MARRIAGE AGE RISING.

Fewer Early Marriages in England Than in Days Gone By.

The London Daily Express has discovered that the average age for matrimony in Britain is steadily rising, and as its authority quotes from the Government reports as follows: "Between the years 1876-80 the number of male 'infants,' as the law calls them, was 77.8 out of every 1,000 marriages, and of child wives there were 217 per 1,000. Every year since then the number has dropped. The last statistics (for 1901) give only fifty husbands and sixty wives who were registered as 'under age' out of every 1,000."

The Express continues: "Among the very poor child marriages are still rather numerous, and in the ranks of the wealthy there are also many girls wives. In the one case, extreme poverty is a direct incentive to early marriage, because there is none of that sense of 'keeping up a position' which acts as a preventive among the middle classes, and a working wife is looked upon as an additional source of income. On the other hand, of course, a wealthy man finds no drawback to his position by marrying young. In the middle class, on the contrary, men with limited incomes are becoming more and more chary of plunging into an 'extravagance' of matrimony. The thousand little luxuries of modern days are now looked upon as necessities, and these make life more expensive. Women also are not content with the same modest households and the same quiet life which satisfied their mothers. Consequently the average age of marriage is constantly rising."

All of which does not seem to alter the fact that lovers are as numerous as ever, and that when the right man asks the right girl an experiment in house-keeping usually follows. This year it is, of course, the privilege of the girls to do a little asking themselves.

AUTUMN IN THE GARDEN.

When the frosty kiss of Autumn in the park
Makes its mark
On the flowers, and the misty morning
Grieves
Over fallen leaves,
Then my olden garden, where the golden
Soil
Through the toll
Of a hundred years is mellow, rich, and
Deep,
Whispers in its sleep,
"Mid the crumpled beds of marigold and
Pinks,
Where the box
Borders with its glossy green the ancient walks,
There's a voice that talks
Of the human hopes that bloomed and
Withered here,
Year by year—
Dreams of joy that brightened all the
Laboring hours,
Fading as the flowers.
Yet the whispered story does not deepen
Grief,
But relief
For the loneliness of sorrow seems to Flow
From the Long-Ago,
When I think of other lives that learned, like mine,
To resign.
And remember that the sadness of the Fall
Comes alike to all.

What regrets, what longings for the lost
Were theirs!
And what prayers
For the silent strength that nerves us to Endure
Things we cannot cure!
Facing up and down the garden where
They paced
I have traced
All their well-worn paths of patience, till
I find
Comfort in my mind,
Pain and far away their ancient grief
Appear.
Is the tender voice, the care-worn, Enderly
Face
Of the human race!
Let us walk together in the garden,
Dearest Heart,
Not apart!
They who know the sorrows other lives
Have known
Never walk alone.
—Harry Van Dyke.

First Memorial Window.

The first memorial window to the late Lord Salisbury has been designed and carried out in London and is to be publicly unveiled in St. Peter's Church, Newlyn, Mounts Bay, Cornwall, at the end of this month. The window, which is to be placed above the font, in which is known as the "Artists' Parish Church," contains a representation of the Good Shepherd, and the figure, which, of course, follows the traditional subject, is surrounded by ruby diapers, work, white above, in dark and light green, are clusters of grapes, and the foliage of the vine surrounds the whole of the figure. The Good Shepherd bears one lamb in the right arm, in the left is the pastoral crook, and below are the lambs feeding in the green pastures (Psalm 28). It is entirely the work of English artists and craftsmen. The inscription at the base is as follows: "In pious memory of Robert Arthur Talbot Gascoyne Cecil, third Marquess of Salisbury, Chancellor of the University of Oxford, 1869-1903, thrice Prime Minister of Britain, born February 2nd, 1830, died August 22nd, 1903—the gift of his devoted admirers, a benefactor of this church."

The Czar as a Composer.

It has long been known that the Czar possessed a very pretty musical gift, and His Majesty has recently essayed his power as a composer of music to his own verses. In those verses the predominant note is one of religion. They extol the glories of the Orthodox Church and its saints, and exalt the virtue of Christian self-sacrifice and renunciation of worldly goods and prosperity.

Recyclists and all athletes depend on BENTLEY'S Liniment to keep the joints limber and muscles in trim.

FASHION HINTS.

Fur Stoles Are Becoming More Elaborate and Large.

Fur stoles have become more and more elaborate, and they have also increased in size until they reach the dimensions of little capes and are used to the exclusion of other wraps with tailor made dresses.

One of the smartest of these stoles types seen recently was of moleskin, having a double cape effect and long stole-like ends. Tiny lapels were of ermine, and the ends of the stole had crosspieces of this fur added in.

Moleskin, by the way, makes a charming turban combined with ermine and cream white ostrich tips, and it is also good for fancy mufts, shirred in with a ruffle of yellowish lace.

Really good dresses cannot be cheap this year on account of the quantities of material needed and the patient fancy needlework required in the trimmings.

Ready made robes can be made into the prettiest ball and dinner gowns imaginable at one-third of what they would cost all ready made.

The new stoles are so varied that choice becomes a difficult matter. The most decorative and uncommon exhibit a great deal of lace, either in stripes or medallions. Ermine is much used in combination with other furs and bordered with skunk, sable or squirrel. The new plush coats are made with deep tucks or frills and have much silk passementerie and chenille fringe or tassels.

The illustration shows a net waist combined with lace and narrow velvet ribbon. This particular model would be charming in ecru and red.

Stupefying headaches are cured, the head cleared, and the brain brightened by Mulburn's Sterling Headache Powders. They do not weaken the heart. Price 10c and 25c.
