LONG QUEST ENDS
TORONTO, Feb. 18.—The son Mrs. Lila Doyle last saw as a five-year-old youngster is coming home after 19 years.
"Their long quest for each other ended, they will meet here in a few days, to start making up for the long years that have passed since Mrs. Doyle became estranged from her husband at Halifax in 1917 and returned from him and young Raymond.
It was only yesterday that they met again across 1,000 miles of telegraph wire. Raymond was in Halifax. True to his dying father's request that he find his mother, he had again.
Today Mrs. Doyle said, she was happier than she could tell. Money had been sent Raymond, he was taking the first train for Toronto. "And I'm thrilled to death at the thought of seeing him again," the mother declared.
"He was only five when I last saw him," she said. But she was the moment I see him." She didn't suppose, though, that he'd know her after 19 years.
Raymond's birthday, she recalled, was Feb. 14. "Had he been restored to me then, it would have been a wonderful valentine. But it has only now been deferred.
News of the boy was not a complete surprise, Mrs. Doyle said. Yesterday she declared she had a premonition so strong she couldn't eat dinner."

South African War Monument Is Draped

Charlottetown's monument to the heroes of the South African war in Queen Square yesterday was draped in mourning as Prince Edward Island remembered its 60 sons who fought and the two who fell in the ten day siege of Paardeberg 36 years ago.
The siege started Feb. 17, 1900. Men from Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick, enlisted in the Canadian Regiment, took part in the battle and were among the first who saw the white flag flutter ten days later when the Boers signified their surrender.
The second day of the siege Roland Taylor of Charlottetown was killed and J. F. Ways, a fellow-islander, fell wounded.
The day of the battle of Paardeberg, Alfred Riggs of Charlottetown was killed and Nelson Bruce and J. A. Harris were wounded.
Next Sunday the 17 Prince Edward Island Paardeberg veterans who still survive will gather in St. James Church for special services of remembrance.

Sheep Breeders Association Holds Annual Meeting

The sheep industry in Prince Edward Island did not show any degree of expansion during the past year. Mr. W. R. Shaw, deputy minister of agriculture and secretary of the Sheep Breeders' Association of the province, said at the organization's annual meeting last night.
"Serious destruction of sheep flocks by dogs and prevalence of parasitic diseases were contributing factors to the situation, he said.
The deputy-minister told the meeting "There is urgent need, if our sheep industry is to receive reasonable protection, for a more rigid and definite control of dogs in this province. The present dog regulations are entirely inadequate and sheep breeders are slowly but surely losing ground under the present system."
"Careful study of this problem is a matter of immediate necessity," Mr. Shaw declared. "No dog industry should be allowed to prosper which is called upon to suffer the loss of his entire flock and be compelled to abandon a profitable industry because some other citizen keeps a vicious, worthless dog and is too careless and indifferent to keep him under control."
"The sheep industry has a definite place in the livestock programs. Every handicap should be removed which deters normal progress and the active operations of those who have confidence in the industry," he concluded.
The meeting appointed a committee to formulate a policy regarding control of dogs in the province which will be recommended to the government of Prince Edward Island. Members of the committee are: Messrs. W. H. Townsend, Rollo Bay; Harold Laird, Kelvin; E. Holmes, De Sabie.
Special speaker at last night's session, Mr. A. A. MacMillan of Ottawa, assistant chief of field service, Federal Department of Agriculture, declared there was a great need of increased consumption of lamb in Canada.
"We are very small lamb eaters. We only consume six or seven pounds of lamb per capita each year," he said.
Mr. MacMillan advised the sheep farmers to maintain a steady supply of young lamb throughout the year. At present, sheep raising, with the exception of the Maritimes, is showing an increase.
Early lambs escape to a great extent many forms of parasites, the speaker claimed, stating that to be one of the advantages of raising early lambs the other being that they cater to a special market.
The ram policy of the Federal Department of Agriculture was being aiding the industry Mr. MacMillan thought, the grading service having eliminated to a great extent the scrub pure bred animal.
From what he saw of the farm land in this province the speaker thought that sheep raising should be a profitable side line here. He would not advocate the farmers going into the business extensively but a few good ewes producing early lambs for the July and August market would be an aid on most farms.
He also referred to the handicraft work in spinning and weaving which is gaining in favor especially in the province of Quebec. In some cases farmers received 50 cents a pound for their wool made into beautiful woven articles. Spinning and weaving are being revived all over Canada.
Mr. S. D. Irvine, senior federal field man, told the meeting that last year 59 farmers took advantage of the ram club policy of the department. 19 Oxford and 40 Shropshires were placed. Three lamb fairs had been held in connection with the county exhibitions.
The speaker also referred to the destruction of sheep by dogs and to the toll taken by parasites as two main factors why the sheep industry has not gone ahead in the province.
Mr. J. W. Graham, Federal Livestock Branch, Moncton, another speaker last night, saw need of new blood in the sheep industry in the seaside provinces.
The down grade on which the industry slid in the past few years he attributed to the low price of wool, the only average price for lambs and the depredation of flocks by roving dogs.
Others who spoke at the meeting were, Hon. W. H. Dennis, Minister of Agriculture; Messrs. Harold Laird, W. H. McGregor, W. H. Townsend, Daniel McKay, M. L. A. E. Holmes, John Profitt, A. A. MacMillan, Rollo Bay, Harold Laird, Kelvin; E. Holmes, De Sabie.
The Sheep Breeders' Association executive for the coming year is as follows:
President, Harold Laird, Kelvin; Vice President, P. A. McIsaac, M. L. A. Sours; Secretary-treasurer, W. R. Shaw, Charlottetown; Auditor, J. A. Gillis, Charlottetown.
