SERVICES CANCELLED. — There will be no services in Brookfield Congregation on Sunday, October 14th.

REV. EDWARD MORRIS will occupy the pulpit of St. Paul's Church at the morning service tomorrow.

SACRAMENTAL SERVICE. — The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be dispensed at the morning service in St. James Church, tomorrow, when a beautiful new Communion set will be used for the first time. This set is the gift of the members of one of the families of the congregation, in memory of the husband and father, who was a prominent worker in all the activities of the congregation.

HIGH CLASS AVERAGE.—At an examination just concluded at the Charlottetown Business College in the theory of book-keeping, a class average of a fraction over eighty-one per cent was made in an examination consisting of twenty-one questions. This is the highest average ever made in this institution by so large a class. The work of the students is exceedingly well done; the books on the whole being very neatly kept. This may be accounted for in a measure—from the fact that many of the students received writing certificates while attending the public schools.

Inquest Last Night

Unofficially, from day to day, he visited Mrs. McDonald in the hospital and saw her shortly before death. The daughter, who had come for him in the first instance, said her mother had been in the house a couple of days and that when she saw her mother that afternoon the house was locked up and she had to peer through the window. During his visit the husband was not at home. Dr. Alley asked if there had been any row or drinking going on They did not seem to know. The conditions in the house led him to think there had been a great hurry to make everything look decent before his arrival. The women were tidying up the house when he reached the door. The conditions looked bad. The woman was on acouch in the front room, not in bed, and she had her ordinary street clothes on. He saw no liquor bottles of any kind, and could not detect any alcoholic odor from the patient's breath. There was a prominent bruise over the frontal area of the skull that appeared to have been made within six or eight hours. He had never attended the woman before.

Dr. Alley noticed within two days of death that the patient's tongue was deflected to one side. She was not able to protrude it and the jaw muscles seemed paralyzed on one side. He judged from this that there was some cerebral pressure, causing loss of speech. He was not prepared to say what the cause of pressure was, but was inclined to think that this pressure was the cause of death. He had made no examination of the woman's body, as it was necessary to get the patient immediately to hospital. He did not consider an epileptic seizure would cause death in this instance. He found no cut on the head, only what he took to be some dried blood. There was no fresh bleeding from any bruise or cut.

Dr. Ledwell (sworn) had attended the deceased for about twenty years and knew the family. He attended her about eight months ago when she was suffering from neuritis. About 15 years ago saw her in some form of epileptic seizure, but had never treated her for epilepsy. He would not call her a delicate woman. Once or twice he had attended her for scalp wounds. Could not tell the cause of these. He had seen deceased every day in the hospital. He had made no diagnosis but had formed his opinion.

CORONER HOUSTON: What is your opinion?

DR. LEDWELL: I am of the opinion that a fracture at the base of the skull was the cause of death.

James Rush (sworn) father of the deceased, born and lived in Charlottetown until last August, when he went to Portland, Me. He came back about three weeks ago partly by reason of his daughter's condition. When he went away she looked very miserable. She was better when he returned and he used to see her every day until about a week before she went to the hospital. He saw her last on the day she went. He had heard about her being very sick and went to see her. She was lying on the lounge in an awful state. She tried to tell him somethiny which he could not make out. She was delirious and was moaning and throwing her arms about. They were getting her ready for the hospital at the time. He thought she was dying and went for the priest. He believed that his daughter had been beaten. Last winter he had to take her to his own place. He had seen her badly bruised several times and had once had her husband arrested, but she would not appear against him. He had never seen him beating her, though. Both daughter and son-in-law lived with him last winter. He had never seen them fighting at any time. Until a few years of her death deceased was a strong, healthy woman. He could not say how long she had been subject to epileptic fits.

Dr. J. S. Jenkins (sworn) had treated the deceased in hospital about a year ago and about six months before that had dressed a scalp cut in Dr. S. R. Jenkins' absence which he was told she had received from falling against a stove in an epileptic fit. A year ago the husband sent for him to come and see his wife. They said she had been drinking. She complained of her heart. Her face was swollen, her eyes puffy, her pulse rapid and she was extremely nervous. He had her removed to the hospital where she remained about three weeks, during which time she required sedatives at night to keep her quiet. At that time she suffered from a weak heart but made a fair recovery and the heart muscles improved considerably. He had not treated her since.

Mrs. Robert Stanley, (sworn) sister of the deceased, lives on King Street about three blocks from Mrs. McDonald's home. She was accustomed to see her sister nearly every day. She had been delicate all winter and there was no one to look after her. Eight or ten days before the last illness she was at witness' house and there was evidently something the matter with her. She acted queerly. Witness went to see her three times afterwards, found her once in bed and once lying on the couch, with no fire in the house. Witness on these occasions lit a fire and tidied up. The husband of deceased was about every day. He had no steady job. He was quite sober on these occasions. The day the deceased took seriously ill the husband came to witness' house with the key and told her to go and see his wife, she was very sick. Witness did so shortly after and found her "yelling and roaring, but unable to speak." She had seen her sister twice in epileptic fits. She used to fall and bruise herself in them. The deceased and her husband used to have rows together. Witness had seen the husband strike her sister lots of times, but not lately. When he came to tell her that Mrs. McDonald was very sick and gave her the house key, witness thought she saw blood stains on his shirt front.

Mrs. Crosby, (sworn) daughter of deceased, was accustomed to see her mother mostly at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Stanley. She often complained about her knees being weak and her difficulty in walking. Witness saw her the day before she went to the hospital. Her mother did not recognize her. She was sitting on a chair and talked queerly, talking about things that never happened. She seemed to have difficulty in speaking. Witness stayed with her three quarters of an hour and came next day. The front and back doors of the house were locked. Her mother tried to come from the lounge to open the door when she called but could not get to the door and fell inside in the hall. Witness lifted up a window and entered. She opened the door to Mrs. Connolly, who accompanied her. Mrs. Connolly called Mr. Doyle, next door, who helped Mrs. McDonald back to the lounge. Witness went to her aunt's house and then to Dr. Alley.

This finished the evidence taken last night. Upon the suggestion of the Coroner the jury agreed to await the result of a post mortum in vestigation before proceeding further.

Island Products At Jenkins & Son

The grocery store window of Messrs. Jenkins and Son is attracting much attention, In this window are displayed a great many different products, all Island manufectured. It is a suprise to know that so many commodities are being produced here, and should be an inspiration to further endeavor. The appearance of the window which was dressed by Mr. Hazen Baker owes much to the attractive arrangement of the products.

Following is a list of the Island products displayed: Canned chicken, canned blueberries, canned lobster, canned clams, canned mackerel, baking powder, potash, pastry flour, bread, oat meal, graham flour, whole wheat flour, cream of wheat, honey in bottles and in comb, dried codfish, chutney, extracts, ginger ale, fruit cordials, cheese, butter, lard, bacon, sausage, cooked ham, smoked ham, chewing and smoking tobacco, cranberries, pumpkins, apples, potatoes, eggs, celery clothes baskets, half bushel baskets, market baskets ice cream, ice cream blocks, yellow eyed beans, barrels.

Babe Ruth's Two Mighty Smashes

"Babe" Ruth's comeback is complete and none rejoice more than the average fan. When the "Babe" crashed out his first one, fans attending the progress of the game at the Pythian Castle waxed enthusiastic but when the Bam connected for No. 2, the noise was deafening. His attempts today to set a new record will be followed with intense interest. There were 243 pitched balls in the second game of the Giants-Yankees world's series at the Polo Grounds yesterday. Of the 243, Pennock of the Yankees was charged with 116, McQuillan and Bentley with a combined total of 127. Analysis shows 84 of the number were called balls; 53 called strikes; 25 foul strikes; 14 fouls; 34 resulted in infield outs, 14 in outfield outs and 19 in safe hits.

Papyrus Ran Fast Race Over Course

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—Papyrus, the English Derby winner, who will meet Zev in the $100,000 international race at Belmont Park on October 20th, put over a surprise on the 300 watchers at the Belmont track today when he covered the mile and an eighth in 1.54 4-5 without taking a long breath.

Giving his stable mate, Bargold, a lead of more than a sixteenth, the English three-year-old broke flatfooted and stepped out with a tremendous burst of speed. He picked up Bargold within the half mile and went past him as if he were standing still.

Papyrus was full of run when brought up.

The crowd made a rush to get money on him before the odds changed, as they considerably did within five minutes.

"They say that a trout six months old is six inches long."

"That's so, unless he gets away from you—then he's three times that."

Eddie Gerard May Retire from Sport

OTTAWA, Oct. 12.—Eddie Gerard, captain of the Ottawa Senators, champions of the world, may not play hockey this winter. Gerard is seriously ill at his home with an enlargement of his throat glands, and has been under medical attention for a week. His condition was acute yesterday but Dr. Lorne Graham, who is attending him, states that he is much better today. Gerard may have to take a complete rest for several months. If this is the case, he will not be able to line up with the Senators at the start of the season. Gerard has been an outstanding figure in professional hockey for the past seven years, and has been captain of the Ottawas for four seasons. His retirement would cause general regret, as he has been one of the outstanding and most popular players in the game.

Train Held Up

The bandits then ran to the mail car and blew the door open with a charge of dynamite, which ripped a gaping hole in the car and setting it on fire. This explosion is believed to have caused the death of Mail Clerk Edwards, the only occupant.

After gaining entrance to the car, the bandits are believed to have dynamited the safe. They scooped up the contents and fled from the car which was burning.

A baggage clerk reported seeing two men run toward the front of the train after the explosion in the mail car.

As soon as the train stopped, Conductor Marrett started forward to investigate. He found Bates dead in the cab and Seng lying on the ground, beside the engine, dead. Johnson was dying.

Apparently the engine crew was shot and killed without warning and without mercy.

The train was pulled out of the tunnel and the fire in the mail car was extinguished. The car was cut out of the train which proceeded south with a new crew in charge.

Meanwhile, officers of Ashland, Orefion and Redding and Yerka, California, had been notified and a hurried call was sent out for volunteers and tonight posses are scouring the Siskiyiu Mountains for the bandits.

Southern Pacific officials rushed to the scene and an offer of $2,500 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any of the robbers was made on the spot. The extent of the damage to the mail has not been determined. The car virtually was destroyed, and it is considered much of the first clas mail was destroyed. No damage was done to other cars with the exception of the baggage car, in which windows and doors were broken by the explosion in the mail car.

Debts Between

in his private car. Shown an editorial in a New York paper discussing allied debts reparations Lloyd George declared that the debts owed by foreign governments to United States constituted a bond signed by the allies. Reparations, he added, are a diferent matter, there you have a sum to be fixed. Under the Versailles Treaty, he continued the amount was to be fixed by the reparations committee. It was the duty of the United States to act as much as Great Britain or France, but the United States failed to ratify the treaty, he pointed out, and the situation was thereby changed.

The proposal of Secretary Hughes for an international comittee to ascertain Germany's capacity to pay he declared while not providing for a vitalizing of the reparations commission an acceptance of the people of its duties, with the distinction that whereas the reparation committee's powers were compulsory the international commissioners proposed by Mr. Hughes would, in the first instance have the advisory powers.

Lloyd George also took occasion at his press conference to advocate a British American understanding which standing for a rational peace he said, could have it. No country he ascertained would stand against such a nation and it would be quite unnecessary even to fire a gun. Without such an understanding on the part of two great English-speaking communities he added, there would not be peace in the world.

Asked as to what form such an arrangement should take he replied that the substance rather than the form was important and that you don't need anything on paper. Inquiring eagerly for the latest word on the German situation the former premier explained that he regarded it as very bad, adding in response to a question that political and financial chaos had already come there. The French policy of recent current months he asserted as was his belief from the first could but lead inevitably to a crash in Central Europe. "It appears," he added, "as though the French government was negotiating behind the back of the German government through industrials and there's no peace in that."

"Please don't trouble to see me to the door," pleaded the departing visitor.

"Really, it's no trouble at all," the hostess assured her. "It's a pleasure."

Mrs. A—Does your cook try to make food go as far as possible?

Mrs. B.—Yes, some of it all the way from our house to her family's.
