MacPherson called him that. The name woke sleeping memories. If he could be "Jamie" again — Sentimental idiot! The half-smile touching Jim's lips widened into a derisive grin. It was only that — Well, the week-end had been humiliating. He'd been hurt and he was running to the MacPhersons for sympathy and comfort. A fool idea! He was ashamed of himself. To find them would be, at best, only a temporary anesthetic, scarcely worth the pains of walking three dusty-miles. He was through with misleading impulses. No more romantic whims. He would take the first train back to town, pick up his bags at the club and go on to New York. Perhaps, if he made close connections, he would reach Roselyn in time for Kay's party. At any rate, at the first opportunity, he would ask Lenore to marry him.

Jim lit a cigarette. Mental perplexities lulled for the moment. He was conscious of physical discomfort. Hungry, that was it. He'd had nothing to eat since breakfast. There must be a restaurant, somewhere in the village. He calculated the depressing state of his finances. Worse than he had anticipated. He'd had no business to play red-dog with the Callenders last night. Such dissipation was for the opulent. Well, he could manage a milk-shake, at least, and a drug-store sandwich or two.

The time-table gave him half an hour for refreshments. Jim left the station and strode off along the main street of the village. Not much of a town, he thought chain-ly, a fish-market, an expensive looking grocery, a small brick bank with a Colonial facade. The village, Jim surmised, served as a base of supplies for the outlying estates. A post office painted olive green, a tailor shop, a bakery. The latest movies, anyway. The drug-store occupied a prominent corner location. Jim entered, grateful at once for the dim light after the glare of the street. The soda fountain looked pleasantly cool. He seated himself and re-

Rexall One-Cent Sale at Montague

Another year is on the wane and H. J. Mabon, Rexall Druggist of Montague, is conducting another of his famous Rexall One-Cent Sales. It is interesting to note that Mr. Mabon conducted the first Rexall One-Cent Sale on P. E. Island and is still going strong. His many customers throughout Kings County appreciate this real treat in the way of bargain prices.

What is a One-Cent Sale? A One-Cent Sale is a profit-sharing method of advertising. It is a sale where you buy one article at the regular price, then another one of the same kind for One Cent. As an illustration: The standard price of Kleenex Dental Cream is 25 cents. You buy one tube at the regular price and by paying one cent more, or 26 cents, you get two tubes and save 24 cents.

Every United Drug Company article in this sale is of high quality guaranteed product. Just the same as is sold every day at the regular price. This sale has been developed by the United Drug Company as an advertising plan. Rather than spend large sums of money in other ways to convince you of the merits of these goods, they are spending it on this sale in permitting their Agents to sell you two full size packages of high quality merchandise for the price of one plus one cent. It costs money to get new customers, but the sacrifice in profit is justified, because they know the goods will please you.

This year, Mr. Mabon has decided to run this sale again for one full week from October 16th to October 23rd inclusive. At any time during this period you may purchase everything in the drug line, toilet goods line, stationery, and many sundry articles for the regular price, getting one extra of the same article by paying only One Cent.

of-war, horseshoe pitching tournament, and step-dancing contest in the Montague rink. They are leaving no stones unturned in order to make this the big event of the fall season. Montague horseshoe pitchers issue a challenge to all teams for the championship of Kings County. The dancing booth is in charge of Mr. Alex McLeod of Valleyfield who is very capable in this respect. Music will be supplied by the South Shore Serenaders. So it looks like a gala night for all who attend. Prospects for this year's look pretty good. Most of the old faces will remain on the line-up and there will be quite a number of smart young hockeyists who will likely perform in the Primrose uniform this year. A keener interest is being taken by the citizens of the town this year and in every way it looks like a big season for the Primroses.
