A SLIGHT DEFECT IN HEARING CAN SPOIL A CHILD'S LIFE

In testing the hearing of a young patient, the physician was whispering certain numbers—3, 7, 5, 6—which the patient was to repeat. He was repeating the numbers correctly but the physician noticed that he had turned his head and was watching the physician's lips. With his eyes to the front, the physician standing behind, the patient was unable to repeat a single number correctly. He admitted that he had not got by and "was getting by" lip reading. His voice lacked resonance. This patient was making a mistake in not using a hearing aid as he would lose much of a lecture, a stage performance, or even a motion picture if he were unable to see the lips of the speaker or actor.

In regard to children, Dr. Horace Newhart, in Laryngoscope, says: "As a result of extensive hearing tests made by modern methods, it is known that a slight defect in hearing in the school child may cause such difficulties as speech defects, slowness in school, behavior problems, and inferiority complex. Further, the frustration, anxiety, and tiredness due to prolonged effort to hear may be partly to blame for disorders of speech."

"Extensive use of audiometers (machines to measure degree of hearing) has disclosed an amazingly high percentage of defective hearing which has been overlooked by the older methods—watch, loud whisper, tuning fork. New methods of testing are four or five times as accurate as older methods and should be used as widely as possible as early discovery of hearing defects is most important."

There is no question but that a younger, naturally as bright as other members of the class, but with a slight defect in hearing, is not only going to miss much which the teacher or others say, but will miss practically all that is said because he cannot make sense of what he does hear. School will come distasteful to him because he gets behind his fellow pupils, and an inferiority complex develops, all being of slight defect of hearing was unnoticed or disregarded.

Fortunately, the testing of eyesight and hearing is now a regular procedure in many schools.

IF A GAS AIR RAID EVER CAME, these bathing beauties would know just what to do. They'd climb into a modern motor car with a conditioned air system and, with their gas masks removed, would drive comfortably to a place of safety. British Air Raid Precaution authorities recently tested the Nash conditioned air system and found it offered full protection if a special gas filter replaced the regular air filter. Why bathing suits? They're worn not only to draw attention to this photograph, but to dramatize the fact that the new automatic "Weather Eye" conditioned air system provides constant summer temperatures within the car, no matter how cold it is outside.

A decided comfort factor in the spring and summer, as well as during the cold weather months, is the "Weather Eye" conditioned air system which is a feature of the Nash series of Nash cars.

It is possible, with the system in operation, to drive along a dusty road or even through a dust-storm without experiencing discomfort or getting "itching" and "stinging." This is due to the fact that there is a constantly changing supply of fresh filtered air within the car at all times, even though all windows are closed.

Air is scooped into the car through the cow's ventilator, at rates ranging from 100 to 800 cubic feet per minute depending of course upon the rate of speed. Before reaching the passengers, the air passes through a chamber, which removes rain. If wet weather prevails outside, it then is thoroughly filtered and distributed to all parts of the car under its own pressure.

The pressure within the car is slightly higher than that outside—so the filtered, incoming air is constantly forcing the used air out of the car at a rapid rate.

During warm weather, the heating element in the "Weather Eye" system can be turned off. However, when it's chilly outside, it is possible automatically to maintain at all times whatever comfort level is desired within the car. The "Weather Eye" sees that this level remains the same regardless of sudden drops in temperature outside.

No Institution For This Widow

LONDON, April 3 (CP)—The Englishwoman's home is her castle, too. Mrs. Maude Crowley, 75-year-old Edmonton widow, proved that when she defected single-handed a court application by the borough council to have her removed to an institution on the grounds of infirmity.

"Nobody puts me away while I remain a strong and healthy woman," Mrs. Crowley indignantly told the court. The court agreed and refused the application. She demanded that the court pay her bus-fare and got it -- to go to a cinema.

INDIA CHECKS FOREIGNERS

NEW DELHI, India, April 4 (CP)—An official bill to enforce registration and constant check of foreigners in India has been introduced in the legislative assembly and referred to a select committee. Contravention will expose a delinquent to one year's maximum imprisonment and a fine of about $350. In the 1931 census about 450,000 people registered themselves and refused the application. She as foreigners.

RIVET'S LONG DEEP

LONDON (CP)—An iron rivet fell 100 feet from a building under construction in Tottenham Court Road, and smashed a motor windshield. The driver, Mrs. Charles R. Wilson, was cut and severely shocked.

"Sleep is the greatest blessing when there is no one who has the right to break into it. A lot of people are willing to improve economic conditions if it takes everything other people have. What the average man thinks of the hit and run auto driver would not look well in a religious publication."
