Refunds A Favor Not Legal Right

MONTREAL, Feb. 3 (CP)—The woman who decides she doesn't like the dress she bought yesterday and takes it back to the store for a refund is asking for something beyond her legal rights, the Better Business Bureau of Montreal says.

She has no more legal right to ask for a refund than the merchant would have in asking her to bring back the article because he didn't want to sell it anyway, a spokesman for the Bureau said.

"Every time a woman buys or agrees to buy something, she makes a contract," the spokesman said. "This is true whether she pays cash, makes deposit, pays by instalments or charges it. It is true, generally, whether the agreement is signed or just verbal, although some contracts or agreements must be in writing and signed."

Hundreds of women call the Better Business Bureau about refunds. They are generally told that although some stores may take back merchandise this is generally granted as a privilege rather than a legal right.

Defective goods or merchandise misrepresented by the seller, however, may be returned by the buyer who is fully justified in ex-

Experts Plan

Broad Survey Of North Sea

By Charles Croot COPENHAGEN, Feb. 1.—(Reuters)—Large-scale and detailed plans have been drawn up here for a thorough exploration of the North Sea, in the hope of discovering the answers to questions which are puzzling Europe's fishing fleets.

Some of the questions which experts of six nations will pool their knowledge to answer are: 1. Why do certain varieties of fish suddenly disappear from areas in which they have been found for years?

2. How much of the water in the North Sea comes from where—and when does it come?

3. Are fish in the North Sea drawn up at a recent meeting here of the International Council for the Exploration of the North Sea.

For the purposes of this survey, six areas of the North Sea will be examined by the appropriate one of the six participants in the survey—England, Scotland, Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Holland.

The work will be carried out by the fishery research vessels, lightships and some of the weather ships stationed in the Atlantic.

Widepread Survey

A survey of the North Sea, according to the experts, must start in the Atlantic, the southern Arctic and the Baltic. Water from each of these areas flows into the North Sea and each has very different properties. Some is warm and some cold; some is salt and some only slightly salt.

A survey of the precise nature of various waters entering the area would, it was stated, provide a clue from which it may prove possible to deduce the movement of the North Sea fishing grounds.

Temperature of water all over the North Sea will be recorded at various depths and samples of water will be taken at regular and close intervals. These samples will be examined for oxygen, salt and other chemical content. It is upon this content that depends the growth of marine plants on which fish feed.

Prof. H.W. Ahlmann, well-known Swedish glaciologist, who first discovered that the ice and glaciers of northern Scandinavia and the Arctic were melting and retreating towards the poles, was one of the scientists who addressed the international council. He said that there had been climatic changes which had brought to Denmark 25 species of bird which had never been known so far north before.

Mr. Greenfield, he said, increased temperatures had resulted in a particularly noticeable. This had caused certain mammals, such as the seal—the Eskimo's main food supply—to retire to colder districts further north. Of interest to the fishing industries was the fact that higher sea temperatures had resulted in enormous catches of cod off Greenland.

He added that cold streams from the melting Greenland glaciers, similar to those which had driven herring from Icelandic waters, were threatening the cod fishery along the Norwegian coast.

Would Stimulate Interest In Art

WINNIPEG, Feb. 2 (CP)—More interest should be shown in Canadian art, in the opinion of Dr. A.H.S. Gilson, president of the University of Manitoba.

"We should have a better national art gallery, and in every city there should be buildings where we could see the art of our times," he said in an address to the Women's Canadian Club.

"Art suffered a degradation in Victorian days. It was regarded as a 'sissy' thing—the right thing to be done by the 'ladies' of that period. In recent years it has come alive again; it has become a part of our lives and something that can add much to the democratic way of life."

In bygone days, the nobility who brought their pictures supported artists. The church also wanted works of art.

"In those days there was no printing and ideas were portrayed by pictures," said Dr. Gilson. "When a new altar cloth was made or a picture of the Madonna and child was painted, every man, woman and child was interested. The public in those days was the critic."

"The cathedrals of Europe and Britain have no artistic parallel in our day. They expressed the way of life of those times. Art was an expression of the spiritual side of the people's lives."

"With the coming of the industrial revolution, this feeling disappeared and art became a thing representing the things around us. In our modern, mechanized world we need art in our education to counterbalance our technical outlook."

Towards Greater Security

Greater security for their families and themselves was the choice of the many people who became owners of North American Life policies last year. Their progress towards their financial objectives is represented by their purchases of 16,219 new policies totaling $82,562,272. First to confirm the wisdom of their choice would be those owners and beneficiaries of policies to whom the Company paid $6,578,348 in 1948.

The 68th Annual Report to policyowners shows that the Company is indeed "Solid as the Continent". Features of the report are:

Business in Force $512,248,468 Increased $57,893,298 Premiums Received $ 15,226,389 Increased $ 2,254,997 Total Assets $122,082,653 Increased $ 9,098,593

Liabilities to policyowners and others now amount to $115,998,112 and Special Reserves and Surplus Funds total $6,084,543.

Pacific War Left Scant Impression On Solomon Isles

"Sailing through the Solomons we spotted a few hulks of Japanese and American landing craft on the beaches, but that was about all."

Jungles have crept over most of the airfields, although some sections of Henderson Field on Guadalcanal remain cleared.

The sites of a few former military bases are marked by the rusted remains of trucks and war machinery stretched out for miles in neat rows. Firearms and ammunition, still usable in water-proof packing, were found by Johnson's party on one isolated atoll.

"The Yanks" have a place in native legends, but even those are becoming vague. Today even the bodies of American servicemen have been removed from South Pacific Cemeteries.

The "Yankee II", a 96-foot brigantine with auxiliary engines, sailed with a crew of 21 from Gloucester, Mass., in November 1947. Johnson, on his fourth world cruise in a sailing craft, expects to circle the globe and be back in his home port in June next year. He left the East Indies en route to Africa.

TORONTO, Feb. 3 (CP)—Threat of a city-wide taxi strike loomed today with the announcement from the A. F. L. Taxi Drivers Union that unless a deadlock in the wage dispute with the taxi operators was broken today a strike vote would be taken among the 600 cabbies affected.
