Hunters Make Twilight Ball Good Aerial Gunners, Reveal

By Whitney Martin (Associated Press Staff Writer) NEW YORK, Aug. 4—Whether it pops out of a trap or roars up from an Axis air field, it's just a clay pigeon to aerial gunners with a background of skeet shooting, so the United States army is looking for just such young men.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4—(AP)—Twilight baseball in these parts has become a howling success—but most folks howl at it, not for the perfectly recent "rattles" with the early evening curfew imposed by the coast dim-out have left the New York Giants and St. Louis Cardinals willing to admit they'd be perfectly happy if they never see the twilight game again.

Capt. Robert W. Canfield, gunnery specialist of the flying training command at Fort Worth, Tex., stopped here en route to Syracuse, N.Y., where his men will compete in the National skeet tournament tomorrow, with special concentration on a large range match with the navy's skeet ace.

NEWSY NOTES

(Continued) There was a large and attractive park not far from the station, and the best residential streets were grouped around it. Also the thorough fare that led to it, which was called Fawcett Street, was lined with high-class shops. There was a small lake in the park, but the feature that most appealed to me was a hill of artificial construction, that stood in the center. It had been erected (as a relief measure) of the magnesian limestone of the district, and was rather circular in plan, but cliff-like on the sides except for a curved ascending ramp. The sides were left rough, and harbored many wild plants. The platform on top must have been fairly high, for one could look over the housetops and see the ocean. There were railings to keep juveniles from tumbling over and seats for the old folk. On sultry days people went up there for the cool breeze.

Like their brother Boy Scouts in other blitzed cities, the Scouts of Canterbury rendered outstanding service during and following the German air raid on that ancient cathedral town. Authorities in charge of several A. R. F. branches have already laid a solid foundation for the Scout movement in that city.

The Boy Scout Movement since its inception by Lord Baden-Powell has endeavored to translate the principles of democracy into the habits of life of our youth. Nothing more adequately expresses the democratic ideal than an attitude of kindness towards others and a readiness at all times to render aid to those who are in need. The boy who has been a good Scout has already laid a solid foundation for a life of useful service and of good citizenship in a democratic community. — Dr. Duncan McArthur, Minister of Education for Ontario.

Purchases by the Wartime Food Corporation serve to hold cattle prices of exportable quality to fairly firm levels during the past week. Domestic slaughter material, however, was generally under pressure and there was some recession in prices, closing rates being down 50 cents or more at some of the major markets. Calves were generally steady to firm and hogs were also firm sellers but lambs, under the influence of increasing offerings, were seasonally lower.

United States Market: At Buffalo numerous sales of 900 to 1,275 lb. Canadian steers... Western Cattle Markets: The cattle market at WINNIPEG was a two-way affair with all shipping cattle holding in line with last week but material for domestic slaughter receiving lower bids.

Lamb Prices Seasonally Lower: Lamb prices lost $1 at Toronto and closed at $14 for good areas and $13.75 to $14 for sales made on pre-war contracts while Winnipeg had very good lambs $11.75 to $12 and $12.25 to $12.75 to $13.00.
