"When a girl is discovered clinging to last year's style she gets out of it as best she can."

He: But this is the first time I ever dreamed of such a thing as getting.
She: Well, stop dreaming—and get.

"Pap you bought sister a piano, can't you buy me a season pass to the baseball?"
"Well, son, I don't know about a pass for the season."
"Well, it will be somewhere for me to go every day while she's practicing."

"He said he'd go to any extreme for you."
"Well, the next time you see him tell him to start for Cape Horn."

The GOLDEN GIRL

CONTINUED

CONSTANCE TURNS MATCH-MAKER

Life seemed very good to So-so those next few weeks. Fred and Jerry worked like beavers at their plans. Constance breezed in and out, and So-so found it very agreeable to have Chloe to do her housework and then come up to the Crownest to wash dishes and help with the cooking.
"You just let me do it, honey," Chloe would say, capably taking charge of the work at the luncheon. Hence So-so found herself with more free time and less anxiety than she had known for several years. One evening when she knew some visiting airmen were to get their supper at the Crownest she had Chloe make pancakes.
After repeated helpings Jerry went back into the tiny kitchen, which Chloe filled to overflowing, and brought the protesting Chloe out. "Here's the pancake wizard," he said. Chloe looked embarrassed, made a sort of curtsy and vanished back into her kitchen. But she was immensely pleased none the less and after that night hurried through her work at the cottage every day to get down to the Crownest.
There was a constant demand for her pancakes and fried eggs and boiled coffee which she cooked in an old pot on top of the stove, scolding the percolator. "Coffee that ain't boiled ain't coffee," she declared.
So-so found time to take Wolfgang on long walks. Her cheeks glowed from the chilly exercise and more than one of the pilots commented on her newly blossoming beauty. "She looks Norse alright, when she strides along the road with that big white dog at her side—pretty picture if you ask me. Old Fred's completely cuckoo over her, but you can't tell whether So-so's fallen for him or not," one of them remarked.
"But Jerry's girl's got money—no wonder he calls that new bus of his the 'Golden Girl!'"
Constance commented one day on So-so's appearance. "You always were pretty. So-so, but lately you're a ravishing beauty. It's the exercise, Wolfgang needs a lot of walking."
They were having tea in the yellow room back of the Crownest. Constance looked speculatively at So-so. "It's funny that, you don't fall in love with some of the boys around here, So-so. You surely get enough attention. I'll bet you could have any one you wanted if you'd only exert yourself a little."

"Open season on husbands?" So-so asked.
"Always the open season on men, my dear. Seriously, So-so, what are you going to do? You can't stay here in the Crownest all your life?"
"Why not?"
"Oh, I don't know. You ought to get married, give this thing up and be a popular young matron."
"It doesn't appeal to me. I'm pretty happy as I am. Of course I miss my father—but thanks to you, with Chloe here I'm better off than I've ever been. Since Chloe started doing the cooking business has picked up. A lot of the men from the office who've never come in regularly before come in for their suppers."
"Did it ever occur to you that Fred cares a lot for you?"
"We've always been good friends."
"Friends!"
So-so moved restlessly. This was the side of Constance she liked least. The side that wanted always to be managing things. Constance, heedless of the movement went on earnestly:
"You ought to think about Fred. He's a nice chap, good-looking, easy to get along with, and when this flight is over he'll be pretty well fixed with his share of the prize money and the other things he can do when he's famous."
"Marrying on futures?" So-so asked.
"Don't be silly, So-so. There's an awful lot of nonsense talked about romance in marriage. But I think it's mostly got to be a business arrangement. You've got to marry a man you like, of course, but on the other hand, it's necessary for him to be able to give you a good home, take care of you, and all that."

"I don't believe I'll ever marry," So-so said slowly. "But when I do, Constance, it will be to some man I'm crazy wild about, not to some one I simply like and respect."
"Oh you make me tired, So-so. Listen. Why don't you let me talk to Fred? I'm sure he only needs a little urging. Be kind to him. Go out alone with him more. I'll wager that in a month, before they start, he'll ask you to marry him."
So-so smiled, remembering how many times Fred had asked her to marry him. "You may be right," she said noncommittally.
"I know I'm right. Come on, let me talk to Fred. I'll do it tonight."
"You'll do nothing of the kind," So-so said sharply. "You're right when you say Fred is fond of me. I've known it for a long time. But I don't want to give him any false hopes such as your talking to him would mean. I haven't any intention of marrying him."
"Then I think you're a fool," Constance said thoughtfully.
That night she talked to Jerry about it. He heard her in silence, then he said, "You've been a long time discovering Fred's state of mind, Connie. He's been in love with So-so for two years, and he's asked her to marry him so many times he's lost count."
Constance flushed. "I don't believe it."
"It happens to be true and you're not showing any kindness to So-so when you pry into her affairs that way."
Jerry spoke angrily. He hated the idea of Constance urging So-so to marry Fred or any one, and he was ashamed of the feeling. Constance was silent for a while.
"I'm sorry, Jerry. I haven't any business to try to run So-so's life for her." She could be very fair and generous when she chose.
"Jerry kissed her. 'That's my good girl!'"
Presently Constance asked: "Do you like to kiss me, Jerry?"
"Why, of course I do. What makes you ask?"
"Oh, you never seem very enthusiastic."
Constance laughed. "I guess our heads are too full of the plans for the Golden Girl. We'll have to let the romance wait. It's silly I suppose, but So-so had such a solemn face this afternoon when she told me she'd never marry unless she was wildly in love with the man that I wondered if we weren't being a bit too cold blooded about our engagement."

Radiant Girlhood

Comes Through Rich, Red Health-Giving Blood.

A girl with a full-blooded body and vital nerves has the foundation of an active, healthy life. Allow her to grow and delicate and prolonged ill-health and general weakness may be the result. Many women who ought to be in the very prime of life are too frequently sufferers of headaches, back and side aches, easily tired and breathless, because of anaemia which stealthily attacked them in girlhood.
But fortunately there is a remedy within easy reach. Thousands of tired, worn-out women and delicate girls who have sought the self-help of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are grateful for the way in which these pills have restored them to robust fitness. This effective tonic and nerve restorer always helps to make plenty of rich, red blood that speedily puts an end to anaemia. A wan, delicate girl, or tired, weary woman soon becomes brighter when this new blood courses through the system. Color comes to her cheeks and lips; her appetite increases; her nerves are steadied, and she becomes vital and active again.
The following is an example, from among thousands, of what these pills have done and can do: Miss C. J. Martin, Kitchener, Ont., says: "For several years I was greatly distressed with pains in the back and sick headaches. I felt tired all the time, did not sleep well and had a poor appetite. I had been doctoring, but did not get much relief. My sister advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and after taking six boxes I felt like a new person, and will not be without the pills again."
You can get the pills from your druggist, or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

LIFE RUINED BY NEGLECT

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN—a Simple Remedy for a Widespread Evil!

Many a man has suddenly realized that he was losing out—all because he neglected constipation too long. This evil scourge starts with the things. A headache. A morning. A cloudy complexion.

while it saps strength, it steals ambition. And it continues to poison the body until serious illness may know it as the enemy of youth and beauty. Ability's cruellest foe.

Don't let it ever prey on you. Guard against it. You can—with a delicious cereal. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is guaranteed to prevent constipation—to promptly relieve it. Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily—chronic cases, with every meal.

ALL-BRAN is 100% bran. Doctors recommend it. Serve with milk or cream. Use in cooking—muffins, breads, etc. Delicious recipes on package. Grocers sell it. Restaurants, hotels, dining cars serve it. Made by Kellogg in London, Ont.

"Did So-so say that?"
"Oh, my yes. Head over heels or nothing for her. She's awfully old-fashioned in lots of ways."
"She's a good kid. I wish she did care for Fred, but I guess love's a funny business. So far as I can see it gums a man's life up an awful lot."
"Then you don't love me?"
"Of course I do. But we agreed we didn't either of us want that wild neck or nothing stuff in our lives. I tell you, Constance, we're a lot happier than most engaged couples. We don't nag each other, or get jealous, and we have a lot of fun together. What more could you ask?"
"Nothing, if that satisfies you?"
"It does. Now give us a nice big kiss and let's forget about philosophy."

He kissed her heartily, but it was a very thoughtful Constance who said good night to him that night.
When she saw So-so next day she made amends for her interference. "I'm awfully sorry for the way I butted in yesterday," she said bluntly. "It wasn't any of my business and I hope you won't hold it against me, So-so."
"Of course I won't. Forget about it. Fred's going to take me up tomorrow to do some charting. He wants to teach me all about navigation."
"Fine. I envy you. I'm going south at the end of the week, you know. I tried to persuade father to fly down, but he won't. I wish you'd come with us. We're taking our private car. Lots of room."
So-so smiled. "Thanks. I couldn't let you do any more for me."
Constance did not press the invitation. She was tired of the cold, tired of the flying life, ready for a change. "Whenever I get what I want, then I want something else," she thought. "What I need is a real interest. Some day I'll have it in Jerry. I suppose."

During one of the busiest weeks last year 2,000 passengers arrived and departed at the London air station.

NEVER wait to see if a headache will "wear off." Why suffer when there's always Aspirin? The millions of men and women who use it in increasing quantities every year prove that it does relieve such pain. The medical profession pronounces it without effect on the heart, so use it as often as it can spare you any pain. Every druggist always has genuine Aspirin tablets for the prompt relief of a headache, colds, neuralgia, lumbago, etc. Familiarize yourself with the proven directions in every package.
