NORWOOD LAID TO REST NEAR LITTLE HAMLET

HUBBARD, N. S., Oct. 5.—On the crest of a hill above the village of Hubbards, Robert Norwood was laid to rest yesterday. "We mourn him because we love him," said Very Reverend J. P. D. Llywd, Dean of Nova Scotia, pronouncing the brief address after the funeral service in the little church where Norwood served as curate more than 30 years ago.

Power of the Heart
"I have often been asked," the Dean said, "what was the secret of Robert Norwood's power. In one form or another, I have always answered: 'The Centrality of Love.' I never knew a man in whom the power of heart was more marvelously developed than in himself.

"We mourn him not only on account of his personal charm, not only for his intellect, and the splendour of his achievements, but because of the man himself.

"You know what Nova Scotia meant to him—how he loved the Province, how he took pride in it. The secretary issued a flat and uncompromising denial, saying: "It just isn't so."
