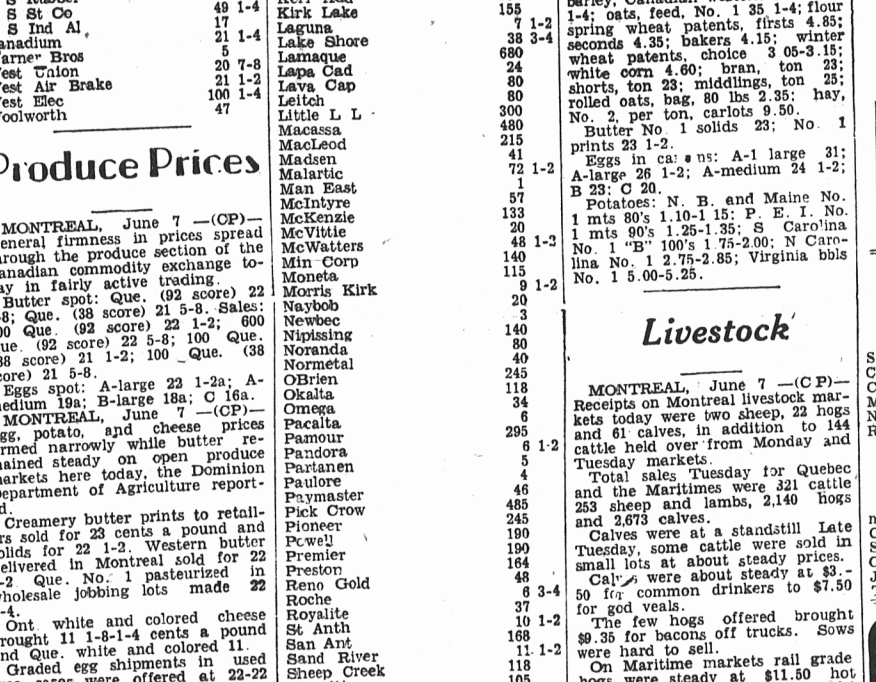
Minard's relieves aches.



Crowded with more than 900 German-Jewish refugees who were refused permission to land in Cuba, the Hamberg-American liner St. Louis is shown just before it was ordered to leave Havana harbor. Many of its passengers hysterical at the thought of returning to Germany, the St. Louis's captain later was reported to have anchored 12 miles of Cuban coast, hoping that some nearby country would wireless permission for his passengers to land
