—DOG ROUNDS UP FOX— Some excitement was caused here a few days ago when it was learned that a fox from the ranch of Mr. Ruben Dickieson had escaped from its enclosure. Neighbors were soon on the scene. The cry rang out get David Murphy and his dog. With all speed Mr. Innis in his car car soon arrived with Ira and the noted collie "Tip" who has now a record of over thirty foxes captured by him. Reynard was soon back in his pen, but not before he had a good chicken dinner from a nearby chicken coop.—H.

—PASSING OF MRS. MARTIN HECKBERT — There passed away on Wednesday morning at her home in Summerside, Elizabeth MacKinnon, wife of Martin Heckbert. Mrs. Heckbert had been a resident of Summerside for many years and was held in high esteem for her many fine qualities of heart and mind. She had been an invalid for a great number of years, but had borne her sufferings with Christian fortitude. She leaves to cherish her memory, her husband, also two sons, Edward of Medicine Hat; William, of Winnipeg; four daughters, Mrs. A. E. Corbett of Malden, Mass.; Mrs. William Matthews of Summerside, and Misses Ethel and Constance at home, to whom sympathy is extended. The funeral is taking place this afternoon from her late residence at 2 o'clock. S

Mercury On Ocean Flight

as uneventful as aircraft science could make it and in sharp contrast to the New York-to-Dublin "mistake" flight of barnstorming Douglas Corrigan.

Major Mayo had a few pleasant words as the crowds cheered his departure at the moment of the Empires' parting above the placid Shannon. Spectators had come from all over Ireland to witness the takeoff.

The launching was completed within a few minutes after a dock-side crane hoisted the Mercury into position atop the parent craft. The four motors on each plane roared in concert and presently the swift Mercury was on her own and out of sight in the darkening sky.

Across the gray Atlantic three vessels were ready to receive the pioneer ship. Botwood, on the Exploits River, and Quebec and Montreal on the broad St. Lawrence stood prepared to greet the navigators. Decision as to a landing at Botwood apparently awaited Lord Bennett's decision after his flight of flight. Quebec was prepared solely as an emergency with Montreal expected to be his destination.

The course has been thoroughly surveyed. The giant flying boats Cambria and Caledonia, and the clipper ships of Pan American Airways made a number of test crossings last year. Other planes will follow Mercury this year as all skill of Canada, the United Kingdom and the United States prepares for the day when passengers will fly the ocean in a few years.

Tentative plans indicate that after visiting New York the Mercury will fly over parts of eastern Ontario and Quebec before going back to Foynes by easy stages. The return is likely to be Montreal to Botwood to the Azores to Portugal to Southampton, although favorable weather conditions might make a direct jump from Botwood to Foynes. Mercury is capable of taking off on her own, but with a reduced fuel load and consequently lesser flying range.

Ever Wonder Why You're Constipated?

Do you ever have days when you just have to drag yourself along, when you feel tired, sunk—because of that constipation? Then why not find out the real cause of your trouble?

What have you had to eat lately? Just things like meat, bread, an potatoes? If that's it, you may not have to look any further. It's likely your trouble is you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It means the parts of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and aids elimination.

If "bulk" is what you lack, your doctor is sure to say crisp crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast every day. It contains the "bulk" you need plus Nature's great intestinal tonic, vitamin B1.

Eat it every day, drink plenty of water, and join the "regulars"! Made by Kellogg in London, Ont.

Party Breaks With Major Douglas

(C. P. by Guardian's Special Wire)

LONDON, July 20—The Social Credit Party of Great Britain and Northern Ireland tonight broke with Major C. H. Douglas, Social Credit expert, at a stormy meeting in which blows were struck and police summoned.

Members assembled at a meeting called by a friend of Major Douglas to welcome George Powell, and to "acclaim publicly the Saskatchewan election result as an unprecedented triumph for Social Credit."

The meeting did not hear Mr. Powell, Major Douglas' representative to Alberta, as an uproar broke out and John Hargrave, national leader, in various tones declared the party renounced Major Douglas' political leadership because "it no longer is possible for us to regard as fit for leadership a man who completely failed to seize the golden opportunity presented by the 1935 electoral victory in Alberta and now seems likely to make confusion worse confounded by childish, makeshift political tactics."

Mr. Hargrave said he took the opportunity to "publicly repudiate any claim made by or on behalf of Major Douglas to the political leadership of the Social Credit movement and to denounce as futile, illusory and pernicious the Social Credit secretariat's past and present political tactics."

He declared: "In the future the Social Credit party, under my direction, will take what political steps may be considered necessary to establish Social Credit in Great Britain without any reference to Major Duoglas or his associates. We claim a free hand to proceed along electoral and mass pressure lines, and take this opportunity of urging every Social Credit organization throughout the world to follow our fighting lead and shun the gradualist tactics and strategy proposed by Major Douglas."

on the balcony of the Palais D'Orsay for a last glimpse of celebrating Paris.

Bright sunshine attended the royal guests. The detailed program was carried out with clock-like precision. The monarch's first act of the day was to pay his respects to the Unknown Soldier, over whose tomb burns an eternal flame in memory of the 1,500,000 Frenchmen who died during the Great War.

It was a brief and movingly simple ceremony, devoid of all pomp, and lasting nine minutes.

Municipal Ceremonies

In contrast the municipal ceremonies were replete with pageantry and historic associations as the King and Queen, journeying in royal splendor on the Seine, went to the Hotel De Ville to hear addresses of welcome from civic leaders.

The King, replying briefly, recalled the beginnings of the entente cordiale in the days of his grandfather. Edward VII, its consecration by George V in April, 1914, and its "baptism of fire" shortly thereafter.

After a royal luncheon in the British Embassy the medals of the International Red Cross was presented to Queen Elizabeth by the Marquis De Lillers, president of the national council of the Red Cross and of the Society for Aid to Wounded Soldiers.

At the ceremony were the widow of the late Marshal Louis Herbert Lyautey, President of the women's central committee of the Society for Aid to Wounded Soldiers; the Countess de Galard, president of the association of French women; and Mme. Rene De Taillandrier, President of the General Union of the Women of France.

These were presented to the sovereigns, as were the widow of Marshal Joseph Joffre, General and Mme. Maxime Weygand; the wife of Marshal Henri Petain, General Gouraud and the Duchess De La Rochefoucauld.

Later the King and Queen, accompanied by President and Mme. Lebrun, rode to the historic Louvre along a thronged processional route.

Returning through the Tuileries to the garden party they passed between two ranks of infantry standing at attention. Ropes strung between trees kept off the great crowds straining to catch a glimpse of the royal guests.

A small army of waiters was in attendance at the eight buffet tables placed under the shade of the great trees around the lawn. A separate table for the royal couple stood apart.

At the end of the "royal progress" up the Seine this morning, King George jumped lightly from the launch, followed by President Lebrun, and the whole party drove by automobile to the nearby city hall.

Bailiffs wearing their golden chains led the royal couple to the main reception hall.

Gaston Le Provost Delunay, president of the municipal council, welcomed the King.

Then the party went to the hall of letters, science and art. There on a table were gifts offered by the municipality of Paris to the royal family. They included a superb crystal table set, a golden cigarette case engraved with the royal arms presented to King George personally by the council president, a beautifully bound set of French books for Princess Elizabeth and a toy model flower shop for little Princess Margaret.

young people," Mr. Dennis advised.

Mr. W. R. Shaw, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, congratulated the Mt. Stewart co-operative organization which made the meeting possible.

Impressed With Possibilities

From a survey made a few years ago the Department of Agriculture had been impressed with the possibility of cranberry culture, Mr. Shaw said. Large areas extending along the north shore from Mt. Stewart to East Point were suitable. Only by producing high grade berries, properly packed, could growers here hope to compete successfully in the open market, the speaker stressed. Any sincere group making a move for the furtherance of the cranberry industry would find the Department of Agriculture very sympathetic, even to the extent of giving financial assistance.

Mr. Shaw introduced Mr. L. C. Roy, Canadian National Railways Department of Agriculture and Colonization, Montreal. Mr. Roy had been instrumental in having the meeting called, the speaker said, as he believed an Association would do much to assist the new industry.

Mr. Roy dealt with his subject under two main heads, first the need for market research and sales promotion and advertising.

A Gold Mine In Cranberries

"You have a gold mine at your feet in the growing of cranberries," Mr. Roy declared. "So far there has only been a lot of talk."

At present there was being imported into Canada annually two million pounds, or 100 cars of cranberries. Meanwhile the Dominion's production was 4000 100-pound barrels. Commercial bogs in the United States produced 30 to 100 barrels per acre while the price ranged from $5 to $10 per barrel.

Enquiries had been received from a large cannery in the United States as to possibilities of establishing a large plant in the Dominion. They would require approximately a million and a half pounds annually. Therefore there was a potential market for three and a half million pounds of berries awaiting Canadian growers who were prepared to take advantage of the opportunity.

Bogs cost from $400 to $1000 per acre to develop, Mr. Roy said. Most of this amount was labor cost for sanding and dyking, to which was added the cost of plants.

There was a problem in getting suitable vines as a virus disease, "false blossom," was very prevalent in some sections. An organization would provide a means of purchasing plants through a central agency where proper inspection could be obtained and danger from diseased plants eliminated.

No Disease Here

Speaking later in the meeting, Mr. Heath Saunders, department of plant pathology, Charlottetown, told the meeting a survey of natural bogs in the province had failed to reveal any trace of "false blossom." As a result a grower here had this year shipped a quantity of plants outside the province for foundation stock. There was great possibility in making this province a disease free area in that respect, Mr. Saunders believed.

Continuing his address Mr. Roy referred to the need under present conditions of continued market research and advertising. Only by such methods could the consumers be reached to the best advantage. Competition was very keen and it was the well known brands that sold in consuming centres large and small.

Hon. Mr. McIntyre

Hon. J. P. McIntyre, Minister of Public Works, told the meeting he had been interested in co-operation for the past 25 years. He had been the first, with but one exception, to establish a co-operative lobster factory here.

There was a need, the Minister said, for co-operatives to put aside a fund during prosperous years to take care of lean years. Prices should not be cut to eliminate profit, he said, otherwise the business was unsound.

He, too, stressed the need for quality production, telling in that connection of his experience in Montreal a few years ago trying to sell ungraded berries for a man in this province. He was "ashamed" of the berries alongside the graded crop from the New England States.

Following the appointment of the committee referred to above the meeting heard addresses on general co-operative lines. First speaker was the Rev. R. H. Barker, Bedeque, who declared that whatever a person's attitude towards the co-operative movement was there was little excuse of ignorance of it. At present there were 100 million people in the world members of some form of co-operative unit.

Every second farmer in the Dominion was a member of some form of co-operative.

Rev. Mr. Barker brought greetings from the Rev. J. W. A. Nicholson, of North Bedeque, who regretted his inability to attend.

Miss Mildred Crosby, Bonshaw, student at the extension course given at St. Francis Xavier University, Antigonish, last winter was the next speaker. Women would have to take their part in the reconstruction of the social, moral and economic structure of the world, she believed.

The first need was to organize for enlightenment, she said, and went on to refer to the branches of study open for women.

Hon. Dr. MacMillan

Hon. Dr. W. J. P. MacMillan declared he was glad to see the co-operative movement flourishing for he believed it would teach the people they could do things for themselves and not wait for governments. He congratulated Miss Crosby on her address. Referring to handicrafts which Miss Crosby had mentioned Dr. MacMillan could see no reason why what Nova Scotia or Quebec had done the people here could not equal.

The prediction made by Dr. Kepple of the Carnegie Corporation when he visited the province a few years ago had come true, the speaker said. Dr. Kepple had forecast that, with a library system, and the proper man as professor of sociology and economics at St. Dunstan's University and Prince of Wales College the people here would be away on a large co-operative movement. His words had come true in less than the time limit, Dr. MacMillan said, telling the meeting he had had the pleasure of writing Dr. Kepple and informing him of that fact last winter.

Rev. G. A. Christie, Central Lot 16, reminded the meeting that plain sailing need not be expected in co-operatives. There would be many problems demanding solution as time went on.

He believed very thoroughly in the co-operative movement, Rev Mr. Christie went on to say and believed it was the way the world was intended to be run.

Father McCormack reminded the meeting that the word co-operative had been used in connection with enterprises in this province which were not co-operative. In many cases the plan had apparently been to start at the top of the ladder. He congratulated the Mt. Stewart people on having the first and only store in Prince Edward Island run on true co-operative principles.

Mr. Eaton, supervisor of Dominion Illustrations, Charlottetown, said that the latest station of the fourteen in the province was at East Point on the farm of Mr. Frank Cheverie and was devoted to research work in connection with cranberry culture.

At present they were unable to say do such and such and you will be successful in the production of cranberries. Conditions for growing berries here were very much different from conditions in other areas where they were produced commercially.

MORE WAR

with modern Canadian problems and public opinion. One meets too many Canadians who have been sent to England five or ten years ago and who are expected to have up-to-date knowledge of what is going on here, he said. What they need is to come back for a "refresher course" to give them a reconstructed picture of their own country.

Italy Friendly

"I happened," said Mr. Clougher, "to be in Italy at the time of the signing of the Anglo-Italian pact, and it was heartening to note the enthusiasm of the people when at last they were allowed to express their inner feelings of friendship towards Great Britain. I don't think there ever has been real animosity against Britain. At heart they have always had a very warm affection for British people. It is possible that our reaction to Italy would be entirely different if we forgot the political situation for a while and took the country just as a modern country, in which vast improvements in the way of transportation, housing, etc., have been made in recent years.

The New Turkey

Asked as to his impressions of Turkey, Mr. Clougher said that here too phenomenal improvements had taken place in the past few years. "There are three great dictators in Europe, and the one about whom we hear the least, and who is one of the most interesting, is Kemmel Pasha. He has faced one of the most difficult situations in a masterly way, in creating a modern country. The old parts of Constantinople, including the slums, are being pulled down and modern buildings erected. One no longer sees the veils formerly worn by all Turkish women. The modern Turk goes about with a business like expression, and serious determination that was not noticeable a few years ago. The whole temper of the people seems to have changed. An interesting feature has been the development of modern factory enterprise."

Mr. Clougher could not recall seeing any factories in North America more scientifically equipped than those near Stamboul and Constantinople.

State-controlled factories utilize 16,000,000 killograms of Turkish tobacco every year out of a total production of 30,000,000. They have also developed large plants for the production of liquors. This is an export industry, as the Turks, by the Mohammedan law, are forbidden the use of alcoholic stimulants.

Mr. Clougher emphasized the enormous natural resources of Turkey, and the favorable opportunities opened up by the commercial agreement, effected within the past few months, between Great Britain and Turkey.

A native of England, Mr. Clougher has made thirty-eight trips to this country. He was brought out to Canada by Sir Henry Thornton as consulting engineer in connection with mechanical maintenance of tracks in operation between Montreal and Toronto. His father, the late Mr. T. R. Clougher, formerly of Toronto, was a pioneer in mechanical track development, and went to England in 1881 to study this engineering problem. Later he took up his residence in the Old Country, but continued to maintain a keen interest in Canadian affairs.

TAKING NO CHANCE

"Jones wants to borrow five pounds from me. Is he good for that amount?"

"Yes, with proper securities."

"What would you suggest?"

"A chain and padlock, a pair of handcuffs, and a watchdog."

Vitamannas Defeat Red Sox 6 - 4

Manager Roland Llye pounded out a pinch single in the 8th inning to drive in two runs and pace his team to a 6-4 victory over the Red Sox last evening. With the score tied, runners on second and third and two out, Roland lived up to the baseball name of Lyle and drove a sizzling grounder through short to score both runners and tuck the game away.

The game was far superior to anything seen on the Summerside diamond this season. Seven runs crossed the plate in the opening inning, four going to the Vitas and three to the Sox. It was in this inning that five of the seven errors of the game were committed but from then on some truly lovely baseball was played.

In the fourth the Red Sox squeezed across one run to tie the score and there was no further scoring until the 8th.

The Sox had a lovely chance to capitalize in the fifth but with second and third occupied and two out, Poney Daley bore down to retire the side without any further damage being done. Both pitchers were in good form with plenty of steam in evidence from both arms until the last man was retired. The feature of the game was the steady, deadly playing of the two infields. Man after man they nabbed at first after making tough running pick-ups. Al Clow of the Red Sox put on an especially sparkling performance, handling eight chances without an error. LeBlanc of the Vitas and H. Landry of the Sox also turned in some lovely plays. LeBlanc hit three for four for the Vitas and A. Clow and H. Landry two for four for the Sox to cop batting honors.

The game last night threw the Vitas, Red Sox and Granites into a three-way tie for second place with the undefeated Pioneers still otu in front. On Friday evening the Sox will tackle the Pioneers in an effort to break the tie.

Charlie Deighan was welcomed back to the game after being out twelve days with an eye injury, and the popular athlete turned in a fine game behind the bat.

PATRIOTIC TALKS THRILL CHINESE

VANCOUVER, July 20 —(CP) — Patriotic Chinese commemorating the end of the first year of Sino-Japanese hostilities forgot their usual stoic calm and burst into spontaneous cheering when aroused by impassioned oratory.

"We will free ourselves from Japanese bondage if we have to fight to the last ditch," declared Vancouver's Chinese consul general Hon. C. H. Pao.

Another speaker said Chinese "did not think much when Manchuria was taken from us," but "when Shanghai was captured, we awoke. The bombing of Canton has brought home to us the terrible pain of war."

dollar in the United States brought far below par, sometimes we had to pay as much as 15 to 20 per cent exchange rate. The principal reason why the Canadian dollar the last few years has been at par in United States, and sometimes at a slight premium, is owing to the fact that millions of American dollars are left in Canada by tourists.

Tourist, Asset To Farmer

"It is a mistake to think that the tourist is not an asset to the farmer. On the contrary, the tourist creates a very valuable market for farm products. While he is here, he must eat, and so consumes bacon, eggs, ham, beef, lamb, chicken, and all sorts of vegetables, besides quantities of fresh fish. Along with this, he consumes milk, cream butter, and cheese. All of which are produced by the farmer.

"If we bring thirty or forty thousand people to this province in the summer months, and these remain for an average period of two weeks, this is tantamount to a city of that many inhabitants which has to be fed for the period. For that and other reasons, we should welcome to our shores visitors who not only leave their money for the above products, but also the money for hotel, boarding house, cabin, and cottage accommodation.

"A great many of them," concluded Mr. Justice Arsenault, "bring motor cars, and consume a large quantity of gas, on each gallong of which they pay 10 cents to the provincial revenue, thus enabling the Government to build and maintain our roads."

BIG BERRY CROP

VANCOUVER, July 20—Best British Columbia strawberry crop on record was harvested this season with approximately 300 carloads valued at about $500,000 being distributed. More than 163 carloads were shipped to the prairies while 50 cars were sent to canneries and jam factories. Each carload was valued at about $900, including $250 for boxes and $200 for picking.
