

Most People Prefer Buckingham's for a Satisfying Smoke

WITH "SAILS SET" FOR PLEASURE, BUCKINGHAM'S ARE REFERRED FOR

Flavour

WITH the younger set Buckingham's are favourites... for their subtle flavour difference—the rich goodness of selected tobaccos.

WITH GOLFERS, BUCKINGHAM'S ARE "PAR"—THEY'RE

Mild

CAREFULLY selected tobaccos, perfectly balanced, perfectly matured, make Buckingham's super smooth—so extra mild.

BEFORE AND AFTER THE SWIM, BUCKINGHAM'S ARE

Throat Easy

NO MATTER how many Buckingham's you smoke, there's never a hint of harshness. The last is just as mild and cool as the first.

Rev. Dr. Legate Attends Irish Assembly

Letters from the Old Country indicate that Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Moorhead Legate were sojourning in County Down. In the first week of this month Dr. Legate attended at Belfast the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Ireland when Rev. John Waddell, M.A., Minister of Fisherwick Church, Belfast was elected Moderator.

WIDER UNITY

In the course of his address the new Moderator said: Regarding wider unity. Mr. Waddell said, the division between the Churches of Christ were not, indeed, wholly dishonourable. Among living thinkers there was no hope of uniformity and no reason for desiring it. Christ promised not one fold, but one flock and one Shepherd. He had little sympathy with attempts to form unions between branches of Christ's Church which were widely apart on matters of doctrine, or in offering to give up this, or accept that, without regard to the strain thus put on the conscience of individuals, or the slur cast on the history and testimony of the Churches concerned.

It did not promote unity to patch together the broken Body of Christ by some mechanical union for the sake of expediency or urgency, or in order to conciliate the opinion of those who were without. It was very little value to obtain uniformity by ecclesiastical compromise, or the averaging of individuality in belief or organisation. What was wanted was deeper sense of the real unity they already possessed. That real unity was one, not of order, or of creed, but of experience.

They had had their own deliberations with another great Church which a few years ago invited them to enter into negotiations with them, feeling that in a country like theirs where the vast majority were Roman Catholic, and where the Protestant Churches were all Evangelical, it ought to be possible to unite. He was present at all those discussions, and the result was to leave on him the impression that they were still far from any likelihood of organic union; that, so long as temperaments and points of view were widely different, it was questionable if organic union was desirable; and that the primary call to Christian people was not to arrange for their ministers to occupy one another's pulpits, but to make it possible for all who loved the Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity, and belonged to any branch of His Church, to sit down together at the table of communion, which was meant by Him to be a symbol of unity and not of division.

HOLLOW MOCKERY

Until that was done, all other approaches to union were a hollow mockery. No Church knew all the truth, and St. Paul's prayer was that "through the Church there might be known the many-coloured wisdom of God." Partisanship and pugnacity had never succeeded in wholly dividing Christians. The nearer they were to God, the nearer they came to their brethren.

that the excess will not hurt him. "A phrase in one letter reads: 'cause you English have hunted him half to death. He says you are the greatest nation in the world and the most vulgar.'" To hear Tennyson was like "articulated music."

At one period the Brownings were in money difficulties. At Lucerne in 1851 they were down to $400 for six months, and there was the warning of a bread-and-cheese existence. Five years later their friend Kenyon died, leaving the couple $55,000. Among the manuscripts to be sold is the original of "The Battle of Marathon," written by Elizabeth when she was a schoolgirl. At 10 she was able to read Homer from start to finish. "Marathon" was the first published work, and of the 50 copies printed only seven exist. Thirty years ago a copy brought $400.

Browning Excess Was Water-Melon

LONDON, June 20.—The love story of Robert Browning and Elizabeth Barrett is told in the Moulton Barrett papers to be sold at Sotheby's this month. They belonged to the late Lt.-Col. Harry Peyton Moulton Barrett, and have never been published. There are 57 letters written by Elizabeth Barrett to her brother, including the earliest-known one before the elopement, and announcing her marriage to Robert Browning. So bewildered was the runaway bride that she did not know the day of the week, and the letter dated Sept. 19, 1846, to her brother telling him of her attraction to Browning is headed "Thursday or Friday." She expressed her resolve to give her life to the noblest of all men, and explained why Browning did not go through the formality of asking the "daughter's" hand in marriage. "It was the brother who was charged with the responsibility of breaking the news to the tyrannical father.

In more than 100 letters from Elizabeth to her favorite sister, Arabella, there is one describing the flight from home and the time spent in Paris before the memorable visit to Italy, and the keeping of the anniversary of the marriage once a week. Robert's moustache was cut off by his wife, and it is said that he was a voracious eater of water-melons. "Robert is a frightful consumer of it," she wrote, "eating it on so large a scale that only by experience I am satisfied

"—AND YOU WERE WASTING OIL, TOO

....YOU OUGHT TO JOIN THE IMPERIAL OIL ROAD TEST"

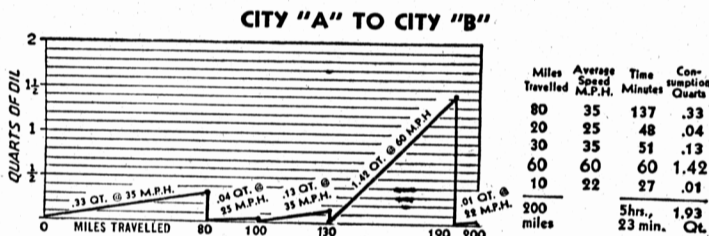

Even if you aren't caught, speeding can be costly. At 60 miles an hour oil consumption is often twice as great as at 35 or 40. See the chart below for results of an actual test run at various speeds.

If you're taking part in the Imperial Oil Road Test you'll know all about this. It's just part of the interesting and money-saving information contained in the "Official Record Book" every Test driver receives. If you aren't already taking part, why not enter now? It's lots of fun—and you may win some of the $4000 in cash prizes we are offering. No red tape—nothing to buy.

Your nearest Imperial Oil dealer has a Record Book for you and a handsome metal emblem for your car. He will be glad to enter you in the Imperial Oil Road Test today.

Wheat Institute Among Proposals To Build Trade

WINNIPEG, June 20.—(CP)—Two major proposals—one for a Canadian Wheat Institute and the other for an overseas wheat trade commissioner with offices in London—are before the Turgeon royal grain commission in its search for ways and means of extending markets for Canadian wheat.

Recognized as the major objective of the commission by Hon. J. L. Ralston, K. C., Montreal, commission counsel, the problem of markets was studied intensively by the commission on its western tour. Robert McKee, former president of the Vancouver Merchant's Exchange, put forward and explained proposals for an overseas commissioner. The Canadian Wheat Institute scheme, sponsored first by the United Grain Growers, Ltd., in 1934, was brought to attention of the commission by James R. Murray, Winnipeg, chairman of the Canadian Wheat Board.
