LEMONS AS TOILET AID.

The next time anyone hands you a lemon do not feel offended, but turn the laugh on your aggressor by accepting the lemon graciously and using it to improve, or add beauty to your charms.

If you are a blond you will find the lemon very useful when shampooing time comes around. After you have cleaned your hair with soap and water, rub the strained lemon juice into the scalp and hair. It is necessary to rinse the hair well after this. The lemon keeps the hair light and makes it fluffy. It is well to remember that whenever any hair is shampooed the work should not be considered complete until the hair and scalp are dry. Too many girls grow tired and let the water get out of the hair as best it can. This is a big mistake for the damp condition is apt to give one a cold or it may produce rheumatism of the head and shoulders. If you have not the strength to give the shampoo yourself ask your sister or some kind friend to help you out and offer to do as much for her.

GERMAN SOLDIERS KILLED COMRADES TO RESIST ARREST.

PARCHEIM, Germany, Oct. 1.—Two German soldiers were killed and one fatally wounded early to-day by an army officer's servant.

They were attempting to capture him, after he had been detected at robbery. He committed suicide before he could be taken prisoner.

The man, an enlisted soldier, was attached as a "striker" or orderly to a officer of the dragon regiment stationed here. When he found he had been seen committing theft, he fled to an attic of the barracks and was pursued by several of his comrades, led by an officer. He was armed with two ordnance revolvers with which he shot three men, killing himself with the last cartridge.

AN ELEPHANT AND HIS MOTHER

Elephants dearly love a joke. When engaged in the timber trade in Burma, I observed some queer pranks played by them. On one occasion I saw a calf play a most ludicrous trick on its mother. The older animal was hauling a log, which fifty coolies could not have moved, from a river to the saw mills, quite unconscious of any guile in the bosom of her offspring. The youngster took a turn with his trunk around one of the chain traces and pulled back with all his might. This additional weight caused the mother to stop and look behind her; but, on discovering the cause, she gravely shook her head and prepared to resume her task of drawing the log to the mill. This was just what the little imp expected; and, before the strain was put on again, he kicked out the iron hook which fastened the long chain to the log. As the mother again began to pull, he held back with all his strength on the chain until her muscles were in full play, and then suddenly let go.

The effect was disastrous in the extreme. Down went the old elephant on her knees, and her driver described a most graceful and prolonged curve before he landed on the ground. But, like a cat, he struck on his feet and blurring out some heavy Burmese exclamations of wrath, he whispered a few words into the ear of the amazed victim of this unflinching practical joke. She seemed to understand him at once, and then ensued one of the most exciting chases it has ever been my good fortune to witness.

The calf sensed danger the moment he saw the driver whisper to his mother, and he placed a large stack of timber between the enraged animal and himself as speedily as possible.

Elephants seem to clumsy to do much running, but these two coursed up and down the yard in a manner which astonished me.

The youngster was more wile in turning, but at last he was cornered. The maternal trunk aimed him on the loins. He gave a shriek; at a second stroke he dropped to his knees, and took his punishment bravely and patiently. A few minutes later he walked past us to the shed; but his trunk was drooping, and the great tears were dropping silently down his great india-rubber cheeks.

I was sorry for the poor little fellow, and noticed that at dinner time his mother was gently rubbing him down with her trunk, and manifesting many signs of affection.—Chums.

VIOLA REID GOES TO PARENTS' HOME.

FREDERICTON, N. B., Oct. 1.—Viola Reid, the young woman who was acquitted on the charge of having murdered her child returned to St. John to her home at Fredericton on Monday evening by C. P. R.

She was met at the station by her aged father and a party of friends and escorted to her home, where the family gathered and quietly celebrated the successful outcome of the case.

Miss Reid is to remain at her parents' home and will find plenty there to occupy her attention, as her mother, who has been in poor health for a long time, is now ill again.

Mr. Percy A. Guthrie, who successfully conducted Miss Reid's defence, returned to Fredericton from St. John by the same train which brought his client to her home. Mr. Guthrie is being warmly congratulated upon his signal success, the best that any of those who had closely followed the case had hoped for being a disagreement by the jury. Next week Mr. Guthrie will conduct the defence of Medley McIntyre, the Gagetown colored man who is charged with the murder of Gabe Sabatin, an Indian, in the Coy. mill at Upper Gagetown this summer.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 1.—

"Philadelphia fans," who are anxious to secure tickets for the approaching world's series of baseball games, are engaging boys to stand in line at night before the public sale for the contest, to be staged in this city opens on Monday, October 6. Companies which furnish messenger boys, are making preparations to meet the unusual demand and one Company announced that the rate would be raised from 20 cents to 30 cents an hour for the service.

Although the baseball officials are endeavoring to keep the tickets out of the hands of speculators, it was reported today that one prospective dealer in the coveted pasteboards had engaged twenty boys to stand in line from 9 o'clock Sunday night until 9 a. m. Monday when the sale opens.

Under the rules adopted this year, no mail orders will be honored and each purchaser must buy tickets for three games in this city and no one will be permitted to buy more than two for each game.

In case three games are not played here, money for tickets not used, will be returned to the purchasers. The requirement that even those who desire to witness only one game must buy tickets for three, is causing some unfavorable comment among the local baseball followers.

WILL DIVERT TRAFFIC FROM CANADA TO U.S.

WINNIPEG, Man., Sept. 30.—The united action, which has been taken by twenty-three steamship lines in the Atlantic service sailing from American ports will, it is thought, have a tendency to divert the volume of the east bound Atlantic traffic from Canadian roads and Canadian ports. By an arrangement with the United States government the agents of these companies are now permitted to pay the alien head tax of $4 upon taxable foreigners booked in Canada to sail for the European ports from United States ports, upon the production at the boundary of steamship tickets reading from American ports. Previously the traveller himself had had to pay this sum and it constituted a serious obstacle in the way of American lines getting business in Canada. Companies may have the head tax returned if they furnish proof that the subject in each case settled within thirty days of entering the country. The circular announcing the United States government's ratification of the scheme is dated September 23rd and the plan goes into effect tomorrow.

Among the companies interested are the Canadian, the White Star, the Red Star, the Hamburg, American and the North German Lloyd.

Stanley Bros

The always busy store

able evening coat. Last Spring an interesting evening gown of net and spangles was exhibited. It was before net had come in for the vogue that it is enjoying now and will probably enjoy for a long time. The dress showed a foundation of plain white net, but it was almost completely covered with Egyptian gauze scarfs, spangled with tiny gilt flisks and crescents. The result was an elaborate and rich evening gown. The spangles shimmered in every light and gave the net a weight and dignity that made it the more attractive. With the gown there was a little cap of the spangled net, and an opera bag to match, lined with golden-yellow silk.

No matter what the style or material of a gown may be, the neck is left open. The high square or rolled Medice collar has had its day. Everything is copied after the eighteenth century English portraits. The neck-ware is arranged high in the back and low in front. The V has been replaced to some extent by the U and by the colonial decolletage which is close to the neck at the shoulders line and runs out over the bust to a sharp point on each side.

This outline, however, is never left undisturbed. It is filled in with tulle, or lace, or net, not always in white; for black has become quite the smart thing to use. It is more trying than white, but it is in keeping with the desire for all black and all white and not a mixture of the two.

With these open necks women wear a band of black velvet ribbon which, sometimes has pendants of oblong semi-precious stones such as jacks, or turquoise matrix, or Irish topaz, or pink quartz. Sometimes a simple locket is worn, frequently ornamented with a monogram or crest in small diamonds set in fine design of platinum thread.

When one does not wish to leave the neck uncovered, one stretches a tight bit of tulle across the opening and finishes it above the collar bone with a narrow strip of seed pearls and sometimes cut jet. When the woman has a chest which is neither full nor white, she may build up the lower part of the decolletage with thin folds of tulle, which is quite attractive.

Velvet is to much used this year on frocks for little girls. In the form of girdles, collars and cuffs it will be used freely, and velvet coats and hats, too, will be used. But whatever tendency there is to mold the fashion of juvenile styles by the rules laid down for grown-up styles, children's frocks are still simple in outline and design.

NEW YORK FADS AND FASHIONS.

Many of the latest importations for autumn and winter wear show the lowered waist line which gives to the feminine figure a curiously boyish aspect. The fashionable women of Paris are adopting this lowered waistline quite freely and at some of the fashionable watering places many of the smartest women appeared in blouse coats which were fashioned like a boy's smock. The waist belt came down to the line of the hips and the seams under the arms were almost straight. This is one of the very latest ideas in Paris.

These lowered belts are being made in many different materials, such as supple leather in a pale swine color richly embroidered in raised silks and small beads, or in a heavy make of linen worked over with fine wool, or again in peau de soie embroidered in wools and floss silks mixed. These curious belts are always arranged in such a manner that they circle the hips and they are fastened in front with a handsome buckle.

For early autumn afternoon dresses mouseline de soie is being very successfully combined with Shantung. The new makes of Shantung are heavy in texture and wonderfully supple. The Parisian dressmakers intend using Shantung very freely for aprons and even winter costumes, and it is especially effective in a peculiar shade of poppy red.

Afternoon gowns intended for restaurant wear at the tea hour are made of this material with pleated tunics of mouseline de soie or of crepe de Chine. One of the new Worth models was composed of Shantung in a deep shade of violet with a border of black fox on the tunic of crepe de Chine. On the corsage, which bloused over the waist belt, there were some beautiful Chinese embroideries and the fronts turned back over a chemise of rare old lace.

One of the most popular dress-makers in the French capital is using chiffon cloth and chiffon together for indoor dresses. This combination looks very charming in a pale shade of gray with a touch of vivid color at the waist belt and some really handsome lace on the chemise.

Gray in all possible shades is one of the colors of the season. Pearl gray is being most successfully combined with white velvet and ermine for really rich tea gowns, and a deep shade of smoke-gray fox. All shades of rich blue are in demand in such materials as velours de laine and liberty cashmere. Costumes in these materials are trimmed with bands of sable or of black fox, and the craze of the moment seems to be for Chinese embroideries of the finest description.

In this day of charming negligees an shoulder scarf can be transformed into part of a negligee can be transformed into part of a negligee. All that is necessary for the transformation is a Wisp of tulle, a yard or two of ribbon, a few artificial flowers and a little satin, net, silk or mull. The scarf can be formed into puffed or flowing sleeves, put into a satin jacket, which ties with ends made from the ends of the scarf, while the middle part of the scarf is used for the sleeves.

Or the negligee can be made with a chiffon panel back and front, taken from the scarf, held together with pleated tulle, trimmed with tiny roses made from little ends of the scarf material. Another way to use a scarf on each sleeve, just as a scarf. The effect so produced is charming and adds to the picturesque effect.

Old shawls last year were often made over into interesting evening cloaks. Some edged with fur and softly lined with soft-colored silk were really beautiful. This year, when Persia will seemingly predominate, just as the Balkans and Egypt did last year, there is more reason than ever to bring the old Persian shawl and to convert it into a wear-

LORD ALVERSTON RESIGNATION TAKES EFFECT OCT. 12.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—It is again stated positively, that the resignation of Lord Alverston, as Lord Chief Justice, is in the hands of Premier Asquith, to take effect October 12, at the end of the long vacation, and according to the prediction last winter, Sir Rufus Isaacs will succeed him, while Sir John Simon will become Attorney General, Sir Rufus Isaacs will be the first Attorney General to that member of the cabinet, and if he succeeds Lord Alverston, he will be the first Jew to be Lord Chief Justice of England.

The Unionist papers all acknowledge the ability of Sir Rufus, but strongly condemn the expected appointment on account of the Marconi scandal.
