NO TRACE OF CAMERON—No trace has as yet been found of Alex. Cameron, believed to have been drowned in West River Sunday afternoon, while attempting to escape from Provincial Police officers. Dragging of the river continued yesterday, many people from the neighbourhood taking part. It is understood that Cameron has a wife and family residing in United States. His mother, a widow, Mrs. Joseph Cameron, resides near where the incident occurred.

Even for very poor people

EVEN the very poor can afford the finest tea. One gets three cups for a cent.

Now it is possible, of course, to buy tea for less than that. But is it worth it? Even to the very poor? So many people buy cheaper tea, make more than they use, and throw the remainder away. They pay in the kitchen more than they save at the grocer's.

King Cole Tea and King Cole Orange Pekoe are always good and always uniform. From every point of view they are worth the established fair price.

KING COLE TEA and KING COLE ORANGE PEKOE. King Cole Coffee is making the same kind of friends as King Cole Tea.

Premier of Manitoba, Born in Brampton, Ontario, Mr. Norris has had a lengthy political career, both as Opposition and Government leader. In August, 1922, he resigned the provincial Premiership, contested the constituency of South Winnipeg in the federal election of 1925, in which he was defeated by Hon. Robert Rogers, and was then re-elected to the Manitoba Legislature by acclamation in November, 1925.

IN MEMORIAM

Dedicated to our two children Pearl and the late Gordon Ferguson, Bethel.

The heart aches and loneliness and tears. That we will feel since you have left. Those only who have known the vacant chair. Left by the cherished loved one laid to rest.

The days will pass and unto years will grow. 'Tis said that years can soften bitter pain. But no, it cannot take from those whose all. Has severed from them ne'er to come again.

The days will pass and some remember not. To those the world again is just the same. But those few hearts that never can forget. Will cherish still their memory and their name.

Their Sorrowing Parents, Artemas and Mrs. Ferguson. 7178-11.

Great Interest In Today's Game

St. Agnes, Nova Scotia Champions Will Open Series Here With Abegweits.

All eyes of the Maritime baseball firmament will be focused on Charlottetown this afternoon, the scene of the opening battle between St. Agnes, Halifax, and Abegweits of Charlottetown for the championship of Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island and the right to try conclusions with Moncton Catholic Club team for the three Province baseball title.

The largest crowd of fans in the history of local baseball is expected to turn out this afternoon to witness the opening tilt and what is predicted to be a thrilling and spirited battle from start to finish.

Doctor Charles Dougan, Abegweit Manager, in conversation with the writer yesterday did not appear a bit phased, and expressed the opinion that his boys are imbued with every confidence and determination to give Mellich Lane and the team behind him a game of ball long to be remembered.

Manager Dougan was undecided last night as to which hurler he is sending to the mound today, but in any case the home fans may rest assured that Dougan's judgment will not be found wanting when his aggregation moves to the firing line.

Abegweits are not short in hurlers. "Lefty" McQuaid, husky southpaw, is just cooling down; his speed and control was never better than this fall, and great things are expected from him in the series.

Putty Rogers, another first string hurler, and hero of last year's playoffs, looks in the pink of condition, and ready to do his best. Gus McDonald, who has more than one occasion excelled himself this summer, is also right and ready, as is Carboneil. Taken all in all these pitchers with such a superb team behind them as Francis, Rice, McEachern, Williams, Melnich, McCabe, Murley, Bolger, Blanchard, Whitlock, Wm. McDonald and Acorn, it looks as if the Abegweits are in for a pretty fair afternoon.

Morgan To Handle Game

Arlan Morgan, known far and wide as an announcer of great ability, will be behind the plate in the role of umpire. Morgan's reputation as a baseball umpire is as well known as his announcing, therefore it is certain that the game, which starts at 3.30 o'clock, will be handled in an expert manner.

PRIME MINISTER

Identity of certain legislation enacted by this parliament, as to whether or not it trenches upon the powers of the provincial legislature. In the second place, I do not think that anyone has suggested that any body would be set up by the federal parliament in Canada to fix prices. I have never heard that suggested and certainly I for one am not prepared at this moment, with the knowledge I have, to suggest that the Dominion of Canada could be able to fix prices throughout this country. So far as the last question is concerned, it must be apparent to hon. gentlemen that if three sellers of a commodity are disposing of it at a given price which is lower than that of a fourth competitor, the fourth competitor will not do much business, long. That would seem to be reasonably clear.

MR. BROWN: That would seem to ignore the fact that there are certain particular lines of implements which a man might wish to buy, and he would be inclined to buy what he did not want because of the possibility of getting a lower price. The Prime Minister will find himself involved in innumerable difficulties.

MR. BENNETT: The Prime Minister has been accustomed to difficulties all his life and has thriven upon them. He hopes that he may long have difficulties to meet.

MR. BROWN: Evidently he has not "perished in the attempt" so far.

MR. STEWART: (Edmonton.) The Prime Minister's answer simply demonstrates how futile it is to make promises to regulate prices. When we reduced the tariff on farm implements it did not prevent the price from going up. I may say to the hon. gentleman and he knows perfectly well, that whatever the duty on farm implements may be the Canadian producer will pay the additional duty on top of the regular price. The farm implement business in Canada and the United States is now almost a unit. Massey-Harris is manufacturing implements in the United States while American companies are manufacturing in Canada; and I take such strong objection to these increases on agricultural implements for the reason that there is a pretty fair understanding among all these companies both in the United States and in Canada as to what prices will be. We shall therefore have to submit to just exactly what the duty is by way of addition to the price of our farm implements in Canada. My hon. friend will find himself in a position of impotence with respect to giving us relief.

MR. DONNELLY: At the present time the difference between an eight foot binder in Saskatchewan and in Montana is $25. I guarantee that after this legislation has been in force two or three years that difference, by reason of the duty, will be from $80 to $100. The difference now amounts to the duty. The difference after this has been in force will be the amount of the duty, which will be $80 to $100.

MR. BENNETT: I can hardly think the hon. gentleman is serious in making that statement.

MR. DONNELLY: I know it.

MR. BENNETT: The duty at the present time is 6 per cent. If $25 represents 6 per cent, it is apparent that the purchase price is over $400.

MR. BENNETT: I had not been advised of his gifts and his enforced charity but I am very glad now to hear this voluntary tribute to his charitable disposition. I am sure the country will welcome such a tribute from the hon. gentleman's large heart.

PROBLEM

ted his tariff scheme at the Imperial economic conference of seven years ago. Yet the re-organization will not be accomplished without difficulty. The British manufacturer of textiles, still fighting his way for world markets, claims he must have cheap production to retain his trade.

The Conservative party broke on food taxes when Joseph Chamberlain brought down his scheme of tariff reform. For the same reason Mr. Baldwin has so far declined to accept food taxes as part of his campaign programme.

Without food taxes Britain cannot give a tariff preference to the food products of the Dominions. The Dominions, on the other hand, will have to safeguard their own industries in any scheme for re-organizing Empire trade.

Present Conference Different from Last

And the conference which meets to tackle this vast problem will be very different from the last. Familiar British figures will no longer appear. For the first time, a British Labor Prime Minister will preside. Instead of Winston Churchill will be his sharp-tongued successor at the treasury, Phillip Snowden. Thomas, who last year sought direct information in Canada, will be there for the Colonial office instead of Amery, Bruce, who represented Australia at the last two conferences, is likely gone. His place is taken, by Scullin, whose hair is reported to have turned gray in recent months, from the worries and troubles of Australia in the financial shadows.

The only two remaining from the last conference are Hertzog, of South Africa, and Cosgrave, of the Irish Free State. Hertzog is already here, still pressing his doctrine of international independence and the right to secede. Paradoxically, Cosgrave from the youngest and, until recently, the most turbulent of Dominions, will be the eldest in terms of continuous office, to sit at the council table. Coates of New Zealand, is replaced by Forbes, the first native-born New Zealander to become Prime Minister of the two Islands. And in the place of Mr. Mackenzie King from Canada will be Premier Bennett, participating in his first imperial conference, fresh from his victory in the general elections.

MR. BENNETT: Well, it is between $18 and $25, depending on freight rates.

MR. BENNETT: Time is of course pressing, and I will avail myself of the suggestion of the right hon. gentleman opposite and reserve my discussion of this question. But I need hardly say to the hon. gentleman that if his contention is sound the price of farm implements in this country will be 19 per cent higher than it was a few years ago.

MR. YOUNG: No.

MR. BENNETT: That is what it means; the difference between 25 and 6 is 19.

MR. YOUNG: His contention was that the price is due to drop and that this will prevent its dropping.

MR. BENNETT: That is not what the hon. gentleman said or suggested. Those of us who have seen the mad endeavour made by hon. gentlemen to induce the Canadian people in the west to believe that a tariff always means an addition to the price of a commodity produced in some other country will realize how unsound that contention is in the light of this legislation. It will not be so, and I am most desirous that in every part of the country, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, in central Canada and in the west, the people should understand that this doctrine which has divided the community into two classes is false and that the increase in duty, instead of increasing prices will decrease them, when the facilities which the country has built up are sufficient to supply its wants. That was the basis on which John Stuart Mill put the doctrine. This country has reached that stage, and I doubt whether any people in the world are entitled to more credit than the great manufacturers in producing facilities of the kind they have in Canada, which are the equal and in some instances the superior of any such facilities anywhere on the globe.

MR. YOUNG: They are not satisfied with credit; they want our cash.

MR. BENNETT: Well, credit is usually granted on the likelihood of your being able to get your money. I suggest to my hon. friend that there is another statement which can be made so easily to arouse animosities and antipathies against financial institutions because they will not lend money. May I ask my hon. friend from Weyburn, has he ever lent money with the certainty that he would never get it back?

MR. VALLANCE: Lots of it; I have done it this fall.

MR. BENNETT: But that was during the election.

MR. VALLANCE: The Prime Minister has made a statement which he should and must retract. I want to tell him that I gave money this fall to many farmers to buy twine with and they will not be in a position to pay it back if this goes through. And he knows it.

MR. BENNETT: I am sorry I had not been advised of the charitable disposition of the hon. gentleman.

MR. VALLANCE: Not charitable.

MR. BENNETT: Well, that is what the hon. gentleman said.

MR. VALLANCE: Necessity forced me.

MR. BENNETT: I had not been advised of his gifts and his enforced charity but I am very glad now to hear this voluntary tribute to his charitable disposition. I am sure the country will welcome such a tribute from the hon. gentleman's large heart.
