THE Natural History and Antiquarian Society outing was held yesterday. By courtesy of the Department of Marine and Fisheries, the Dominion Government steamship Brant conveyed the party first to Brush Wharf and afterwards to St. Peter's Island, at both of which places the participants collected geological, botanical and zoological specimens. The outing was eminently successful and very thoroughly enjoyed. The weather was exceptionally fine, and no hitch marred the success of the day's proceedings. The officers and crew of the Brant added much to the enjoyment of those present by their attentive regard for the comfort of the party. By common consent it was conceded that the outing of 1903 was the most successful in the history of the Society.

THE Martin Sheeley Company were greeted by a full attendance of patrons at the Opera House last evening when Shakespeare's Othello was put on. J. W. McConnell in the title role gave a most fervent presentation of the Moorish commander. Miss Dora Swearingen as the fair Desdemona quite captivated all while William Owen, the star of the company was imitable in the satanic character of Iago. The keenest interest inspired by one of Shakespeare's greatest creations, Iago, interpreted was sustained from the beginning to the close of the performance. It is pleasing to know that we have for a brief season in our midst a company who will favor our theatres going public with some of the most effective of dramatic literature. Tonight the Merchant of Venice will be put on.

HON. JOHN F. WHEAR takes exception to The Guardian brief summary of proceedings in the suit of Bennett McEACHERN against him, and especially to the statement that Mr. Whear's counsel neglected to state that the action of Lane's was still pending and that this was a fatal error. Mr. Whear says that the Court did not decide that there was any fatal error and the question was not even before the Court. The only issue before the Court was on a matter of record. On Tuesday when the case was called, says Mr. Whear, my counsel admitted that he could not produce the record pleaded and asked that a judgment of respondent be entered that I should have leave to plead over, and after a long legal argument occupying part of two days by Mr. McLean the opposing counsel, the Chief Justice overruled Mr. McLean's contentions and gave judgment as asked for by my counsel.

THE following is taken from the "Review," Geneva, N. Y. "Mrs. Conklin is a cultured speaker, whose views are uttered in most graceful words, appealing to all alike, for devotedness to elevated humanitarian and religious principles. She has spoken to thousands here who never before heard words publicly spoken on these topics as she treats them. The wide variety of the discussions, the tact with which every sentence was uttered, and the broadness of the reform advocated, combine to help on the movement which Mrs. Conklin so ably represents." Mrs. Conklin has already won her way into the hearts of many people in this city, and her meetings are being very well attended. The Y. M. C. A. Kodak owners should make sure that they get the film they want. Should see that the trade mark, "Kodak" is on the package, otherwise they may receive a cheap and inferior substitute which the dealer is anxious to palm off because it pays him a bigger profit. Substitute films usually require different treatment from Kodak films, and if handled in exposure and development by those not accustomed to them, are more than likely to fail entirely.
