OUR OTTAWA LETTER

Association; (c) The Church of Christ.

Private Carroll, a member of the Depot Battalion, who is to come before a general court martial on a charge of being a conscientious objector, is still on the strength of the Battalion. The date for his trial has not yet been set. Carroll when questioned by his commanding officer, declared that he could not kill a man even if his own life was in jeopardy, claiming that it was against his principles to take life.

Canadians who come under the provisions of the Military Service Act, and who desire to visit the United States, may be compelled hereafter to provide the authorities with some sort of guarantee for their return. Under the present system men in class one are granted permits to cross the border providing they are able to produce permission to do so from the military authorities. Cases have arisen, however, where this system has worked unsatisfactorily, and a change is deemed necessary. This matter is now the subject of negotiations between the Military Service Council and the Department of Immigration. It has been suggested that all men presumed to be soldiers, and who desire to visit the United States, should provide the immigration Department with a $1000 bond for their return, but it is felt that such a system would be unfair inasmuch as it would be a discrimination against those whose financial position prevented them from providing the necessary guarantee.

The federal Government has arranged through its Department of Agriculture to give some much-needed assistance to those stockmen whose supplies of forage and pasture are insufficient in the drought-affected areas in southwestern Saskatchewan and Southern Alberta. By an agreement between the Dominion Department of Agriculture and the principal railway lines the Canada Pacific, the Canada Northern and the Grand Trunk Pacific, stock and hay outfits from stations in these areas will be carried free to other points in these lines where feed may be more plentiful. Half the cost of such transportation estimated at regular freight traffic rates is met by the railways and the Department of Agriculture bears the other half. Return is granted on the same terms. A similar arrangement has been made covering the cost of transporting hay or other feed from outside points to stations within the dried-out area.

The death last week of Captain James B. Lambkin removes a figure well-known to maritime province people in pre-war days. Captain Lambkin was for years District Passenger Agent of the Intercolonial Railway, with headquarters at Halifax, and visited Charlottetown frequently on official business. He has been connected with the Militia Department here almost continuously since the outbreak of war, and at the time of his death held the position of conducting officer. He was a highly capable official and made friends wherever he went. His death in the prime of manhood is sincerely mourned.

WHY GERMANY WANTS TO NEGOTIATE

Why is it necessary that the Allied nations should be on their guard against what are called "peace offensives"?

Why should they not adopt the advice proffered by Lord Lansdowne, Arnold Bennett and others who have their ears to the ground listening for the first faint adumbration of peace? Why should they not "meet Germany half way," state their terms, and if Germany accepts the general principles laid down by President Wilson, begin negotiations for peace? Why, if Germany is sincere, if she has no idea of seeking an honorable peace, is she so anxious to get the Allies to negotiate. The answer to all these questions may be given in one sentence: The Kaiser believes that if he once gets the Allies involved in diplomatic conversations, if there is for the time being an armistice, they would be unable after some weeks or months of discussion to muster sufficient resolution and energy to resume the war, no matter what disastrous conditions might be imposed upon them. For his own part he believes that so thoroughly is the German nation disciplined that it would resume the conflict as promptly as it was begun.

Austria Plays Kaiser's Game

He sees what an armistice and peace negotiations did for him at Brest-Litovsk. He has found that the Russian nation, despite the fact that the pledges made to it were violated the week after they were sealed, chose rather to submit to these new wrongs than resume the fight. It is on this account that German agents are sleeplessly at work, before, during and after German military operations. In Switzerland, particularly, they swarm, according to B. F. Kosputh, special correspondent of the Philadelphia Evening Ledger, who has been visiting Berne. He says that in the lobby of any of the great hotels in Switzerland one may see an exceptionally distinguished looking young couple, the man suave and friendly to all English-speaking people, and speaking so sympathetically of the fine young fellows who have been sacrificed in the war.

Sincere But Dangerous

Enquiry will show that these people are a Hungarian count and his wife; that they are wealthy, and not to be confounded with vulgar adventurers nor more cultured German spies. Nevertheless, they are in Switzerland doing the Kaiser's work, and an insidious work it is. They seek the company of Americans and Englishmen, express the highest admiration for these countries and wholeheartedly denounce the Kaiser. They heartily denounce the Kaiser, and desire that the war should end. To prove this they are able to quote the famous letter to Prince Sixtus. In the view of Mr. Kosputh, these titled Hungarians or Austrians are not hypocrites. They are sincere enough and this makes them all the more dangerous. They are permitted by their government to idle the months through Switzerland when Austria needs every fighting man, because it is hoped that their incessant talk about reconciliation, seeking an opportunity to throw off the German yoke, and at a peace conference would boldly declare her anti-German sentiments, all have a tendency to weaken the fighting spirit of the Allies and lure them to the fatal negotiations with Germany.

which eventually caused his death. To give him proper care and attention he was taken to the pay ward of the County Hospital near San Jose, just six months ago.

Mac was one of the early pioneers of the state. Previous to coming here in 1850, he lived in New York City, where he was head bookkeeper of a large mercantile house. The discovery of gold brought him out west, and he spent years in the mines of Calaveras county, amassing considerable wealth. He gave liberally of his means to charity. Later through the influence of his old friend, Senator Stanford, he was appointed collector of internal revenue in Sacramento, which position he held for several years. He was a staunch Republican all his life.

He never married. In addition to his two sisters, Mrs. Anne Cobb of Gilroy and Mrs. Kate Hall of San Jose, he leaves two brothers, Duncan and Archibald in Nine Mile Creek, P.E.I. One of his brothers is over 90 years of age, and all are over 75 years of age. Mac was of Scotch descent, and full of original wit. He was of a kind and gentle nature, and his good deeds will long be cherished by his friends and relatives. The funeral took place on Tuesday from Farniee & Barshinger's mortuary chapel. Rev. Wm. Higgs read the Episcopal burial service at the grave, and Messrs. H. E. Robinson and D. J. Riley and Miss Lavin furnished hymns. The grave was covered with beautiful flowers, which he loved so well. — San Francisco ex.

Austria's Modest Hopes

Mr. Kosputh believes that there is very likely to come a time when Austria will seek to cut loose from Germany, but that time will be when the military power of Germany will be destroyed, when Germany will be powerless to revenge herself upon a faithless ally. When Germany throws down her arms and shouts "Kamerad" Austria will throw down her arms and rush to embrace her enemies. She is willing to share any possible benefits of the war if Germany should win, and believes that if Germany loses she may be better treated by the Allies than Germany since public feeling in none of the Allied countries except Italy and Serbia, is so bitter against her. Some of her representatives with whom the correspondent talked even expressed the hope that after the war Austria would be able to borrow money from England and the United States.

IN MEMORIAM

ALEX. MacGREGOR, PIONEER OF '50, IS DEAD

Departed this life Sunday evening, July 21, Alexander McGregor, aged 88 years, 4 months and 4 days. To those who have known this intelligent old gentleman for the past thirty-six years he was familiarly known as "Uncle Mac." He made his home with his sister, Mrs. Anne Cobb all these years. "Uncle Mac" was of a quiet, unobtrusive nature. Years ago a spell of typhoid fever left him deaf and a partial invalid, compelling him to give up the fine position of Collector of Internal Revenue in the Sacramento district. He came to Gilroy, and for years did lighter work, being a first class gardener. He was somewhat of a recluse, and an omnivorous reader. He was one of the brightest and best informed men in our city, being a graduate of Prince of Wales College, Prince Edward Island. He retained his faculties to the last, but prayed to be released from suffering. About a year ago a cancer developed on his ear,

The sympathy of the entire community goes out to Mr. and Mrs. Murdoch Balderson in the loss of their only daughter at the tender age of seven years and three months. Going to the hospital for treatment she was attacked with pleuro-pneumonia and suddenly passed into the spirit world. The funeral was very largely attended considering the busy season of the year, and all that was mortal of little Marjorie was laid to rest in the Kirk Cemetery at Lot 48. The funeral services were conducted by the Rev. Daniel MacLean. But a short time ago one brave boy of this family was "killed in action" another young and exceedingly brilliant young man died after a lingering sickness and now their only daughter is called away. "Whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth and scourgeth every son whom He receiveth." Suffer the little children to come unto me and forbid them not for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven.
