PRINCE ON BOXING

LONDON, Jan. 13.—The Prince of Wales attended a boxing tournament organized by the 4th (Territorial) Battalion of the Northampton Regiment at Northampton, and during the interval he made a speech, in which he paid a tribute to the splendid work the 4th Battalion did in the East. He said he remembered visiting one of the battalion outposts on Easter Monday, 1916.

"I feel," he said, "I am somewhat of a Northampton man myself, for I have my hunting headquarters four miles away. I am very glad to see you are all so keen on boxing one of the finest British sports and very characteristic of us Britishers. I always feel it promotes comradeship and fair play, and your ex-service men know what comradeship is, its value, and how it helped us to win the war. Comradeship is as necessary now we are trying to settle down to peace conditions; we all of us want to pull together, every section of the community."

A programme which the Prince signed was sold for 350 guineas for charity.

AGRARIAN DISTURBANCES ARE SPREADING

ALLAHABAD, India, January 13—Agrarian disturbances on a considerable scale are reported in the Rai Bareli district, southeast of Lucknow, and troops are being sent to the affected region. Crowds of villagers have been moving about the country, damaging the landlord's crops and invading houses. Pending the arrival of the troops, the officials are endeavoring to placate the mob, whose violence is attributed by the authorities to a campaign conducted by widely known political agitators.

The situation is regarded as all the more serious since in many cases the tenants are said to have just grievances, which the zamindars, or native landlords, refuse to redress.

Meeting Of The Bible Society

The annual meeting of the Summerside Branch of the Prince Edward Island Auxiliary Society to the Canadian Bible Society was held in the Baptist Church on Monday evening. There was a large attendance. The meeting opened with prayer and praise led by Rev. A. K. Herman. The local President, Mr. J. C. Jardine then introduced Auxiliary President Mr. W. S. Louson, who first presented fifteen copies of portions of the Bible in large print to the Prince County Hospital patients the gift was received by Mr. J. A. Brace a trustee who thanked Mr. Louson for the appropriate presentation. Mr. Louson in the course of his address made reference to the financial growth of the Society's work in P. E. I., the year 1920 being the greatest in its history, the receipts amounting to about $4,000. He complimented the children's choir and told several anecdotes to their delight. He pointed out the difficulties encountered in the work and often where least expected. He paid a fitting tribute to Mr. Porter and his work as district Secretary and made an earnest appeal to parents to regularly hold worship in their homes and to have the children store their minds with God's own word, it would prove a defender against evil and aid to victory over difficulties. This was followed by a nation drill participated in by 35 boys and girls representing the several denominations. They first sang "I Love to tell the Story" then followed "Onward Christian Soldiers" as they marched down an aisle of the church and up the other holding an open Bible in one hand and a shield with the name of a nation in the other. Twice around and they returned to their places in the choir seats while the shields were stocked in front of the platform presenting a forceful picture of our responsibilities. The singing of "In the Cross of Christ I Glory" closed this feature. District Secretary Porter was then introduced and gave his first address before a Summerside audience. His theme was the Bible and its message. He referred to the recent war and Germany's failure pointing out that nations as well as individuals who turned aside from the study and obedience of God's word all landed in the same place. He pointed out that the Society was now publishing the scriptures in 530 languages that the churches in congregational order draw supplies in over fifty languages. The Baptist in over 60, the Methodist in over 90; the Presbyterian in over 130; the Church ofEngland in over 160. He paid a tribute to Mr. Louson, Mr. Seaman and Mr. Sterns who were indefatigable in their work in behalf of the Society. He had been in Mr. Louson's home and assured the audience he practiced what he preached with regard to family worship. He commended Mr. Louson's appeal to the congregation. His address was listened to with great attention and he will be doubly welcomed when he returns again. The meeting closed with a hymn followed by the benediction. The thanks of the Executive are due the committee who selected and trained the boys and girls and who made this feature possible, viz., Mrs. H. C. Rice, Mrs. A. K. Herman and Mrs. Geo. McPherson. Capt. McGowan, Mrs. E. B. Dalton; also Mrs. Dobson the Pianist who so capably did her part and last but not least to the boys and girls themselves who so creditalby acquitted themselves.

THE WOMAN HE MARRIED

BY JANE PHELPS

PLANNING FOR THE FUTURE.

Chapter 57.

"Well Nan, I guess our firm thinks we aren't able to keep up margins, so they have made it a rule that no employee shall speculate."

"What do you mean? That you have to take out that money you have on cotton at a loss?"

"No. It was up a little today again, just enough to make me whole, so I drew it out. I have a plan though—I think I'll risk trying."

"What is it? Do tell me quick I am wild to know!"

"It's simple enough. I wonder I haven't thought of it before. We will open an account in your maiden name: then I will buy or sell for you whenever I get a tip that I think worth trying. Fool not to have thought of it before," Dick grumbled.

That night we sat up terribly late planning what we would do with the money Nan Hardy was going to make. One thing Dick insisted upon—that was we must buy a lot, then as soon as possible build a little home. We almost quarreled because I advised him to wait until we could build a handsome one.

"Get a nice big lot, Dick. Then we can have a handsome house, and a garage."

Dick had torn up the plan for the house we had talked about, torn it up in disgust because I said it was inadequate. Now he repeated what he had said:

"I've always wanted to plan a house, Nan. I'll show you and other people who think they know it all that it isn't necessary to spend a fortune on a house to have it both comfortable and convenient."

Dick was terribly nervous that night. I now know it was because he felt he was deceiving the firm, and was unhappy over it, although almost as anxious now as was I to speculate. I wanted the money for show, for clothes. Dick wanted it for me. That was the difference. I had made him unhappy by wanting things we could not afford, by talking of money, urging him to make more.

I believe if I had not insisted upon going to bed Dick would have sat up all night building that house he had in mind on paper. And after we had gone to bed he tossed and tumbled all night long, muttering in his sleep instead of sleeping quietly as was his habit.

The next day I opened an account with Blake and Ogden in my maiden name. I received a letter thanking me for my patronage, and telling me they were glad to serve me. I felt almost hysterical as I read it. I could hardly wait until night to know what Dick had done. He came up the stairs whistling. Then after he kissed Junior and me, said:

"Nan Hardy has 200 shares of I. C. C."

"And every point it goes up, Dick, we make $200!"

"Yes. And every point it goes down we are out $200. You must not lose sight of that."

"But you don't have to sell when it goes down."

"Not now. We may have to some day if things go against us too badly. But sometimes it is wise to take a loss instead of hanging on. Although things are pretty low now—not much danger I don't think."

It was years after this before I knew how hard I had made it for Dick during this time when I was urging him to use the information he gathered at the office to make more money for me to spend—principally on clothes. How hard it was—had been, rather—for him to refrain from using his salary in the attempt to satisfy me, to still my complaints.

To be truthful, I did not do much analyzing of either his or my own motives. That he had at last consented to do so, other men did, or as I thought they did, was all I thought of, all I cared.

My confirmation came while we were at breakfast. I felt very important as I put it carefully away in my desk.

"If it goes up five points, Dick, we will make $1,000," were my last words, instead of some foolish loving expression as I had been in the habit of using when he left.

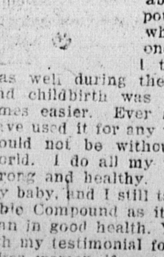
HOW WEAK WOMEN ARE MADE STRONG

Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn Mass. Mrs. Westmoreland Tells in the Following Letter.



Harrison, N. Y.—"When my first child was born I did not know about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and had a very hard time. Ever since then I have used it for any weakness and would not be without it for the world. I do all my work and am strong and healthy. I am nursing my baby, and I still take the Vegetable Compound as it keeps a woman in good health. You may publish my testimonial for the good of other women if you choose to do so."—Mrs. C. N. S. TELEGRAPH OPERATOR LOST HIS IDENTITY

SYDNEY, N. S., Jan. 12.—One of the saddest tragedies of the war, in which a former young North Sydney man is the central figure has just been revealed. It is a story which outrivals a tale of fiction and dates back to the year 1910 when Fred Theriault, then seventeen years of age, son of Mr. and Mrs. Viton Theriault, of Alder Point, (C. B.,) left his home and went to Montreal where he took a course in telegraphy. Later in various positions his travels took him to the United States and Canada, as far south as Florida and as far west as British Columbia. Until 1913 he corresponded with his mother, and then suddenly the letters home ceased.

About two years ago his brother Clerency Theriault, one of the Western Union staff in the station at North Sydney, got in conversation over the wires with another operator in the city of New York, who said that his nam ewas Harry Thomas. When the latter learned the name of the operator here he said that that he knew a fellow by the name of Theriault, whom he had met in a hospital in France Naturally this piece of news interested the young operator here and he sent the New Yorker his name and address.

Finds Son in New York

Time wore on until three months ago, when Mrs. Theriault went to New York and looked up the young man named Thomas with whom her son had become acquainted by letter. Her feeling can be imagined when in answer to her summons for Harry Thomas her favorite son Fred whom she had not seen for ten years, appeared at the door. The mother broke down and was carried into the house by Thomas so called, and his wife. They were both courteous in the extreme, but informed Mrs. Theriault that she was mistaken in her son's identity.

Then it dawned upon the mother of the young man that his was another of the many sad cases where shell shocked and wounded soldiers had lost their memories, and their lives made a blank as a result of the horrors of war. That Harry Thomas is her son, Mrs. Theriault is sure. Even Thomas's wife has now been convinced that the mother is right, and that a grim scar on her husband's head received at the battle of Chateau Thierry, is the cause of her husband's plight. Next year she is to bring him to North Sydney in the belief that at sight of boyhood scenes, the terrible cloud that shuts out the past, even to the recognition of his mother, will roll away and reveal to him his true identity.
