DELIBERATE CASE OF GRAVE-ROBBING

Remarkable Experience of Well-known Forest Citizen Vouched for by Baptist Minister and Local Druggist

(From Forest Free Press)

Forest, May 2nd, 1907. The following facts, vouched for by Rev. G. E. Burrell, Baptist minister, and R. L. E. Scott, the well-known local druggist, in a conversation with the writer, even when physicians have abandoned hope, there is still a way whereby the grave may be cheated of its prey.

John A. Galbraith is a well-known farmer, living in Plympton Township, about five miles from Forest. He is 6 feet 9 inches in height, and about 40 years of age. He enjoyed good health until early in 1903, when he had a severe attack of pleurisy pneumonia, which apparently broke up his whole system. In speaking of the case to the Forest Free Press he said:

"I did not seem able to gain any strength after the attack of pneumonia. One doctor said that tubercle had developed, that I could not recover, and advised me to settle all my affairs as quickly as possible. This was the condition I was in when my father, Rev. E. Burrell, of the Baptist Church, advised me to try Psychine, and procured for me a trial bottle. This was in May, 1900, and at that time I was reduced in weight to 120 pounds. The Psychine seemed to do good from the start, and I continued until I had used about $15 worth from Scott's Dispensary, Forest. I gained in weight at the rate of half a pound a day, and I went up to 150 pounds, steadily regaining my strength and feeling better. I soon had to have my clothes enlarged, and through my compulsion, but owing to a putting on a good solid flash all over. I have resumed my work and have gone through the severe and sickly winter with nothing worse than an attack of grip, which my system was able to throw off without any serious result."

"I give this statement for the purpose of showing how Psychine has probably saved my life, and in the hope that others may be likewise benefited by its use."

"J. A. GALBRAITH."

"Mr. J. A. Galbraith is a prominent member of my church, trusted by his neighbors and very highly respected throughout the entire community. His case has attracted very considerable attention. His was a pleurisy pneumonia, indeed, in the prime of life and with the brightest prospects to be suddenly stricken down in the midst of it. Visiting him after his physicians had pronounced his case hopeless (and, indeed, as the date is far away) and observing pretty closely his condition, it occurred to me that Psychine, which I had used in my own family with wonderful results, might benefit him. I strongly recommended it to him, and he began its use. The result was truly wonderful. Almost immediately he began to improve and soon was able to be out again. He apparently regained his old health and was able to take up once again his old duties on his large farm and to perform them with comparative ease and comfort. This improvement was permanent, and he is today apparently just as well as ever. He gives all the credit for his recovery, under God, to Psychine."

"E. BURRELL, "Baptist Pastor."

"I have read the statements made by Mr. J. A. Galbraith and Rev. E. Burrell regarding the results of the use of Psychine. I know both gentlemen personally and have heard and endorsed all that they have said. Mr. Galbraith obtained his supply of Psychine at my drugstore, saving him time and trouble. It had done him good. I took an interest in his case, and attended a steady improvement. Altogether I sold him about $15.00 worth. Psychine is having a grand run, and so far as I know it always used with beneficial results."

"RALPH E. SCOTT, "Forest, May 1st, 1907."

THE GUARDIAN SHORT STORY

In Durance Vile.

By Homer Johnson. Copyright, 1907, by Homer Johnson.

An up to date Raffles had struck the countryside, and was having things all his own way. Owners of villas armed themselves against him, and country constables watched the highways, but Raffles escaped detection and continued his unlawful ways. The male population for ten miles around could see no romance in his doings and threatened to shoot him on sight. As a natural result, the women, and more especially the young ladies, made a hero of him and declared that it was the most romantic thing they had ever heard of.

Ravenstreat had not yet received a visit from the gentlemanly robber. Fred Long, son of the widow and owner of the villa and its acres, reasoned it out that Raffles had heard of him, his firearms and his eternal vigilance. The mother hoped the rascal would not come, but expected him nightly. The daughter, Judith, who had just turned twenty, was nervous and heroic by turns, and it was left for Aunt Martha to fret and worry and wake up a dozen times every night shaking with fear. She had a few mining bonds in her trunk, also a few pieces of ancient jewelry, and after the robberies began she was insistent upon going to the city to place her valuables in safe deposit. A start was made one morning, accompanied by the widowed sister and Fred, and they were hardly on their way when things began to happen.

Judith didn't care to make one of the party and was therefore left behind to swing in her hammock and read the latest novel. She had just become interested in its pages when along came Constable Drew, who was supposed to hold all the clues thus far gathered and to be hot on the trail of a dozen more. He stopped his buggy to announce:

"Well, that fellow got into William's last night and fairly cleaned out the place, though there were three men and two dogs keeping watch. I'm hot after him and expect to get him before night. If any suspicious characters should be seen sneaking around here, I hope you will let me know. This here Raffles spots off his houses in the daytime and enters them at night."

As the constable jogged along and Ruth returned to her book a young man who looked as much like Raffles as anybody else came sauntering along the turnpike from the depot and had approached within a quarter of a mile of the house. Soon after leaving the depot he met old Mr. Jones and asked his way to the Agnew place. Mr. Jones had been deaf for forty years, but pride prevented his admitting his ailment. He didn't know whether he had been asked who was governor of the state or if the tomato crop promised a good yield; but, wanting to be civil, he told the inquirer to turn in at the first drive he came to on the left. The pedestrian came to a drive on his left and turned in under the old walnut trees.

He didn't act like a man who was expecting to see anybody in particular. From the front of the house, after gazing for five minutes, he passed to the rear and then walked slowly along to the stables and the garage. It was then that one of the maids came running across the lawn to Miss Judith and gasped out:

"It's that Raffles, and we shall all have our throats cut!" "Who? What?" was the exclamation as the young lady tumbled out of the hammock in her haste. "I saw him when he came in. He's been spotting off the house, as your brother called it. He's gone now to spot off the barns. He wants a horse and buggy to take his plunder away. Just to think that we must all have our throats cut from ear to ear in broad daylight! Shall I bring you one of your brother's guns?"

"Yes, but I never fired a gun. Perhaps the sight of it will scare him, though."

As Judith looked toward the garage she saw the stranger come to the door after evidently having inspected the interior. Then he disappeared again. It flashed across her mind that he was after the big new auto, and, gun in hand, she made a run for it. The big entrance doors of the brick building were closed, but the side door stood open. In a minute she had reached it, slammed it shut and turned the key. Raffles was a prisoner at last. There was a skinned rat in the building, but no windows. The prisoner was as safe as if in a village lockup. A few seconds after the door was shut he began kicking on the other side. His voice was also raised in protest, but was hushed not. The gardener and the servant girls came on the run, and the gardener took the gun from Judith, squared off at the door and called out:

"Now, then, it's Tim O'Grady you're got to do with instead of the tenderest hearted and best looking young lady in all America, and the sooner you understand that I'm thirsting for your blood the better it will be for the both of us."

"I say there's a mistake!" came in faint tones through the heavy door. "You bet your life there is!" replied Tim. "You didn't think there was a man around the place who has shot seven different robbers in his time and cut down no end of thieves in their proud days. You may be a desperate man, but I'll have you know that Timothy O'Grady is desperater."

"Could we have made a mistake?" asked Miss Judith as she caught the prisoner's tones. "He sounds like a gentleman."

"Never a mistake, young lady," replied the gardener as he marched to and fro before the door. "It's the gentlemanly Raffles we've got inside, and it's Raffles who'll stay there till the boy can find and bring Constable Drew and forty other men to take him out and send him to prison for life. Away with you, Tim O'Grady, I know that something is going to happen when I get up this morning feeling like a hero."

Rheumatism

Eats Up Strength Racks the Joints Prevents Sleep

UNCHECKED—It Finally Strike the Heart and Kills its Victim.

It originates in the blood and develops most quickly in the system of persons who are run down and lacking in vitality. The only specific for ALL forms of Rheumatism is Perrozone, which is a perfect solvent for uric acid and a splendid stimulant for the kidneys and liver.

Not merely is so successful as Perrozone. It has never failed to cure, because it attacks the cause of the disease in the blood. It neutralizes the uric acid poisons, quickens the sluggish circulation, and relieves the system of all irritating matter.

There was no resistance. Out from the sweat-box in which he had been imprisoned for hours came a demure and perspiring young man of eight and twenty. After one long look at him Fred Lang threw up his hands and gasped out:

"Resistance to the law means death!" shouted the leader as he stepped back and made ready with his shotgun. There was no resistance. Out from the sweat-box in which he had been imprisoned for hours came a demure and perspiring young man of eight and twenty. After one long look at him Fred Lang threw up his hands and gasped out:

"What She Wanted to Know. "You are going to marry a rich widow who has three children." "Oh, I know that," replied the beautiful girl, "but I'd like to find out what we are going to do with the children, for, as he says, they certainly need a mother's care."—St. Louis Republic.
