The Queen of Desserts

Corn Starch is a most valuable food and a truly delightful one. It is ever ready for the hurried dessert and the result is delicious if you use Crystal Maize Corn Starch.

Crystal Maize Orange Pudding One-third cup lemon juice, two-thirds cup orange juice, put in pan with cup of water, and sweeten to taste. Dissolve three tablespoonfuls Crystal Maize Corn Starch in water, and when juice is boiling stir it in until it thickens, cook slowly ten minutes, then stir in the beaten whites of two eggs; pour into a mould that has been dipped in cold water; put in a layer of sliced oranges until mould is full. Serve with custard made with the yolks of the two eggs, two tablespoonfuls sugar and one pint milk, a little grated orange and one dessert spoonful Crystal Maize Corn Starch.

BRIGHTER TINTS WORN.

Yellows, Scarlets and Pinks Modish The Useful Cape Collars. The wide collar is a boon to amateur dressmakers, for it covers up a multitude of sins. Chalfies in quaint pompadour designs make up charmingly and are very useful for cool evenings. The parol of the moment is most attractive, with its long handle a la Pompadour, very often incrustated with gems and its chine silk inserted with medallions of lace. The simplest parol of all has a plain silk cover with rows of ribbon woven in black on a light ground in graduated widths and a long, plain colored handle. Foulard, the old fashioned fabric, has given way to volles and a still softer make of silk. For dull days cloths trimmed with taffeta as well as a firmer make of canvas and spotted voile are greatly to the fore.

There is a growing tendency toward brighter tints, especially in a soft make of cloth. Scarlet still carries the day, and yellows, pinks and brilliant blues are all tremendously in request.

A wrinkle now resorted to by all the leading blouse specialists is a chiffon veiling to silk underslips, not the costly and hot taffetas of heretofore, but good washing quality, the chiffon lending a soft appearance to any lace that may be inset, while it enhances to an immense extent the value of a muslin blouse.

The picture shows a walking costume of gray. The hat is of white with a scarlet feather.

MILLINERY MODES.

The indispensable French Sailor. Some Dressy Hats.

The French sailor is indispensable to the smart woman's wardrobe. The prettiest this year is of rough yellow straw trimmed simply with a wreath of foliage or velvet balls.

Hats of ecrú straw are often simply trimmed with an application of coarse lace with ends hanging on one side.

The new tailor made hat tilts up in front and fits closely at the back and sides. It is trimmed only with loops and knots of ribbon.

For dressy wear nothing can equal a hat of white tulle trimmed with a single ostrich plume, although rough straw also looks well for the same purpose.

The ever useful toque of black straw is relieved by the pompon or aigret of black and white and black rough straw. French sailors are tastefully trimmed with blackberries and their shaded foliage.

The transparent hat of lace is not seen so much this year, and the stiff shapes of straw seem to have the preference over millinery made of more fancy materials.

The advent of colored hosiery cannot fail to have been remarked, several shades of dark blue and some amazingly pretty reds, spotted and clocked with black, predominating. There is a rumor that these will be worn with white shoes. White shoes at best are a doubtful acquisition, their one saving grace being found in white silk or lace hosiery. The colored fancy, though, is reasonable with the walking skirt, provided they are privileged to find completion in neat black French kid or patent leather shoes. Nor is the notion at all unpleasing of colored hosiery worn with white frocks, these perchance repeating the tone of some pretty skirt and hat.

The chic sailor shape in the illustration is trimmed with two shades of mull and pink roses. JUDIC CHOLLET.
