PTE. JOHN PROFITT WELCOMED HOME

On the evening of April 10th, a number of friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Profitt, Burlington, to welcome home their son Pte. John Profitt, who for 2 years was on active service. He enlisted in Prince Albert with the 234th Batt., crossed over to England in May 1917 from there he went to France in October, and was through some very hard battles although being slightly gassed three times returned to his home safely. After the party had assembled, Mr. J. A. Millman was appointed chairman and in a few words outlined the reason for the gathering. He called upon Rev. C. W. Nash. This address was accompanied by a well illustrated picture, the presentation being made by Nelson Painter "John" although taken by surprise, thanked one and all for their kindness to him expressing his gratitude at being home more among his old friends. Speeches were made by the ladies and gentlemen present. The evening was most enjoyably spent in music and games, ice cream and cake being served by the ladies. Following is the address:

Parliament Adopts Railway Time

OTTAWA, April 12.—As the city of Ottawa had adopted Railway time and the Civil Service had fallen in line, the House of Commons on Friday night resolved to adopt this time for the meeting of the House. There was apparently no other course to avoid endless confusion as the Railway Commission had decided that they could not interfere with the Railway time.

THE ART OF LIVING LONG.

Thomas A. Edison is one of the many famous Americans whose birthday falls in February, and he has just celebrated his 72nd anniversary. If he follows the example of some of his ancestors he may be spared to see many returns of the day. His great-grandfather lived according to certain rules of diet laid down by Cornaro, an Italian nobleman, whose book on "The Art of Living Long," he once happened to read and reached the age of 102 years. His grandfather followed the same rules and lived to be 103 years old. His father and all his six uncles, by abstemious living, lived to be more than ninety years of age each, and when his father passed away at 94 it was without apparent illness.

A copy of Cornaro's book is before us as we write. Born in Venice in 1644, he died in Padua in 1566. At the age of 83 he wrote the first of the four discourses which constitute his famous treatise, "The Temperate Life," better known as "The Art of Living Long." He tells how, with a constitution naturally weak and apparently ruined at 40, he had enjoyed 40 years of perfect health. He says, "I never knew the world was beautiful until I reached old age." In his quaint way he remarks: "At my present age 83 I have been able to compose a delightful comedy full of innocent mirth and pleasant sayings. Now, if that good old man, a Greek and a poet (Sophocles) was so highly commended for having written a tragedy at the age of 73, and was, by reason of this, regarded as victorious and a great triumph, although tragedy is a sad and melancholy form of poetry, why should I be esteemed less fortunate than he, when I have, at an age greater than his by ten years, written a comedy which is everybody's news, in a cheerful and witty kind of composition?"

This discourse was followed by others, one written at the age of 85, one at 91, and the last at 95. At 91 he writes: "All my senses are in perfect health, my ears are also my memory, my heart and my mind, and I write eight hours a day with my own hand." At the age of 95, he had lost a considerable portion of his income through misadventure, but his grandchildren, his interest in life was so keen that he could cheerfully write that he had found a sure way of repairing that loss by means of true and scientific farming. Peacefully and without pain he died in Padua in the 103rd year of his age. His wife lived to about the same age and her end was equally happy. In his book he shows that men reap what they sow and pictures the reward to be reaped in old age from a life spent in conformity with reason and nature. He accustomed himself to the habit of never fully satisfying his appetite, either with eating or well able to take more, and by finding out what foods agreed with his stomach.

TO RELIEVE CATARRHAL DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or are hard of hearing or have head noises go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmitin (double strength), and add to it 1/4 pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take one tablespoonful four times a day. This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.

Titles Again Discussed

(Continued from page one.) country at all. The last thing Canada wanted was the establishment here of a permanent aristocracy. He concluded by moving an amendment to Mr. Nickle's motion to the effect that the King be asked to take measures to do away with all hereditary titles in Canada at the death of the present holders.

F.F. Pardee, who spoke just before the House rose, declared his conviction that eventually Parliament must come to Government by the party system. He differed with Laurier on conscription only that being disposed of he felt he was still a Liberal.

The House opened by Railway time this afternoon, which proves a great convenience to members. Hitherto the House had been operating on Ottawa standard time while the city of Ottawa generally was using the daylight system with the result that many members were late for dinner when the House adjourned. The action of the railway commissioners in deciding it had no power to force railway companies back to old standard time as the change was really for the convenience and safety of the travelling public, finally convinced the Commons that while daylight time might not be desired by ruralists yet it would be a great convenience to the House so long as the city of Ottawa adopted it.

Parliament will adjourn Wednesday for Easter vacation, re-opening Tuesday following. It is expected that after Easter recess business will be rushed. Practically all important legislation is yet to be brought down. The budget is sure to create a lengthy debate while the legislation the Government is said to have ready to bring down is sure to open the way for much discussion.

ach and sticking to them. He was also careful to avoid extreme heat and cold never allowed his accustomed sleep and rest to be interfered with, and avoided poorly ventilated places.

Simple and easy rules, surely, to follow, but how few of us are willing to follow them! Many of us feel like the old woman who being asked what had been her most pleasure through her life, replied, without the least hesitation, "My vittles!"

A famous Glasgow divine once shook his congregation by informing them from the pulpit that many of them "were digging their graves with their teeth."

This truth could be proclaimed also in America, and in these days of the high cost of living it might be both healthful and profitable for us to follow the advice of the wise old Venetian Presbyterian Banner.

Awful Massacres By Japanese

SAN FRANCISCO, April 13.—Japanese began what was described as a "massacre" in Korea, at Seoul, the Capital during a demonstration March 28, according to a cablegram received here today by the Korean National Association from a native Christian pastor. The cablegram was filed from Shanghai. According to officials of the Korean National Association here the information was sent by messenger from Seoul to Shanghai by the Association's representative at Seoul. The cablegram reads: "Japan began massacring in Korea. Over thousand unarmed people killed in Seoul during three hours' demonstration on twenty-eight. Japanese troops, fire brigades and civilians are ordered shooting and beating people mercilessly throughout Korea. Killed several thousand since twenty-seven."

"Churches, schools, homes of leaders destroyed. Women made naked and beaten before crowds, especially leaders' family, the imprisoned being severely tortured. Doctors are forbidden caring wounded. Foreign Red Cross urgently needed."

TOKIO, April 13.—The uprisings in Korea are spreading and threaten to engulf the whole peninsula, says an official statement from the Japanese Government today. There have been serious riots in the last three days in hundreds of places. A number of policemen have been killed and several stations and post offices destroyed.

The Bolshevik Preparing for Drive

WASHINGTON, April 14.—Extensive preparations by the Bolshevik Government of Russia for a big military offensive this spring was described in official despatches received here, based upon a summary of information reaching the Scandinavian countries.

The Bolshevik were said to be getting ready for an offensive on the Murman front, as soon as weather permitted, and to be strengthening the forces already facing the Allies in the Archangel region. Suspension of railway transportation in Russian was declared to be due not merely to economic causes but also to permit large troop movements. Extraordinary measures also are being taken in the gun and ammunition factories to increase the output, men refusing to work being threatened with loss of food or even death.

In Western Russia whole new armies are being organized, it was said many former war prisoners being mobilized along with new detachments. Bolshevik forces are said to be suffering heavy losses in dead and wounded in evacuating Northern Lithuania, despite their numerical superiority. Mutinies are reported to be frequent.

HIS REWARD.

The man whose story is related here has long since, after a period of great suffering, passed into the life of which is written that there shall be no more pain; but he has left an example that may prove an inspiration to all who read this story.

When the terrible accident was over, and they uncovered his mangled body, so little of life was left in it that they thought him dead. And when the surgeons had finished their work there remained but the physical wreck of a man.

Both legs were gone; the left arm was missing, and had taken with it the greater part of the collar-bone. Of the right hand only a finger and the thumb remained. There was only a sliver left of the man that had been to suffer and remember.

But he still possessed a brilliant mind, stored with the rich fruitage of a college training, and enriched by travel in every part of the world. And it was all wasted! There was nothing he could do but to remain a helpless sufferer.

So he thought as he sat by the window in the Home for Incurables, and looked out on a world of which he had ceased to be a part. Before him lay his Bible, and he read the parable of the talents, and reflected bitterly that he had now not one talent to bury; he himself was as good as buried, and his talents, which had been many, were buried already.

An old lady wheeled her chair close beside his, and read a letter which had been sent her. It was from a stranger, but it did her good.

He was interested, and asked her about it, and learned that there was a kind of organization that furnished addresses of invalids and shut-in folk to persons who were willing to write them cheerful letters. She had sent her name as one who would be glad of an occasional letter, and this unknown correspondent wrote her regularly, and the letters comforted her.

A sudden thought came to him. To receive letters would be a little comfort to him, but why should he not write them? But to whom? Could there be any persons so shut in as he who could be cheered by his letters? Possibly the men in prison were a trifle more to be pitied; yet even they had hope of release, and he had none. But it was worth trying.

So he wrote to the secretary of the organization for the names of some prisoners. He was informed that his letters could not be answered; the rules of the prison would not permit. But he undertook the one-sided correspondence.

Twice a week he wrote, and the letters taxed his strength to its limit. But into those letters he put his whole soul, all his experience, all his faith, all his bright wit, all his Christian optimism.

It is hard to continue writing when writing costs labor and pain, and especially hard when there is no reply. Here were times when he grew discouraged, and was tempted to give it up. But it was his one remaining talent, and he resolved to use it as long as it lasted.

At length he got a letter. It was very short, and was written on the stationery of the prison by the officer whose duty it was to read the letters of the convicts. All it said was this:—"Please write on as good paper as you can afford, for your letters are passed from cell to cell till they literally drop to pieces."

In which he thanked the people for their kindness also giving a graphic description of his experience in France. Miss Maude Haslam presided at the organ. Mr. Lemuel MacKay read the address, while the gift, a beautiful silver ring was presented by nursing sister Jean MacKenzie. The ladies present served a dainty lunch, a feature that Springfield is famed for. Three cheers for Pte. Dunning and the National Anthem brought the meeting to a close. The following is the address:

To Pte. Ralph Dunning, Dear Ralph: We, your friends and neighbors are pleased to welcome you back to your native land after nearly three years service overseas. When our country's call for "men" and yet more "men" reached your ears you left your home and friends in the West. Paid your own passage back that you might enlist in an Island unit. Though your parents had already two sons at the front, they gave their consent and you willingly offered your services in defence of your country and for the overthrow of Prussian Militarism. We are proud to know that you have acquitted yourself so creditably, having a clean conduct sheet all through your training and while on active service in France. It is hard for us who have lived in comfort far from the conflict to comprehend the awful dangers, temptations, and hardships to which you and all your comrades were exposed, and we feel that your parents have great reason to be proud of you. To them we would extend our heart felt sympathy knowing that this joyous occasion cannot but recall sad memories of two crosses marking the graves of their loved one, in far off Flanders Field, their other two sons having made the supreme sacrifice. We are very grateful to you for the noble part you have played, and we pray that he who has brought you safely thus far, may ever be your guide and lead you to the final victory. We ask you to kindly accept this small gift as a slight recognition of your services. Signed on behalf of your friends in Springfield.
