Rogers, and the Choir will sing suitable Anthems. There will be no Junior Choir practice. The Fireside Group as usual invites all to the Social Hall at the close of the evening service. The Church School will conduct regular classes at the usual hours. A cordial invitation is extended to all to worship in Trinity Church.

BIBLE SOCIETY FELLOWSHIP.—There is to-day a deeper fellowship between the Parent Bible Society and the Dominion Bible Societies than ever before, and this is not all. There is also a deeper fellowship than ever before between ourselves and the American Bible Society. All this may be due in part to our common ancestry and in part to the dangers and sorrows we have shared together through long years of war; but even that is not all. Ancestral voices doubtless call us together; the present struggle binds us together; and, more important still, the hazards of the future will hold us together. Help the Bible Society and its cause through the P. E. I. Auxiliary or branch.

THE BAPTIST CHURCH. — The service of morning worship, 11 A.M. will be conducted by the Rev. I. Judson Levy, B. D., whose sermon will be "No Man Cares for My Soul." The morning anthem will be Farrant's "Lord For Thy Tender Mercy's Sake." Immediately following the service of morning worship the Church School will meet for its period of Bible Study. The Rev. I. Judson Levy will conduct evening worship at 7 P. M. Sermon at the evening worship service will be "I Surrender All." The choir will sing the chorale "Softly and Tenderly." The anthem of the evening will be Turner's "At Even ere the Sun was Set." The music of the day will be under the direction of Mrs. G. Elliott Full organist and director of choir. You are cordially invited to attend all of these services and join in the worship of the day.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Dear Co-Workers across Canada:—
An American soldier in Britain wrote this verse:
So long as there are homes
Where fires burn and there is bread;
So long as there are homes
Where lamps are lit and prayers are said;
Although a people falter
Through the dark and nations grope,
With God Himself, back of these little homes,
We still can hope.

That is what we must feel about our Great Cause. We still can hope, must hope, for final victory, because God Himself is back of our little efforts. You all, with your diversity of gifts and yet with your unity of purpose, are together working for a great salvation for the children and young people of our Dominion, and this thought inspires me night and day.

However, shall we not in the future, more than in the past, encourage and develop the spirit of prayerful and practical fellowship, for critical times lie ahead. It seems to me that we are being driven to realize, more than ever before, our utter and complete dependence upon God Almighty, that is if we are to overthrown this Cursed Dictator, "Beverage Alcohol"

As His Majesty our Beloved King said on Christmas Day, speaking to the Empire of Peace and the Victory gained over another Monster Evil: "It was by the Grace of God we conquered." Thus it must be if our cause is to truly succeed.

Please let me say this to you each one, no member, however inconspicuous and unvocal, however far removed from city centres or large auxiliaries; no one should underate the value of her personal contribution as a praying and practical member. Let no one belittle her God given gifts of spiritual experience, of faith and hope, courage and charity. Believing prayer is a weapon which the weakest of us can use. To have the goodwill, the spiritual backing, the moral support, the quiet neighborly witness and testimony—as well as the motherly influence on home and school and community of good women, these surely are valuable means of support and strength, which our Cause needs, daily

Young women are returning from the armed forces, older women are returning to homelife and duties from war work. We, who have had experience in the Cause of Temperance, must do our utmost to enlist new recruits to our army. It must be done with all wisdom, patience, care and tolerance.

It is for us in love and by every kindly means possible to help the fallen, to protect the weak, to guide the wayward in the paths of purity and peace.

Ours is not merely a Militant and Preventive Organization, it is also a Helping and Healing Union and because of this let us carry the spirit of our Lord and Master into all our work.

Encouraging reports are coming to us from all across Canada. May God bless each one of you in your work for Him.

Yours sincerely in His Service,
Eva Wickson.

ENCOURAGERS

That is a strong word for it means that you and I should pass along some encouragement to others and lend a helping hand in every good work. A lovely story of cooperation comes from the southland. When in Richmond, Va., there was erected a massive statue of their beloved General Lee. The huge monument arrived at the station when some one suggested it should be put in place only by loving hands. Three great trucks were fastened together and it was placed on them. A cable a block long was attached, the writer says.

There was an ex-governor of the state, millionairgs, rich men, poor men, fat and lean men black men and white men small boys, ragged pickanninies school girls chewing gum, fashionable ladies pretending to pull. Amid laughter and tears, songs and cheers, the statue was placed where it stands today. That great General sitting on his noted horse "Traveller" looking toward his well loved southland. Veterans in blue and gray were there and grudges were forgotten. That rope was cut in small bits and each who pulled little or much received a piece as a souvenir and everywhere that piece of hemp would be pulled out with the comment next day "I had hold of the rope yesterday did you? Good!" Old wrongs were righted. Old feuds forgiven. New aims bound men together

How many of you readers are holding the rope that needs every Canadian to help pull the load? Are you helping?

"Prohibition does not always prohibit, neither does civilization always civilize, nor education educate, nor Christianity Christianize. But they are God's levers by which we can lift—."

Frances Willard

BIBLE LESSONS—LEADERS AND DOERS

Exodus 18:14; 19 to 22....1st Timothy 1-10.

Both in the Old and New Testaments we read in outlines the qualifications needed for leadership—outlined because conditions as well as natural abilities differ but if success is to be gained standards must be maintained. The essentials set in Exodus are able, true men, God fearing, haters of covetousness. Those chosen in Acts were honest, full of faith, wise, while in Timothy his requirements are sober vigilant, hospitable, peaceable not covetous, who can rule well and is well thought of by his neighbors. The tests given Moses are not countermanded but emphasized by the apostles; stress being laid on our threefold requirements duty to God, obedience, and faith, and to man honesty of purpose, trained ability, being of good report.

Zeal is needed but it must be ever tempered by wisdom. Ability must be taught and trained, while honesty must control in all things.

It is not enough to know our work but we must know the opinions of outsiders to explain away their difficulties and to lead them to a better understanding. Leaders need fearlessness without arrogance, decision attuned by the harmony of knowledge, winsomeness without fawning, love without selfseeking. All may be summed up in loving God, our cause and our fellowmen, having gentleness, meekness, patience and charity, for "Love is the fulfilling of the law."

Our Lord possessed all fulness of grace but He chose as leaders men of varied gifts....some seemingly without great gifts....All were needed.

Never must we forget that underlying our lives and all their activities is a Divine purpose. If we have placed our all in His hands He will work His will for us but we must have a willing mind either to lead or follow.

"The Christian must not sit by and let the fires of intemperance burn on. All this must be stopped and we are the Christ-men and the Christ-women to stop it, or else we are pitiable dreamers and deluded professors of what we do not believe"

Frances Willard

For the first time in recent years a First Lady attended opening night at the Metropolitan Opera House. Opening night at the Metropolitan is an event of great glamour. The socially prominent are there in array of ermine, silk and jewels. The millions who, before their radios, thrill at the music of opera do not share in the magnificence of the setting. Neither are they aware that there is a spacious bar room (the only bar in a New York Theater) where many of the ticket holders among the 400 spend the intermissions. Newsweek for December 10, commenting that the "Met Greets First Night and Peace With Pomp," Champaign and Wagner," reports that preceding the opera Mrs. Harry Truman and daughter, Margaret, were guests of the exclusive Metropolitan Club". When they were offered cocktails," says Newsweek, "The Trumans stunned their hosts by asking for orange juice, an item which had not been included in the elaborate dinner." Here is something new in "High society." Here is moral courage in upholding personal standards which has not been conspicuous, of late, in families which live under the white light of publicity. —Christian-Evangelist.

Drink and Insanity

"The mental doctor sees the very worst that alcohol can do. No bodily disease, no family ruin, no social catastrophe is so bad as the destruction of the mind. It is certain that for every man in whom excessive drinking causes absolute insanity, there are twenty in whom it injures the brain, blunts the moral sense, and lessens the capacity for work in lesser degrees." —Dr. Clouston, Royal Edinburgh Asylum.

BANISH BRONCHITIS COLDS—COUGHS!
It's when sickness comes at night—when you are far from the Druggist—that's the time you need Nerviline most. Many experienced mothers are never without Nerviline. One of the children may have Toothache, a Chest Cold or Muscular Pain. Without Nerviline—maybe a sleepless night for the entire household—but with Nerviline the pain and distress may be controlled. It may be Earache, perhaps a Stiff Neck, or one of the kiddies Coughing. Just think of the quick relief that Nerviline may give! A vigorous rubbing with this soothing liniment can abort many a minor illness. While it is on your mind now, send for a 35c bottle of Nerviline.

SHOPPING AROUND

We have become a nation of critical buyers. Any tradesman will tell you that. People nowadays are a lot more value-conscious than formerly. They know their own minds more and are not easily swayed by glib salesmanship or fancy presentation. There may still be one born every minute but the majority of us are smartening up. We know what we want and insist on getting it — or else!

This trend towards discriminate buying is welcome to all who have the genuine goods to sell. We in the life insurance business welcome it. No longer does the customer want just "a policy". He knows that there are many plans designed for different circumstances, so he intelligently "shops around" among the various plans before deciding which to buy. In this he has the assistance of the shopkeeper — the agent — whose sole aim is to sell only the plan that best suits the interests of the individual customer.

And this is where I come in. Representing the foremost life company in Canada, I know I can help you. Please give me a call. There's no obligation.

The Second Mrs. Draper

By Noel Pierce

CHAPTER VI

Two o'clock was three o'clock after a time in which it seemed to Kitty that all the new flowers must have moved up an inch. And then with dragging minutes it was four. Dry-throated with waiting, she had no heart for tea. Every crunch of pebble in the driveway made her turn her head to the window where, down the avenue of tall wineglass elms, Rupert's boy would come. He had announced no train in his wire to his father. That had shaken them. Just "Arrive late Wednesday." Restless, hoping Rupert would come back from the office in time, she moved up the broad stairway to the third floor wing and opened the door. Would this be a pleasant room, or a place in which he could escape from them both? No touch of hers, to antagonize him. Just the white stock and blue cornflowers on the table by his books, and the miniature of his mother. Soundlessly she closed the door.

Below stairs Mrs. Grimble and Cook was fashioning a dinner such as Kitty had once served to a potentate of a small but royal silver for a party in his honor, house. Angele was busy polishing What more, what more but wait? It struck Kitty again that never in her life had all her senses come so alive to charm a smile to a man's mouth as hers now, for Rupert's son. Like some Indian lore her ears were trained to hear a footstep fall upon the ground, a shadow on the door "Jim and I are like spokes of the same wheel. He has only to look at you to be won," Rupert's reassuring voice. Yet even when he said that Kitty had known she stood alone in this crisis. All their help, all their hope was so much buzzing in the ears of unalterable nature. There was no guessing upon what path destiny would presently lead them! She had tried in discussing his son's return, to explain her theories to Rupert last night.

"Human relationships aren't like a game of Chess, Rupert. You can plan all the moves you like beforehand, and still be stalemated."

"King takes Queen," he had laughed, and kissed her.

"Seriously, Rupert. You puzzle and ponder over friends, enemies, mistakes, love, hate. You want the why and wherefore, question and answer. Your son comes home to meet a strange woman you've taken for wife and...."

"And God bless her. And my luck, too," he had laughed.

Kitty put a cool hand over his mouth. "I mean this. What's the good of theorizing about the outcome of events like that?"

"Because, my darling, it's basic and sane for men and women to solve the problems of their natures so they can live together under one roof. You and Jim and me."

"Yes, I suppose people must," she said. "Or be too frightened or too glorified by the other alternative."

Rupert's puzzled voice, "What is the other alternative, Kitty?"

She had fixed her eyes on a star above the moving ocean's rim and said slowly, "The communion of a man and a woman who speak to each other without any words. The beauty of that, Rupert, the complete acceptance of that, when it happens."

Her hand went out to his, and the pressure comforted him. It told him that no man could cross their doorstep and have her eyes say, "I love you." Not ever again in her life. And Rupert was appeased. Let her discuss all the modern beliefs she wanted to! They were safe!

"Are you afraid of loneliness?" she said.

Ah, he'd had a good share of it. "Yes."

"Dear Rupert, I like you for that. Because, really, we're all afraid of so many things."

He had gone over then and taken her in his arms. After a while she whispered, still thinking.

"All the same, just once it would be splendid to be a rebel! Just once I should like to go it alone!" Then she had laughed lightly and added, "My life, or my heart, for my consequences!"

Again, to reassure him against the — to him — strange import of her words, she kissed his eyes. Rupert humored her.

"But the rest of us mortals, Kitty. Would you like us all to disintegrate separately with each passionate impulse?"

"Yes," she said slowly. "So long as one doesn't hurt other people."

"Did you ever know anyone, Kitty, who did grab the first passionate impulse that came along? And have it? And be a rebel in the teeth of his world?"

"One man," she said. A little intake of breath belied her calm. Rupert grew cold. Was he ever going to get over the past of Kitty's life, and the fact of men who had been her lovers?

"What happened to him?"

"He shot himself," she whispered. "He couldn't take defeat."

All the blood beat back into Rupert with thundering gladness because he knew that whether or not a man had shot himself for Kitty, it was because she had denied him her love.

Kitty had lain awake a long time. She thought of Godfrey whose bullet had been furious answer to her "No." Interludes came flooding back to her, after her divorce from Lawrence. Her life had been a jittering jingle then, danced to wandering feet. Not daring to look too far down the years, nor too far back. Rotten Row, balls at Lansdowne House, a brilliant London winter, Godfrey at the Manor House party in Totteridge, Godfrey lifting his glass to her at the Embassy Club, Godfrey at the Henley Regatta, at Lord's with the Oxford blue of his eyes. The brilliancy of his tennis...

Godfrey led them all, that winter—his charm, the dash and sting of his marvelous game, packed galleries, flattery, adulation from crowned heads. But his eyes were full on her, his feet leading to her in the patio when the games were done. And then that night before the finals. When he stood next to the top, with one more match to win against a famous opponent. And like a conqueror, sure of his strategy before the battle, he had asked for her love and been denied. The horror of that next day, the final match at Beaulieu. Godfrey, white as paper. His eyes sullen and sunk away from the box where she sat watching him. The wild crash of his mastery. All coordination bleeding away like an open vein. The groans from the excited crowd. The boos as he tore in and fouled again and flung his racket down, broken another, slammed at the net, only to be passed over and over. The last blazing fore-court shot of his conqueror, and the sun went down. Godfrey had rushed off the court, and she lost him. Searching everywhere, the Casino, the Club, the Promenade, but he was gone. And in the morning Angele bending over her, with the fatal announcement.. All the old shock, the wild feeling of guilt had rushed over Kitty again.
