AN ISLANDER RUNNER IS SLIGHTLY WOUNDED

The following letter has been received by a friend in this city from Private Charles Duffy of Charlottetown who left here with the First Contingent on active service:

Hello Old Pal—It is quite a while since I heard from you, yet something seems to tell me that I owe you a letter. We are only allowed to tell very little of what is going on out here and our letters are read and censored before they let them go.

WEAK EYESIGHT

Among the many "surprises" which the war has revealed none has been more striking than the one showing the enormous number of young men compelled to wear glasses on account of weak eyesight.

Prior to the war no men who were under the necessity of wearing glasses were accepted in the Regular Army.

LATEST FROM THEATRES

THE BOSTON THEATRE

Albert Chevalier the celebrated English comedian and character actor, will appear at the Boston Theatre, the week of June 14th in E. S. Willard's greatest success, "The Middlemen."

This is a wonderful film production of the love story of two English pottery makers and the never ceasing struggle between rich and poor in the manufacturing towns of England. It is in several parts, and abounds in startling features and thrilling scenes.

Mr. Chevalier is one of the greatest character actors of his time, and he has a wonderful role in "The Middleman." Josef Martin, the eminent young pianist, who made his debut at the Boston Theatre last week, has caught on in wonderful shape.

His recitals in connection with the daily concerts by Carlisle B. Nichols and her Boston Fadedettes are among the most popular features of the performance. Billie Reeves will appear in another new comedy production, and as usual, the best Mary Pickford and Charlie Chaplin subjects obtainable will be presented.

ELEANOR GORDON AND FISKE O'HARA AT B. F. KEITH'S, BOSTON

Miss Eleanor Gordon, perhaps the most popular Boston actress who ever appeared in Boston, will headline the bill at B. F. Keith's Theatre next week sharing honors with Fiske O'Hara, the great Irish comedian.

Miss Gordon's annual summer engagements at B. F. Keith's are eagerly looked forward to by hundreds of Boston theatregoers, who have not had an opportunity to see their favorite in over a year. Miss Gordon will play a new comedy sketch originally written for Rose Coghlan, and she will have the support of a large and excellent company of favorite players.

GERMANS OVERCONFIDENT

No Secret That German Soldiers and Russian Prisoners Are Sowing Wheat on Invaded Territory

What will the harvest be when the ripe heavy russet heads of the full-grained wheat hang heavy in the August sun?

Unmindful of the ominous grinding forward of the Allies the Germans are actually sowing the fields behind their lines of entrenchment, and that they will harvest the grain despite the grim lines wearing them backward inch by inch, towards those fair green fields upon which many of these farming soldiers will later hear the last reveille, perhaps before the grain is grown.

The British flag will not stop this side of the Rhine, nor may it stop there if wisdom dictates its further advance for the Union Jack's import upon European soil today is to make the stay of the unbidden guests in France and Belgium as brief as the lavish expenditure of treasure and the courage of its battalions can accomplish.

In France and Belgium the Union Jack is held in as reverent esteem as their own national banners, for British colors backed by British courage, in which Canadians are playing a most meritorious part and the monstrous foe to liberty.

Every home in Canada should show the Union Jack from its house-front. The Guardian's generous offer to supply complete Flag Outfits on practically gift terms is set forth fully on another page of today's issue.

Thousands have secured and hung out these flags already, thousands more are arriving for distribution. Get your flag outfit today—if you have one, get another, but take advantage of this opportunity while you can secure such an excellent Union Jack, pole, halyards and window socket, at the small expense which only covers the cost of assembling and distributing.

answered the president's preliminary questions in a low voice, speaking French with an English accent. When told to sit down she put her handkerchief to her eyes and wept softly.

It appears that she had been governess in a family at Mitchelstown, Ireland in 1906, and that then made the acquaintance of a captain in the British army. The couple were very much in love with each other and would have married but for the woman's nationality.

They parted, and Miss Pommerich came to Paris, became governess with a French family.

After the outbreak of the war Miss Pommerich asked for a week's holiday, saying she was going to London, but instead of doing so she went to Rouen and then to Rouen in search of her old sweetheart.

Unsuccessful in her quest, she went to Switzerland, and in the meantime her employers received an anonymous telegram accusing her of espionage. The police were informed and she was arrested.

The principal evidence against her was a letter to the prisoner from a German officer, written since the beginning of the war, asking her to go to Fribourg and give further information concerning "B of B." All expenses would be paid said the German who gave details of how the reply was to be sent to disarm suspicion.

There was a dramatic scene in court when she told her story about the British officer.

HALIFAX SCHOOL FOR BLIND CLOSES

HALIFAX, June 8.—The closing exercises of the Halifax School for the Blind were held last evening.

The cantata, "Our Empire in Arms," given by the pupils, including a big programme of music. There was a large attendance, the assembly room being full. All the musical numbers were good, but the most interesting and most enjoyed was the singing of all the Allies' national anthems.

The cantata was brought to a close with the singing of the National Anthem, and the presentation of prizes followed. Sir Frederick Fraser in a few words introduced Charles Archibald and Rev. Dr. Foley, who he said, would make the presentation of prizes.

TRIAL REVEALS ROMANCE OF WAR

PARIS, June 8.—The story of a German woman's love for a British officer and how she sacrificed liberty in order to see him, has been revealed before a court-martial here.

Fraulein Susan Pommerich, aged thirty-six, a governess, born at Dresden, appeared to answer a charge of being in the possession of false identification papers. The judges found her guilty on one count only, and sentenced her to 4 months' imprisonment, the exact period she has already been confined in, but she must leave France and not return for ten years.

Fraulein Pommerich, a frail, pretty little woman, entered the dock in charge of two municipal guards. She answered the president's preliminary questions in a low voice, speaking French with an English accent. When told to sit down she put her handkerchief to her eyes and wept softly.

It appeared that she had been governess in a family at Mitchelstown, Ireland, in 1906, and that she then made the acquaintance of a captain in the French army, with an English accent. They were very much in love with each other and would have married but for the woman's nationality.

They parted, and Miss Pommerich came to Paris, became governess with a German family, and then joined a French family.

After the outbreak of war Miss Pommerich asked for a week's holiday, saying she was going to London, but instead of doing so she went to Rouen and then to Rouen in search of her old sweetheart.

Unsuccessful in her quest, she went to Switzerland, and in the meantime her employers received an anonymous telegram accusing her of espionage. The police were informed and she was arrested.

The principal evidence against her was a letter to the prisoner from a German officer, written since the beginning of the war, asking her to go to Fribourg and give further information concerning "B of B." All expenses would be paid, said the German, who gave details of how the reply was to be sent to disarm suspicion.

There was a dramatic scene in court when she told her story about the British officer.

"I loved him," she said simply; "I love him now; I shall always love him. It is as an English woman. I look upon England as my country. I hate Germany." As she said this she struck the rail with her clenched fist.

"I went to Rouen and Havre to try to find Captain... I could not bear the thought that he might be killed at the war and I would never see him again."

love him now; I shall always love him. It is as an English woman. I look upon England as my country. I hate Germany." As she said this she struck the rail with her clenched fist.

"I went to Rouen and Havre to try to find Captain... I could not bear the thought that he might be killed at the war and I would never see him again."

"I would rather be a spy for France in Germany than be a German spy in France."

Maitre Philippe addressed the court for the defence. Taking the evidence as one would take a bundle of sticks, he broke it piece by piece.

At the beginning of the trial the crowd in the court were swayed by the report read by the prosecuting counsel, and their voices rose like the hissing of an angry sea.

After Maitre Philippe had spoken and the court retired to consider its verdict no one doubted what that would be. It was the lightest one possible.

Miss Pommerich has been removed to a concentration camp, but there is no more question of punishment for her.
