To Forecast Fur Cycles

OTTAWA—The Department of Mines and Resources, Ottawa, in co-operation of Mr. Charles Elton of the Bureau of Animal Population, Oxford University, England, is making a study of wild life with the object of endeavoring to determine the factors responsible for the fluctuations in the wild animal population. At intervals sufficiently regular to be termed "cycles," periods of abundance are followed by periods of scarcity, and it is hoped that the investigations being made will result in more information becoming available upon the causes of fur cycles so that in future it may be possible to forecast changing conditions and to adopt other measures to tide over in periods of scarcity those whose livelihood is dependent upon these wild life resources.

The enquiry takes the form of an animal questionnaire circulated to resident traders, trappers and officials of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and other departments in the Northwest Territories, who submit information respecting the status of the caribou, reindeer, rabbit, snowy owl and sledge dogs, all of which are subject to violent fluctuations in number. It is believed that the latter are subject to influenza, a disease which has killed the effect of controlling the wolf population.

A shortage of fur bearers, often causes hardship among the trappers, particularly the northland natives who are practically dependent upon game for their livelihood. All animals are not affected by low cycles at the same time. For instance it is reported there is a shortage of such furs as fox, mink and beaver in many localities this year. On the other hand, muskrats are exceptionally plentiful and the Department has issued a special order this year allowing the natives and half-breeds to take muskrats for a period of six weeks in advance of the normal trapping season. This has been done with a view to relieving any distress among the native population in consequence of the scarcity of other furs.

ST. PAUL CURLER OLDEST IN 'SPEL

WINNIPEG, March 9—(CP)—Believed the oldest curler on the continent, 79-year-old Ker D. Dunlop, St. Paul, Minn., skipped a strong rink in the recent 57th annual Manitoba bonspiel in Winnipeg.

All the young curlers in St. Paul want to compete in the Winnipeg bonspiel. It is the world's series in curling. It is the rink here are tough," he said.

Born in Scotland, he played his first games in 1878 on a Scottish loch with candles in empty champagne bottles marking the end of the rink.

His recipe for keeping young is to curl all winter and swim all summer.

LEGAL WAR OVER GOLF NEARS END

WINNIPEG, March 9—(CP)—Manitoba's famed feud between an irate householder and a nearby golf club seems near an end after being in and out of the courts for two and a half years.

A recent order by the Manitoba Municipal and Public Utility Board abolishing Hilton Street, which was part of the golf course, and an out-of-court settlement ends the soiling "course celebre."

Hilton Street was never opened. Part of it was used as the fifth hole of the Alcrest Golf Club, the rest as a cow pasture. J. Chiswell, who lived nearby, claimed erratic shots landed in his front yard threatening his peace and his life. Golfers charged he kept the balls that landed in his yard.

A court order by the Manitoba Municipal and Public Utility Board against the club using part of Hilton Street for their golf course, dated in 1937, granted the injunction application.

The Alcrest club became the Charleswood Golf Club that spring and Chiswell obtained a new injunction. On July 18 his application to have the club directors cited for contempt of court was heard and directors were ordered to pay the costs.

In August the municipal council closed Hilton Street. Nine days later Chiswell's application for an injunction against this was granted. As part of the agreement for settling the problem, a new road will be built near Chiswell's property.

INDIANS FACING FOOD SHORTAGE

EDMONTON, March 9—(CP)—Indians in the north are really starving. Unless something is done soon by the government they will suffer great hardship, many may die, said Pilot Archie McMullen returning from an airplane trip in northern Alberta and the North West Territories.

"In one district near Fort Simpson I know where there are three Indian families, one of them made up of seven persons, and their only food is one small fish each day. Wolves have killed off and cleaned out the game. There is nothing for them to eat," he said.

YOUTH PRESERVES STAGE TRADITION

WINNIPEG, March 9—(CP)—The show must go on, a great theatrical tradition, was upheld by Bruce Jopling, Winnipeg high school student.

Though wracked with pain from an infected appendix, he rejected medical orders not to play his role in a school play. During the first act his part called for groans and grunts. To the audience it was just acting. But other actors, knowing some of the groans were not in the script and unaware of his condition, were puzzled.

He collapsed at the end of the first act and was rushed to hospital. He is recovering.

TASMANIA STORES CLOSE SATURDAYS

HOBART, Tasmania, March 9—(CP)—Trading on Saturday is to be eliminated in Tasmania by the state government's proposed amendment to the Shops Act.

Closing hours of the main business houses will be fixed at 6 P. M. from Monday to Thursday and 9.30 P. M. on Friday.

The five-day working week has been established for some time in Federal government departments here. Only essential services operate on Saturday.

Old Ontario's Ideal Charmer Has Ambitions

(By Ted Farah Canadian Press Staff Writer)

TORONTO, March 10—(CP)—A girl from a town or a small city is the nominee of John Russell, artist, for Ontario's ideal of femininity.

She's a girl eager to accomplish something, and probably she has left her home in Perth, St. Mary's or Huntville for a position as a nurse or schoolteacher in a larger centre, Toronto, London or Ottawa. Years of living and art study in Paris and New York have not had the effect you would expect on Mr. Russell's viewpoint with respect to the subject. His opinion: on womanly charm. His opinion: on womanly charm. His opinion: on womanly charm.

shocked modesty from Torontonians at more than one public exhibition. Miss Ontario, said Mr. Russell, has humanitarian feelings. She wants to serve, to be allied with some good cause.

You'll find her nursing in a hospital, immaculate in her freshly laundered uniform, supple and capable. Mr. Russell declined to be too specific about physical details, but felt that blue eyes and brown hair would be likely attributes.

Likes Beautiful Things

"There's something wholesome and refreshing about her," the artist said. "Her face isn't all painted up and her eyebrows aren't just a thin line. She's natural and has a nice complexion. She likes parties. She does everything other girls do, but she's more serious minded. She's neatly dressed when you see her on the street or at a party, but not as flashily or as stylishly dressed as a society girl. "She reads books and likes pictures, but probably hasn't a technical or highly-critical understanding of them. At the same time, she doesn't try to give the impression that she is an authority. She likes beautiful things, and she's not the kind of girl who would belong to a lot of women's clubs."

Mr. Russell said nine-tenths of all city girls are badly brought up. "That's why this ideal miss is from a village, a town or a small city, which is where most of the province's nurses and school teachers come from. "There's no humber about her," said Mr. Russell, summing up.
