the province was $200,000 worse off today than when the present party came into power. To substantiate this statement he recited a revised version of the Public Accounts proving presumably to his own satisfaction that a deficit of $111,861.69 had been contracted since 1912. To this amount he added $39,777.46 of unpaid bills which he claimed had not been collected. (A stranger in the press gallery remarked at this stage that Mr. Saunders figures reminded him of the little boy who was asked by his father why he wasn't in school. The little fellow explained that he was catching rats. "How many did you catch?" asked his father. The boy replied "when I get this one I am after now and three more I'll have four anyway")

The Government having made this enormous expenditure, continued Mr. Saunders, their great fault was that they had nothing to show for it, "absolutely nothing." He admitted that the roads in many places were good, that during at least two years the government really did creditably on the roads.

The Department of Agriculture came in for similar criticism. He repeated the statement made by several of his colleagues that this Department had done nothing. He admitted that the Egg Circles had done great good in this province but the credit for this was due to the Federal Department. He admitted also that the government had secured several good men from Ottawa and in this connection he complimented Mr. Tennant of Summerside on the work he was doing. He complained however that there was only one man in the Agricultural Building in Summerside when there should be at least six—at which several of his colleagus who had expressed an opposing opinion, glowered ominously at him.

He next tackled the Department of Public Works and made some comparisons between present conditions and those prevailing in the good old days of Liberal Rule. He repeated the charges made by some of his colleagus about the way in which the Maritime Seed Fair had been conducted in comparison with other seed fairs, forgetting that this was a compliment to the Department of Agriculture which had nothing whatever to do with the Maritime Fair.

He criticized the government for doing some things which he alleged were unconstitutional—one of which only he would mention, thinking that probably these others had been more than sufficently threshed out. The one he expatiated on was the investment by the government of $75,000 in Victory Bonds. He was reminded that this was not an expenditure but an investment and that the government was perfectly justified in making the investment. Mr. Saunders failed to see the point and he insisted upon the unconstitutionality of the act.

He moved the ajournment of the debate.

Before adjournment, Premier Arsenault explained that Mr. George Forbes had made a satisfactory explanation of his vote on the War and Health Tax Bill. His explanation was perfectly satisfactory to the House.

EVENING SESSION

House resumed at 9 o'clock.

Mr. Saunders continued his speech on the supply. He had a veritable grouch and became quite angry when told by the Premier that he was misrepresenting facts. He also scolded Mr. Paton for reminding him that if he wanted information he claimed he did not have, he should have attended the meeting of the Public Works Committee.

He admitted that mussel mud was a good fertilizer but gravely warned the House that if they persisted in using mussel mud to excess it would be fatal. He complained that freight on mussel mud was too high and all the government had to do to remedy it was to ask the Railway authorities at Ottawa to reduce the rates and they would have done it. But the government did "absolutely nothing."

Mr. Saunders here undertook to show that appointments in connection with the military service were given to political favorites and as proof named all the conservatives on the various boards and committees. When asked to name the Liberals on these same boards, he proceeded to discuss the hardships of the fishermen soldiers as contra-distinguished from the farmer soldiers who were generously used by the government.

Sir Charles Dalton followed, a report of whose speech will appear later.

After a lengthy speech by Mr. A. E. McLean, which will be referred to later, Mr. R. J. McLellan moved the adjournment of the debate. House adjourned at 11.15 till 10 a.m. today.

Literary Evening At Prince St. School

An evening with Scott, under the auspices of the senior pupils of Prince Street school proved entertaining last evening, the assembly hall being well filled with parents and friends.

The several readings from Sir Walter Scott's poems were nicely given and clearly enunciated the performers each showing a familiarity with their subject which was a credit to the training they had received from their teachers, whose past records are well known, as former Prince Street School pupils now hold many prominent positions in the educational and business world.

Mr. W. K. Rogers who is a member of the School Board and favorite with the pupils made a most agreeable chairman as he called off the different numbers and spoke encouraging words of praise."

A feature of the proceedings was the presentation of an address to Colonel Campbell which was made by Miss Mary Moore. It was expressive of the pleasure his safe arrival home gave and his gallantry while overseas. Col. Campbell deeply appreciated the honor bestowed on him and made a most interesting reply to the address. Following was the program:—
