For PERFECTION BRAND ICE CREAM we have established a prestige in Charlottetown and vicinity and it is now our desire to further extend this business through-out the country districts.

The vote now being taken by the teachers throughout the province will determine whether the project shall be carried out and no doubt the vote will be favorable.

Our farmers particularly should be so enthusiastic about the matter that they should not wait to be called upon by the teachers, they should call on the teachers and record their votes at once.

TUESDAY, APRIL 28, 1925

NEW GERMAN PRESIDENT has its origin in the milk of tuberculous cattle. Tuberculosis in hogs also is traceable to the same source. We can never hope to eradicate the great white plague until we shall have cleaned up the source from which it springs and the principal source is unquestionably our milk supply.

Few will regard the election of Von Hindenburg to the Presidency of Germany as a promise of continued peace in Europe. During and since the war the name Von Hindenburg "smiled rank to Heaven" in the nostrils of the Allies at least. He was Germany's great war lord, the Kaiser's right hand man in the German council and the chief director in German frightfulness.

Central Europe is at present a mass of fogots ready to be kindled into flame and Von Hindenburg is by no means a pacifist or a peace maker. The vote he received is a measure of German public opinion, of German memory of the war in which she was beaten. Germany and Austria form the core of Europe. They were both brought to their knees, both felled in one of the greatest games ever played for world domination and, although felled and beaten, both countries were left untouched and unhurt by the war.

Later, when French patience became exhausted by the repeated breaking of German promises and continued hagglng on the part of Germany, and a French army took possession of the Ruhr, German pride was cut to the heart. For this Germany has never forgiven France and, in the opinion of many, never will, till the injury and what Germany considered the supreme insult are wiped out in blood.

For the present Germany is not thinking of immediate war but she is surrounded by nations bristling with preparations for aggression or for a defence and Germany has acquired the habit of taking advantage of every situation. The wartime alliance between Austria and Germany still continues and the partnership has not ceased to be a menace in Europe.

Von Hindenburg is an able general. If his "intentions are honourable" his regime as President may restore Germany to her pre-war greatness; if otherwise he will make or again break Germany.

DISEASE FREE AREA

The efforts now being put forth by the cattle breeders of Prince Edward Island to make the province a disease free area are most commendable and will, we feel assured, win the support and co-operation of all our people.

There is no other province in Canada that can as effectively be made disease free as Prince Edward Island. We have perfect control over our imports. There is no possibility of admitting diseased animals without our knowledge and the disease once eradicated, it can with little difficulty be held in check.

As a matter of fact there is less tuberculosis among cattle in this province than there is in any other province in Canada, yet we are not entirely free from it and until we are we cannot give our customers in cattle and hogs, butter and cheese an absolute guarantee of immunity.

When we can do this, when we can tell the world that our breeding stock has been reared in a disease free area, that our butter and cheese are made from the milk of cows known to be free from tuberculosis, we shall have an advertisement that no other part of Canada and few countries in the world can show.

Notes By the Way

Canada's advance as a wheat-growing country is noted by a valued exchange, and is attracting attention among wheat-growing and wheat-buying nations. Twenty years ago our position in that respect was inconspicuous. Today it is an outstanding one. Within a generation the Dominion has advanced from ninth to second place among wheat producing countries, and from fifth to first place as an exporter of wheat.

The area devoted to wheat cultivation was 4,000,000 acres in 1903; in 1913 it was 11,000,000 acres and in 1923, 22,000,000 acres. Production increased from 78,000,000 bushels in 1903 to 232,000,000 in 1913 and to 474,000,000 bushels in 1923. The amount exported in 1903 was 24,000,000 bushels; in 1913 this had increased to 112,000,000 and in 1923 to 275,000,000 when the exports of wheat from Canada first exceeded the exports from the United States.

Canada's opportunity has thus been wonderfully taken advantage of. It consists in the great productivity of her wheat lands, the superior quality of her hard wheat, the best in the world, and the fact that Russia, formerly a chief competitor has not yet recovered from the effects of the war and the revolution which followed. There is also the advantage that owing to her cheaper lands and their great productivity, Canada can produce wheat at a less cost than it can be grown in the United States.

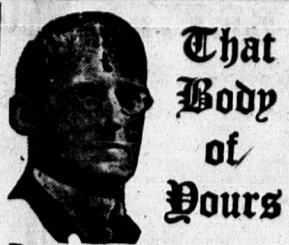

The farm cost of producing wheat in Canada in 1923 was estimated by the U. S. Tariff Commission at 82 cents per bushel as against $1.47 per bushel in the United States and this was made the pretext for increasing the tariff on wheat imports from 12 cents per bushel by the Washington Government. Even under that high rate of duty American millers find it necessary to import Canadian wheat to mix with their own in order to produce flour of the very best quality to meet the public demand both at home and abroad. It is most gratifying to learn that an unusually large acreage will be sown in the Canadian West this spring with present good prospects of a large return.

Parliament has been in session three months and the budget debate is still dragging out its weary and needless length. Partly in expectation and partly in fear that the present session may be the last before a dissolution, members are still making speeches without any hope of changing a single vote in the House of Commons. They are consuming much time at high cost to burdened taxpayers in the hope, more or less delusive, that they may produce a favorable impression in the country. Did they but realize the fact, what the country most desires is that they should get on with the job they have in hand and finish it as soon as is reasonably possible to do so.

There are a number of important and vital questions yet to be dealt with after the budget debate is ended, any one of which in the present loquacious temper of the House may lead to another long and wordy debate. Among these are the Peterson contract, the equalisation of present chaotic railway freight rates, the bills providing for new railway construction in our already much over-railroaded country and the measure promised in the speech from the throne to limit the power of the Senate.

There is yet much unfinished work in the voting of supply for the necessary public services of the country and we know not what further supplementary estimates are yet to be brought down and in accordance with inherited but unwarranted practice railroaded through the House in the dying hours of the session. Compared with the public business so far completed that which remains to be done is far the more important part of the work blocked out at the beginning of the session and not yet considered or acted upon.

If Rear Admiral Peary, U. S. N. did discover the North Pole in 1909 as he said he did, it is naughty of our Captain Bernier to try to rob the dead Admiral of his laurels. But if the pole is yet undiscovered, never yet seen by mortal eye, it is up to Captain Bernier, or some other adventurous Canadian to go and find it and stay not on the order of his going but go at once. Obviously it is located somewhere in Canada's northern backlands, along with the Magnetic Pole and the major part of the Aurora Borealis, which are ours beyond dispute.

By James W. Barton, M.D., A WISE DENTIST

In a former article I spoke of a physician, who when he felt that certain teeth should be extracted in a certain case, always told the dentist that as long as the teeth were not removed, he could blame these teeth for the patient's ills.

A dental friend tells me that he always talks to the physician in this way: "Remember I am also interested in the patient's health and I wouldn't do anything that would prevent him from getting well. I am willing to extract the teeth if you say so, but I don't like to see him lose such good chewing teeth. I would like to try and treat those abscesses for a little time. Sometimes I have been able to save the teeth and sometimes I've failed. Just let me have two or three months to see what I can do."

The physician is usually willing to meet him this far, and so he treats the teeth regularly, cleansing out the abscess, and inserting an antiseptic dressing. He can usually see improvement in a marked six weeks there, will be a marked improvement, and another X-ray is taken. This will show the improvement made and the physician and the patient are satisfied.

In other words it simply means that if the abscess is just at the root of the teeth, that very often the antiseptic treatments are sufficient to clear it up. If however the condition has gone on past the tooth, and the infection has got into the bony socket of the jaw bone, into which the tooth fits, then the treatment is of no avail, and the tooth must be extracted. And then the bony socket itself must be cleared out and antiseptic treatments given, to prevent further trouble in the bone of the jaw.

This all looks like good sense in the light of our present knowledge of these teeth infections. It also gives the patient the benefit of the co-operation of doctor and dentist, and the best possible results are thus obtained.

THE MESSAGE OF SPRING

Lord, now that spring is in the world And every tulip is a cup filled with the wine of thy great love. Lift thou me up.

Raise thou my heart as flowers arise To greet the glory of thy day, With soul as clean as lilies, are And white as they.

Let me not fear the darkness now, Since life and light break through Thy tomb; Teach me that doubts no more oppress No more consume.

Show me that Thou art April, Lord, And Thou the flowers and the grass; Then awake the soft spring winds, I'll hear Thee pass.

A SUPER-SOLVER

Sir,—Since the trouble in the Nova Scotia mines began the undersigned has offered his services in that district. No answer has been forthcoming. We must not expect an angel to come down from Heaven to settle this question. It is a man's problem. In order to produce confidence in my ability to handle the question I must resort to what will appear as jugglery. At 12 years of age I was promoted instantly to another class because I did a problem that no one in the class above mine was able to solve.

At 16 I made a wager with my teacher that he could not puzzle me in the six books of Euclid. I won the wager.

At 20 I applied for and obtained the position of Professor of Mathematics in St. Dunstan's College. In 1887 I took 25 minutes to do a sum in algebra that the Professor of Mathematics in the Seminary of Sherbrooke took two or three weeks to solve.

In 1888 I discovered the underlying principles in connection with magic squares. In 1892 I made the largest magic square on record. In 1900 I prepared a list of 50,000 Prime Numbers.

In 1923 I calculated the largest numbers on record, where the sum of squares of two successive integers is equal to a perfect square. Each of these numbers contains 31 figures.

Let some Government, or Society, or individual, offer a prize for the best solution. I feel sanguine that my plan will be preferred to all others. Like the three requirements of the Magic Square, it will appeal to the producer, consumer and transporter. I am, Sir, etc.

What Mr. Winston Churchill Has To Say About Insurance

"If I had my way I would write the word 'INSURE' over the door of every cottage and upon the blotting-book of every public man, because I am convinced that for sacrifices that are inconceivably small, families can be secured against catastrophes which otherwise would smash them up forever. It is our duty to arrest the ghastly waste, not merely of human happiness, but of national health and strength, which follows when through the death of the bread-winner, the frail boat in which the fortunes of the family are embarked founders, and the women and children are left to struggle helplessly on the dark waters of a friendless world."

We have policies of Insurance to meet every requirement and would be glad of an opportunity to be of service to you and yours.

Disappointed to Find He Was an Ex-Premier

Sir Robert Borden was Sadly Disillusioned in His Own Home Riding of Halifax

Having represented the city of Halifax in the Commons for many years, Sir Robert Borden for a time believed he was no stranger to the good people of the eastern gateway to the Dominion. He was sadly undeceived, however, shortly after he laid down the onerous duties of premier, according to the Toronto Star Weekly.

Included among the large number who pressed forward to meet him at an informal reception in Halifax was a middle-aged lady well known for her interest in child welfare. After the manner of so many other one-idea enthusiasts, this lady imagined everybody else must necessarily be particularly interested in her particular field, and when she got the chance to talk to the guest of honor launched forth into her favorite topic.

Sir Robert was bored, but did his best to stimulate a polite interest, though listening with only half an ear.

Suddenly he became all attention when he realized the lady was thanking him profusely for what he had done to make the lives of little babes healthier and happier. He was particularly puzzled when he heard himself referred to as "the greatest benefactor of future generations this country has ever known."

Sir Wilfrid Laurier would have carried off such a situation with graceful ease. Hon. Arthur Meighen would have looked wise and maintained a discreet silence. Premier Mackenzie King would have tactfully changed the conversation.

But however great may have been his ability in other lines, Sir Robert Borden never was a nimble-witted politician. Try as he would, the ex-premier could not recall any child legislation of his that deserved such extravagant praise, and said something to this effect to his fulsome admirer. "Legislation? Legislation?" said the lady, with a look of extreme surprise. "What has legislation to do with your bustle, Sir?" "As member of parliament and former premier, I am naturally supposed to have something to do with legislation," exclaimed Sir Robert.
