Some Reasons Why Your Will Should Be Made Now

Because now you are in good health and are in a position where you can think clearly.

Because a Will made under pressure often results in being contested in the law courts, causing needless expense to the Estate.

Because it sometimes happens that a Will made during illness does not include some particular asset. In such cases court expenses must be again added before proper disposition can be made of the property.

Because you can not afford to longer jeopardize the interests of your family by delaying the making of so important a document.

Why not talk this over with one of the Company's officers?

THE CENTRAL GUARDIAN

IT PAYS to buy in this province.

SALE OF UNCLAIMED GOODS.—Don't forget to go to the sale of unclaimed goods at the Railway Freight Sheds, Charlottetown, Thursday, September 10, at 10 a. m. 5500.

THE ROYAL EDWARD CHAPTER of the Daughters of the Empire will meet for sewing on Tuesday afternoon, the 8th inst, at 3 o'clock in St. Paul's Schoolroom. 5477.

ANOTHER ISLANDER.—The Guardian is informed that a son of Mr. John Birz Mount Stewart, has volunteered for the front in Western Canada. The true English blood asserted itself when the call came, and the brave young man refused to disobey the call.—L.

COAL ARRIVAL.—Mr. Jas. McCarthy, Mt. Stewart, has a schooner loaded with 200 tons of Inverness Coal at the wharf, Mt. Stewart. The cargo is being discharged as quickly as possible, the villagers and farmers laying in part of their winter supply. R. Clark's new tug towed her up the East River without any difficulty.—L.

GOOD HARVEST.—Harvesting is on in the vicinity of Mt. Stewart in full swing. The crop is a good one and all that is needed is good weather to gather a bountiful harvest, and when the farmers of Mt. Stewart are asked to contribute oats to the British Army, they will be willing no doubt to do their share in such a worthy cause.—L.

GRACE LARUE AT B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE, BOSTON.

Direct from her sensational hit in London, where she became the rage of the British capital over night, Grace LaRue, the popular musical comedy star, will come to B. F. Keith's Theatre next week for a limited engagement of positively one week only. As the star of the first Ziegfeld Follies, "Miss Mollie May" and a number of other big musical offerings, Miss LaRue needs no introduction to American playgoers. For the past year she has been appearing in London, as a feature of one of the biggest and most successful revues in the British metropolis. She will offer a brand new repertoire of original songs, and as usual, her sartorial display will be both wondrous and beautiful. Another strong feature of the week will be Harry Berresford, late of "The Conspiracy," supported by his own big company in the bright little comedy of youth and spring-time "Twenty Odd Years." Mr. Berresford is one of the finest characters on the American stage. His new vehicle is a really delightful comedy, and he is most capably supported by a large company of favorites. Other excellent features will be Bart McHugh's "In the School Playgrounds" with a company of ten juvenile stars, including Muriel Morgan and E. Brendel; Fields and Warren, the two funny travesty artists in the new comedy skit, "Held by the Enemy;" Evelyn Dunsmore, late of "The Rose of Parria, with a repertoire of new song hits, John T. Ray and Grace Hilliard in the merry rural farce, "Hello Sally;" two Marjories, the girls with the grand opera voices; Glynn and Pauline, knockabout acrobats; and La Cremonne and Darras, daring European aerialists.

SOME DEALERS ARE GETTING two profits on different package goods by pasting a sticker on the end of the package over the original price intended by the manufacturers.

A SOCIALIST PROPHECY

GERMANY AND ENGLAND

BY ROBERT BLATCHFORD.

The author of these articles is the best-known leader of the English Socialists, and is one of the founders of the modern Socialist movement in Great Britain under the nom de guerre of "Nunquam" he wrote "Merrie England," of which one and a half million copies have been sold. He is editor of the "Clarion," which is by general consent the ablest and most influential of Socialist journals; and he is master of a style that for vigour and terseness has been surpassed by no English writer since the days of "Chatterbox." The article was contributed to The Ill. London Daily Mail in 1908, six years ago.

1.—THE MENACE

I write these articles because I believe that Germany is deliberately preparing to destroy the British Empire; and because I know that we are not able or ready to defend ourselves against a sudden and formidable attack.

I write from a sense of duty, and from a conviction that the destruction of the British Empire would be a misfortune for Europe and a blow to civilization throughout the world.

I take this course against my own interests and against the feeling of most of my political and many of my private friends.

I write in the Daily Mail in the hope of arousing the public from the fatal apathy and complacent optimism which bind them to the greatest peril the nation has ever been called upon to face.

At the present moment the whole country is in a ferment about the possibility of a German invasion. The public do not realize the gravity of the German menace.

Serious warnings have been uttered publicly by Mr. Asquith, by Mr. Balfour, by Sir Edward Grey, by Lord Lansdowne, by Cromer, and by Lord Roberts. But these warnings have not been sufficiently gross or sufficiently explicit to be understood of the people. They have been forgotten in the national excitement about the Steinhell case, the football matches, and the terrific struggle as to whether the dukes shall pay a halfpenny tax or foist it upon their neighbours.

The Empire is in danger but the people do not believe it. They have been taught to regard the German menace as a wild scare of invasion, and they believe the Navy can protect them while they make their money or take their ease.

But the danger of invasion is not the greatest or the only danger; and the strongest Navy in the world could not save us from disaster should the lowering war clouds break before we are prepared.

Invasion is not the greatest danger; is not the nearest danger; there is a greater danger, and a nearer, from which the Navy alone, however powerful and gallant, could not deliver us.

But what motive can the Germans have for attacking us; and how can they attack us except upon the sea;

Let us consider these two questions. What motive can the Germans have for attacking us?

What motive had they for attacking Denmark in 1864? What motive had they for attacking Austria in 1867? What motive for attacking France in 1870?

Germany is preparing to attack us because we stand in the way of her ambitions. The ambition of the Pan-Germans, who are the party, who are the masters of Germany, is no new thing in world-history; it is a very old thing, as old as it is evil. For the Pan-Germanic ambition is the ambition for empire; the ambition and exploit to dominate and exploit the world. It is the old, old lust for power and glory the old greed for trade and wealth.

World-domination, conquest! That was the dream of Babylon, of Persia, of Greece, of Rome, of Spain, and France, and Russia. It is the dream of Germany today.

What motive can Germany have for attacking Britain? Nearly every German could tell us, if he would. Every public man in America, France, Italy, and Russia could answer the question. We have been told over and over again by speakers and writers in Germany why Germany should and will attack us.

A motive? What has caused most of the great wars recorded in history? Ambition and greed; the last for glory and wealth and power.

Why should Germany attack Britain?

The population of Germany is rapidly increasing. Germany needs Colonies; Britain has taken all the Colonies worth having. Britain holds India, Australia, Canada, New Zealand, Egypt, and the most desirable parts of Africa.

Germany is hungry for trade and for influence in distant seas; Britain holds fortresses and coaling stations all over the earth; Gibraltar, Malta, Cyprus, the West Indies, and many others.

If we glance at a map we find the North Sea exit threatened by Dover and the Mediterranean entrance threatened by Gibraltar.

Germany sorely needs some ports, a greater seaboard. Belgium and Holland would be to her invaluable. How many wars has Russia waged in her efforts to gain access to the sea?

Germany and Britain are keen commercial rivals. How many wars have been caused by commercial jealousy? A year ago the Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, boasting of the growth of German trade, concluded with the following words:—

Germany is gaining more and more ground, and hems in the other countries in an increasing degree. And the natural result of commercial competition is political antagonism.

The National Defence Magazine for October last quotes from an article which appeared in the Standard as far back as July 1907. The following passage is worth repeating here:—

"German policy," writes Regierungs-rat Martin, "does not now aim at incorporating the Baltic provinces of Russia and Russian Poland in the German Empire, nor does it aim at bringing about a closer relation between Germany and Austria-Hungary. German policy does not aim at establishing a German protectorate over European and Asiatic Belgium to the Federal German Empire. Nevertheless, all these changes will take place in our own time, within the next twenty or thirty years, and no one in Germany will be able to arrest the inevitable trend of events. Germany will achieve her destiny without consciously pursuing these aims."

England having realized that Germany will be driven by the course of events to expand in this direction and to that extent, and perceiving the extraordinary progress which the Germans are already making towards a world-supremacy in commerce and politics, has adopted the deliberate policy of hampering German expansion at every possible point.

Germany, declares the author, will not wait till she is attacked or until the anti-German coalition is in a better position to dictate terms to her. She will strike out at the first sign that her interests and her national honor are menaced.

Germany will "strike out" at the first sign of danger. She regards world-domination as her "destiny," and is ready to "strike out" for it. She has an Army of four million men and a fleet second only to ours, and she will "strike out" with these. And Britain is regarded by her as the last barrier to the realization of her destiny.

Why should Germany attack Britain? Because Germany and Britain are commercial and political rivals; because Germany covets the trade, the Colonies, the influence, and the Empire which Britain now possesses; because Germany having defeated France, and made friends with Austria, and having no fear of Russia for some years to come, feels that Britain is her only dangerous opponent.

Finally, and this I would say with emphasis, Germany will attack Britain because she knows herself to be strong, and because she believes that Britain, her rich and influential rival, has grown fat and impotent and would fall an easy victim to a well-planned, resolute and powerful attack.

The policy of Germany is the Bismarckian policy of deliberate and ruthless conquest, with world-domination for its goal. The traditional policy of Britain is the expansion of the Empire and the maintenance of the balance of power in Europe.

It is not for the general good that any single Power should dominate Europe. It would not be well that Britain, or France, or Italy, or Russia should dominate Europe. It is desirable that those nations should preserve their integrity and should remain free to realize the genius of their peoples.

But in the pursuit of a quite unlawful ambition the Pan-Germans menace the honor and liberty of the British, and the French and the Danes, and the Dutch. All Europe is to be Teutonised. We are all to be drilled and schooled and uniformed and taxed by Prussian officials, and the Emperor William II. is to rule us with a rod of iron.

That is the Pan-Germanic dream. That is the ambition which is driving Germany into a war of aggression against this country.

But the British people do not believe it. The British people do not want to bother, they do not want to pay, they do not want to fight, and they regard as cranks and nuisances all who try to warn them of their danger.

The danger is very great and is very near. It is greater and nearer than it was when I began giving warning of it, more than five years ago.

The public will not believe it; let us look at the evidence.

Owing to the price of Anthracite coal having advanced at the mines, and the exceeding high rates of freight, dealers are obliged to advance the price of hard coal here fifty cents per ton on and after September 15th. 5488-9-5M91.
