Fire Destroys Cottage At Summerside

Fire yesterday at Summerside destroyed a three room cottage occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Brenton Driscoll and their three children. The cottage was owned by Gordon Bryanton, formerly of New Glasgow and now a member of the R.C.A.F.

The fire occurred about eleven thirty yesterday morning when it was discovered by the children. Mrs. Driscoll was out in the garden and when she heard the cries of the children she rushed in the house to find the flames coming through the ceiling. She snatched up the eight months old baby and carried it to safety. When she returned the fire was so far advanced that she was able to save only a trunk. All the rest of their belongings were lost.

When the Summerside Fire Department arrived it was too late to save the house. The cottage was located on Glover's Lane, about a quarter of a mile from the town.

It is not known how the fire started but it is believed to have started from the chimney or the wiring. A stiff breeze was blowing from the west and away from the other cabins located there, otherwise they would have been in great danger.

The total damage is estimated at about $1,500 and there was no insurance on Mr. Driscoll's property. It is not known if there was any on the building. S.

—GILL - DALY NUPTIALS — St. Joachims Church, Vernon River was the scene of a very pretty wedding on the morning of July twenty-eighth, 1943, when Avita Marguerite, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James G. Gill of Elliotvale became the bride of Wilbur J. Daly son of James E. Daly of Iona and the late Mrs. Daly. The Rt. Rev. Monsignor Maurice MacDonald performed the ceremony and sang the Nuptial High Mass. The bride was beccmingly gowned in a floor length dress of white taffeta with sweetheart neckline and wore finger-tip veil with accessories to match. She carried a shower of pink roses. She was attended by her sister, Miss Evelyne of Boston, Mass., who wore a floor length dress of yellow silk organdie with white accessories and carried a bouquet of white carnations. Mr. Peter McGarry of Iona acted as groomsman. After the ceremony a sumptuous wedding breakfast was served to upward of eighty invited guests. The wedding party then motored to Charlottetown and had dinner at the Charlottetown Hotel. The remainder of the afternoon was spent at Cavendish, visiting places of interest immortalized by Lucy M. Montgomery in her "Anne Novels". In the evening they returned to the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. James Connolly of Iona, where supper was served to over one hundred and fifty guests and the remainder of the evening was spent in dancing and music. after which everybody departed wishing the bride and groom many years of wedded bliss. Previous to her marriage the bride was tendered a miscellaneous shower by the staff of Commercial Filters Corp. So., Boston, Mass., where she had been employed and also by her girl friends of Elliotvale. She also received many useful and beautiful gifts.

Crosby And Hope Are Perfect Comedy Team

Among the most popular funnyman twosomes, Bing Crosby and Bob Hope stand out as tops. Either one by himself is Grade A. As a team they're double A. Their newest co-starring picture, Paramount's hilarious "Road to Morocco" which is now entertaining audiences in the Capitol Theatre, is the third in a series of films throughout which they maintained the same characters — a couple of American vagabonds with no inhibitions and a consistent propensity for getting themselves into scrapes. They get out time and again by fair means or foul and the process is always funny.

The first in the series, "Road to Singapore," was a big success. It's successor, "Road to Zanzibar" was even more so, and the latest, in which the boys tangle with a desert sheik for the favors of a luscious desert princess, Dorothy Lamour, who also accompanied them on the previous "Roads" tops the others by far.

Bing and Bob form a well-nigh perfect comedy team for more reasons than the scintillating dialogue written for them. There is more to it even than the undeniable fact that each in his own way is a natural foil for the other.

Statement

ational troops in Canada;

(B) To introduce an additional phase of advanced training which will be given to reinforcements before they proceed overseas;

(C) To release a considerable number of lower category personnel, who will thus be enabled to take up civilian occupations and supplement available manpower.

It should be understood that disbandment of divisions does not necessarily mean that all the units will be disbanded. The disbandment will affect 15 infantry units (including six lately disbanded) three artillery units, four engineer units and three medical units. The necessary number of units will be retained to form the three brigade groups to carry on necessary coast defence activities and other operational duties.

The reorganization will result in reducing the establishment for operational troops in North America by about 20,000. This does not mean that that number will go out of the army. Many will be relocated according to the needs of the service to fill up remaining units for potential reinforcements, depending on age, rank and medical category.

It is not possible to estimate the actual number who will be released to civilian life but the number will be substantial at this stage.

It must be emphasized that the fact that there is to be a reduction in requirements for operational troops in Canada does not mean that the demand is reduced for overseas.

The estimate made at the beginning of the fiscal year was that we would require 100,000 men in the year to replace casualties and wastage, that means 8,500 men per month. From these about 75,000, or 6,500 per month, were required for overseas. The number of enlistments for the first five months of the fiscal year has averaged slightly more than 5,000 per month which means that we have had to draw considerable numbers of general service men from the formations and establishments in Canada to make up the numbers for despatch overseas.

In addition, in that same period, there have been enrolled under the N. R. M. A. an average of about 2,700 a month, of which over 400 per month have enlisted subsequently. These have been used to make up wastage and to replace the general service men withdrawn from their units and sent overseas.

But it must be remembered that the pool of general service men in Canada potentially available for reinforcements is not inexhaustible and in many cases time has to be taken to train them for the particular branch of the service for which they may be needed as well as to train the N.R.M.A. men to take their place. The consequence is that there must be no let-up in the enlistment of men for general service. The flow into the reinforcement stream must be steadily maintained to provide as planned for present and future operations.

The army is making every effort to economize in manpower in Canada. This latest reduction is another major step in that direction. Studies are now being made as to the possibility of further reduction in coast and anti-aircraft defences and in the servicing establishments.

The army feels that it can confidently ask citizens in their turn to encourage and release fit men to enlist so as to ensure to the Canadian army overseas the backing it deserves and must have for the heavy tasks ahead.

Mosquito Used As Civil Plane

LONDON —(CP) —Use of the famed fighting Mosquito as a civilian airplane and the A36 Invader dive bomber by the North West African Air Forces was disclosed the same day in the British press.

The new Mosquito role was announced during a lull in controversy over peacetime civil aviation. About half a dozen of the world's fastest planes have been "demilitarized" and used by British Overseas Airways for some months on special routes.

One was intercepted by an enemy fighter but outtricked him and got away on speed alone.

(Delivery of Canadian-built Mosquitos to Britain started recently.)

The Invader has a controlled dive speed of roughly 700 miles an hour. Built in America, it was developed from the Mustang fighter used in the R. A. F. Army Cooperation Squadrons and for daylight train busting.

Legion Carnival Opens At S'Side

The annual carnival staged by the Summerside branch of the Canadian Legion in aid of their war services activities was opened by Mayor W.J. Lidstone at the Summerside Curling Rink last evening. Mr. Lidstone was introduced by Mr. M.P. Titus, President of Summerside branch, who also explained the programs planned for the different evenings of the week.

Mayor Lidstone paid tribute to the great work of the legion in all walks of life and said he was honored to be asked to open the carnival. Mayor Lidstone said the gleam of light is appearing in the war situation and "if we keep up our total war effort we will eventually see the gangsters subdued."

The audience was then entertained by a program of songs by Bill Pickering and Bud MacKenzie of Summerside.

The carnival continues all this week with a different program each evening.

There was a large crowd last evening all enjoying themselves at the different booths.—S

To Curtail Construction Of Dwellings

OTTAWA, Sept. 13—(CP)—Munitions Minister Howe announced tonight that it has become necessary substantially to reduce the number of construction control licenses issued for dwellings and certain other projects because of the scarcity of certain building materials, including manufactured equipment for installation in new homes.

"It is recognized that in certain areas, seriously over-crowded as a result of the war program, some new housing may be necessary," Mr. Howe said in a statement.

"But the scarcity of materials has become so serious that all but absolutely essential construction must be postponed. Without such postponement, builders throughout Canada would face the probability of not being able to complete the construction and equipping of dwellings already started.

"Because of the changed circumstances, it will no longer be possible to continue granting the priority assistance for group housing which was announced last spring. No licence for a dwelling will be granted unless the structural size and material specifications are kept to a minimum.

Mr. Howe warned against starting construction before issuance of a licence.

Coal Mining Emphasized In Great Britain

LONDON, Sept. 13—(CP)—Coal mining has become so important in Britain that young men called up for military service are urged to work in the mines instead, with an assurance from labor minister Bevin that although "you feel that your duty calls you into one of the fighting services...work in the pits can do just as much to win this war."

Far from carrying a stigma, the choice of mining over military service is being urged on young men as a patriotic duty, carrying eligibility for free post-war education under the same plan the government offers the forces.

Not only that, but the men choosing mining instead of fighting will be paid while training with the average wages about six times as much as that of a private soldier—three shillings or about 72 cents a day.

In his speeches appealing for 30,000 men to go into the mines before the end of this year and another 20,000 next year, Mr. Bevin makes no attempt to answer scattered criticism that the government brought this situation on itself by taking trained miners for the fighting forces earlier in the war. He does say, however, that it is impossible to patch up the mine labor force now with men recalled from the forces, "because at this stage of the war such interference with military arrangements is out of the question."

Give Views On Wartime Controls

OTTAWA, Sept. 13—(CP)—E.G. Burton, Prices Board retail trade administrator said today that he believed wartime restrictions would be removed as soon as such action was possible, "even before the Germans are knocked out of the war."

In an address prepared for delivery to an Ottawa Service Club (Rotary), Mr. Burton said Canada was entering the crucial stage of her battle against inflation. He added:—

"Just as in the military sphere we are approaching the crisis of the war, so in our difficult and arduous battle against price inflation on the home front we are entering the crucial stage of the struggle."

Mr. Burton said he felt the termination of restrictions at the earliest possible moment would be "welcome assurance to all Canadians that liberties they gladly gave up will be progressively restored."

"Even before the Germans are knocked out of the war we should and I believe we shall, follow the procedure of removing restrictions as soon as we find ourselves able to do so," he said.

"I suggest that within a very short period after hostilities cease in Europe we should give serious consideraion to the removal of most of our restrictions. It is quite possible that we should confine actual price control to raw materials such as existed prior to
