WINS CANADIAN OPEN GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP

New Jersey Lady Golfer Retains Crown.

(By Sam Robertson, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

ROSEDALE GOLF CLUB, Toronto, Ont., Oct. 4.—Maureen Orcutt, par-defying Miss of Englewood, N. J., is still wearer of the Canadian Ladies' open golf crown. In an International tilt over the hills of Rosedale Saturday, she turned back the challenge of Margery Kirkham of Montreal, to retain the title she first won in 1930.

The championship was decided by the convincing margin of six up and four to play. But to attain that edge in the face of one of the most stout-hearted bidders ever made for the laurels, Miss Orcutt had to shoot sub par golf. In the 32 holes that were played before a decision was reached, she collected eight birdies and clipped four strokes off what would be considered perfect figures for the hazardous course. Medal scores for the morning 18 holes were: Orcutt, par 77; Kirkham, 77. For the 14 holes played in the afternoon, the defender used up 57 strokes and Margery ten more.

Miss Kirkham was matched against an opponent who has had almost twice her experience in competitive golf. It is only four years since the sturdy Montreal-born girl entered her first major tournament. She is now 23. In comparison, Miss Orcutt has been welding a very capable niblic in "big time" tournaments for seven years. Though only 24, she has already held most of the championships of her own country.

But the Canadian girl needs no alibi for her defeat. In the morning round she collected four birdies and generally displayed a brand of golf that marked her as one of the greatest sharpshooters ever developed in Canada. She scored the first nine holes in 36, two strokes under perfect figures to make the turn three holes up on the titleholder.

Maureen had been playing steadily up to that point, but it would have taken a superhuman effort to keep abreast of the sharp-shooting Margery. And the same could also be said for the play from then on, only Maureen setting a burning pace and the challenger facing an unsurmountable task. Once the first turn had been made, the American star's putter worked like magic and for the last 23 holes, she turned in a score that shattered par by four strokes.

It was on the tenth hole Maureen scored her first win of the day. She dropped a long putt for that decision and on the next two greens she repeated that difficult feat to score birdies and shear her opponent's lead to one slim hole.

Margery held the spurring champion for two holes after that, only to hook an iron shot on the short 16th, probably the trickiest hole on the course and hand Maureen an opening she quickly and capably capitalized. The titleholder lifted a high one over an ominous gully that separates the tee from the green, captured the hole with a par three and squared the match. It stayed that way for the remainder of the round. But the unbeatable stride in which Miss Orcutt covered the incoming journey in the morning, stayed right with her for an afternoon round that was brimful of golfing drama.

Birdies and pars continued to fly from the clubs of Miss Orcutt and the tussle ended on the 32nd green with Miss Kirkham conceding a three-foot putt to her opponent, for victory in the hole and the championship.

London Letter

(By Glanville Carew)

(British United Press)

LONDON, October, (BUP)—There have been so many happenings of grave importance in the House of Commons lately that the lighter side of things has been somewhat obscured. Yet funny things have happened nevertheless. For instance, the other day during one of the divisions Mr. Neil Maclean, M. P., was anxious to raise a point of order. In those circumstances in order to catch Mr. Speaker's eye it is necessary to remain "seated and covered." But in the cussedness of things it happened, as it so often does at these moments, that Mr. Maclean found himself without a hat. A hat was thrown to him from a back bench and without looking at it he grabbed it, jammed it on his head—and raised his point of order; whereupon the House forgot Budgets, and the crisis, the Gold Standard, Tariffs and all the rest of it and howled with sheer delight. For that hat was a delicate tawny brown affair of the ladies' bowler variety with two remarkable fine feathers curling round its brim. It was the property of a lady member, Mrs. Leah Manning, The Caledonian sternly and wildly tore it from his head—rules or no rules—and nothing but native gallantry restrained him from stamping it underfoot.

I suppose that to anyone concerned for the moment only with the humours of the House, question time during the present National Government provides most enjoyment.

Mr. Stanley Baldwin laughs behind his order paper while the Prime Minister is heckled and is doing his best to support some policy of the Conservatives which he would as a Socialist have violently attacked. The Prime Minister in his turn when Mr. Baldwin is struggling against fearful odds and his own past chuckles delightedly to himself.

The same thing applies to all the members of the Cabinet in so far as they have political pasts—with one exception. That is Mr. Philip Snowden, Chancellor of the Exchequer. He has no "past." He has never varied his views; his political creed has been as unchanging as the law of the Medes and Persians. No one can quote him against himself. No one can remind him of what he said in 1919.

What sort of fun the House would have witnessed had Mr. Winston Churchill (who has been everything by turns and nothing long been in the Government and subjected to questions one can only guess. One thing at least is certain; Winston would have provided most of the fun.

Tariffs are in the air just now, in more senses than one. Apparently the suggested ten per cent tariff is a move which will not be accepted quite in the way most people expect. It is said that even Mr. Neville Chamberlain said a little while ago that for the purposes of protection, that is to say, the purpose of helping industry and reducing unemployment, a ten per cent tariff would be about as much good as a sick headache. It is of course for the purpose of collecting revenue, but the danger is that its probable failure to reduce the numbers of unemployed will be taken by the opponents of protection as a proof of failure altogether.

As for the Liberals it is probable that they will make no very great resistance. If Mr. Snowden, Free Trader to the backbone, can swallow a tariff as the only way to collect revenue without too much opposition, almost anyone could. Liberals who for all their political principles have gone over to the idea of a revenue tariff.

Indeed a revenue uniform tariff of ten per cent hardly conflicts with the Free Trade principle at all. The raising of transport charges would have the same effect, but the tariff if it comes, will put the revenue into the right pocket—that of the Exchequer.

There is a certain well known "Round Pond" in Kensington Gardens as most people who have been in London know. And Kensington Gardens are under the control of His Majesty's Office of Works, which means in its turn that there are innumerable Rules and Regulations governing the Gardens and those who use them. And these Rules and Regulations enact that, among a thousand other things, dogs may not enter the water, though they are not forbidden to drink of the pool.

Well, the other day a keeper in Kensington Gardens reproved a dog owner for allowing the dog to put its forepaws in the water while drinking. The owner, thinking himself hardly treated, complained to the Office of Works and in reply received what seems to be a gem of a letter. Here it is:

"Sir, In reply to your letter of the 3rd instant, I am directed by the 1st Commissioner of H. M. Works, etc, to state that in order to avoid interference with the water-fowl and model yachts, the park-keepers in Kensington Gardens have instructions to prevent any dog from entering the Round Pond.

It will be appreciated that, in carrying out these instructions the park-keepers experience some difficulty in discriminating between the dog that merely wishes to drink and the animal that is about to plunge into the water.

Instructions have, however, been issued with the object of ensuring that there shall be no interference with a dog unless there are definite signs that it intends to enter the water. It is hoped therefore that this will avoid any complaint in the future.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant . . .

All of which shows that we are very politely governed, and that we don't pay our Civil Servants for nothing.

A strangely little known spot in London is to pass away. It is the Royal Botanical Gardens, a circular plot of land of a few acres in the very centre of the Regents Park. To the man and woman in the streets the Gardens are hardly known even by name, let alone by entry, but there is probably hardly a botanist in the world of any repute who has not visited them.

The Royal Botanical Gardens have been in existence for 92 years. Some of the plants there are very old. One of them, the Kaffir Bread, is nearly a thousand years old. The Elephant's Foot plant, from the South African desert is three hundred years old, and there is a specimen of the Century plant, which blooms once in a hundred years. At present this specimen is only 35 years old so that A. D. 2000 will not be far off when it next bursts into flower, and in so doing dies from exhaustion. Whoever buys the plant is hardly likely to survive it. And now the Royal Botanical Gardens as such are to cease to exist and the land will revert to the Crown and be thrown into the main park.
