ROMANIAN JEWS EMIGRATING.

VIENNA, Oct. 30.—After an interval of several weeks, the migration of Romanians through this city for the United States has recommenced heavily. Parties of emigrants, numbering 400 persons, were here last Tuesday and Wednesday, the most remarkable feature of this movement is that half of the emigrants are men, whereas former parties were almost entirely composed of women and children. The men now emigrating are chiefly artisans.

A PRIEST EXCOMMUNICATED

EVANSTON, O., Oct. 30.—A formal letter of major excommunication from the Catholic church has been issued by Bishop Horstmann, against the Rev. Tichy, until recently the pastor of a Polish congregation in this city. The dispute between bishop and priest began in the latter organized a parish without the authority and approval of the bishop.

AWFUL PAIN.

Man Suffered Terrible Torture with Pains in His Back and Lungs.

MANE, QUE., Nov. 3.—(Special).—Mr. Malone of this place, has at last found relief for the excruciating pains in his back and lungs which have troubled him long. The suffering Mr. Malone had had has been almost beyond belief, tried many medicines, but nothing did to do him any good until he was cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. A remedy has completely restored Mr. Malone to good health and he has no longer the slightest pain in his back or any other part and is feeling splendid. This was a most remarkable cure and one which has done much to make Dr. Williams' Pink Pills still more popular with the people in his neighborhood. They will cure Rheumatism, Sciatica, Backache, or any other Kidney trouble.

"Life."

Brother Smoothly—Ah, yes, brethren and sisters, I feel to-night that I ought to confess, in the words of the apostle, that I am "the chief of sinners," and—

Who said "Amen?"

Not a Satisfactory Answer.

"Dearie, I didn't know that wheat could be harvested in the winter time, and yet I see in this newspaper something about the price of January wheat. When I was a girl on the farm the wheat always ripened in July or August," and her face wore a troubled look as she laid down the paper in which she had happened to glance at the market reports while looking for the society gossip.

"Wheat doesn't ripen in January now any more than it did when we were young, my love," replied her husband. "The terms you refer to do not mean that the wheat ripened in January, but that it was sold for delivery in that month. It was harvested in July, just as it used to be, stored, and kept for use at some future time. The supply thus accumulated is then sold to various buyers, some of whom want it delivered in one month and others in other months. Sales thus made are called 'futures,' and form the basis of much of the gambling that takes place on 'Change.'"

"How interesting! Now tell me what 'squeezing the shorts' means."

He mused a moment, and then realizing the impossibility of properly explaining the term in his limited time, said: "You are much shorter than I, you know. Well, when I put my arms around you I 'squeeze a short,' see?"

"Oh, indeed! Well, if that's what you men do on 'Change it accounts for your devotion to business.'"

And he realized that he had made a mistake.

ANECDOTAL.

A Paris journal relates that Prince Metternich once asked Jules Janin for his autograph. Janin took a sheet of paper and wrote over his signature: "Good for a hundred bottles of Johannisberg, to be placed in my cellar." The prince sent them.

The Kaiser can not only speak English perfectly, but he can just in our language. When he gave a special audience to Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan he asked one of the ladies of the party what she thought of the German Ocean. She replied that the voyage on it had been very rough. "I am sorry," said the Kaiser, glancing at Mr. Morgan; "but the next time you visit us I shall pour oil in the waters—Standard oil!"

Thomas A. Edison has a keen sense of humor, and never fails to use it when an occasion presents itself. For instance, just before he went on a recent trip to Florida, he called his manager to his room and said: "I always notice that you look very well when you work hard." The manager looked up, wondering what Mr. Edison would say next. "Now, I am going away to Fort Meyer. I hope you will enjoy good health while I am gone."

A popular captain's wife was more than usually anxious over the safety of her husband, and accordingly handed a parish clerk a slip one Sunday morning, bearing the words: "Captain Wilson, having gone to sea, his wife desires the prayers of this congregation on his behalf." Unfortunately, by the misplacement of the commas after the "sea," the congregation were told that "Captain Wilson having gone to see his wife, desires the prayers of this congregation on his behalf."

During his exile at Elba, Napoleon related that one day his mother's mother was hobbling along the street in Ajaccio, Corsica, and that he and his sister, Pauline, followed the old lady, and mimicked her. Their grandmother, happening to turn, caught them in the act. She complained to Mme. Letitia. Pauline was at once "spanked" and disposed of; Napoleon, who was out in regimentals, could not be handled. His mother bided her time. Next day, when her son was off his guard, she cried: "Quick, Napoleon! You are invited to dine with the governor!" He ran up to his room to change his clothing. She quietly followed, and when she judged that the proper time had come, rushed into the room, seized her unresisting hero before he guessed her purpose, laid him across the maternal knee, and belabored him earnestly with the flat of her hand.

One day David Col, the Flemish genre painter, was asked by a peasant to paint a portrait of his father. The young artist said that he would be delighted, and enquired when the father would be able to give him a sitting. The peasant replied, "Oh, he is dead." "How would you have me paint his portrait?" asked the artist, somewhat amused at the peasant's naivete. "Look here, sir," said the peasant, "this picture on the easel—whom does it represent?" "St. Anthony." "You are sure it is St. Anthony?" "Yes." "Did he come here to sit?" "Of course not." "Then, you see, you are quite able to make a dead man's portrait." Col, who asked no better than to earn money, yielded, and, after making enquiries concerning the old man, set about painting the portrait. The peasant, seeing it for the first time, fell on his knees and cried bitterly. "Why do you cry?" asked the painter. "Because my father has grown so ugly."

THE EDITOR'S MAIL.

A VOICE FROM LOT 33.

SIR,—If the Park Packing Company be a good thing for the country, it is not likely to help the Government. I had a pleasant visit from one of the strongest and best of Grits the other day and I don't think he mentioned the Government or the bonds. He did not like to have a company monopolise the business. I said to him The Guardian was doing its duty in warning the Government and country of the danger. What do you think was his reply? He said, "I receive both The Guardian and Patriot. I intended to stop The Guardian but now I will reverse it."

with a desire to test the colonial knowledge of the ordinary Londoner Sir William took a friend along the Strand with him and cast about for three likely subjects. The friend, a distinguished London lawyer, was unwilling to believe that English people were as ignorant on matters Canadian as Sir William represented. The first person accosted had never heard of Canada, and said so shortly. The second was anxious to assist the befogged stranger, and ruminated, but finally had to admit that he was unable to give the locality of Canada. He was sure that it was nowhere near the Strand, as he had lived around those parts for nearly seventy years. This encouraged Sir William. Changing his question a little, he went up to a cockney flower-girl. He asked her if she was familiar with Ottawa. "Familiar with who?" she asked. "You go 'long or I'll smack your dirty face."

Minister Wu-Ting-fang promises to write two books on America when he returns to China, whither he has been called to take charge of the work of revising and codifying the laws of his country. His experiences in the United States have been many, and some of them unique. On one occasion he and Carl Schurz were both to make addresses before a university audience. Schurz had spoken to the students before, and when they saw him on the platform they called out, "Schurz!" "Schurz!" The Chinese Minister, conscious that his slight blouse, worn outside his trousers, might have awakened what he knew to be the easily-provoked irreverence of undergraduates, mistook the salutation for "shirts." Whereupon he rose, bowed and smilingly adjusted his robes, displaying the evident comfort he enjoyed in wearing them. Now the students took up the cry in earnest, and "Schurz" readily became "shirts." The uproar of their merriment rang lustily throughout the auditorium. Even the bland and philosophic Minister Wu began to display embarrassment. "Don't pay any attention to them," whispered Mr. Schurz; "they mean me." "Oh, is that all!" exclaimed the Chinese Minister, and sank back into his chair, vastly relieved.

Dinner Invitations.

"I find with men it succeeds better to ask them personally to come to dinner," said a fashionable young matron the other day. "In the first place they are not so apt to refuse, and secondly, you get an answer at once, which saves a lot of worry." "But it is so awkward for a person to be asked point blank; he is obliged to accept whether he wants to or not," returned her companion. "That is just what I want," laughed the young matron; "it is the men I need, and if they come, I do not care if they feel it obligatory or not." Hostesses who do not desire to be considered bores, however, should avoid giving invitations in person. Many men complain of the use of the telephone in delivering invitations as giving them no time to make up their minds, or to concoct a plausible excuse should they not feel inclined to accept.

While crossing the Atlantic on the Lu cania, bound for Europe, Henry C. Frick of the steel trust was accosted by a strange man, who called to him: "Hello! Pittsburgh! How are you?" Frick looked at the man a moment, and then replied: "Very well, thank you, New York! How do you know I'm from Pittsburgh?" "By the stogie you're smoking," answered the stranger. "And how do you know I'm from New York?" "Why," replied Frick, "by your gait."
